A. Recent Trends and Patterns in FCPA Enforcement

Last year, we noted that 2012 had been “a fairly slow time” in terms of corporate enforcement actions, with twelve enforcement actions against corporations. 2013 was slower still, with only nine corporate enforcement actions. There was a steep increase in corporate fines, however, and enforcement against individuals saw a marked increase, from five in 2012 to sixteen in 2013—eight of whom pleaded guilty.

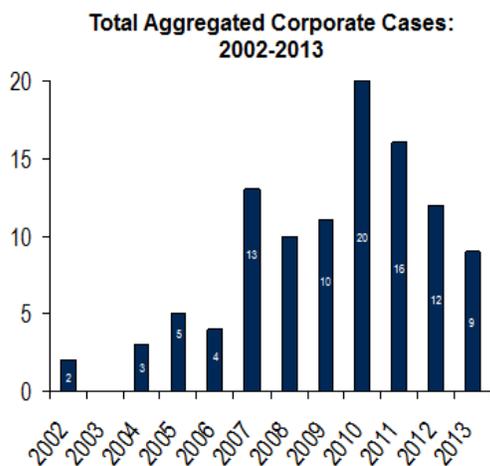

Among the highlights:

- Over $720 million in penalties in 2013, and the average penalties ($80 million) and the adjusted average ($28 million) were both considerably up from previous years;
- Significant number of new cases against individuals;
- Surge in “hybrid” monitors, with an independent monitor’s term of 18 months followed by 18 months of self-monitoring;
- Continued aggressive theories of jurisdiction and parent-subsiary liability; and
- Adoption of deferred prosecution agreements in the U.K., albeit with substantially more judicial involvement than in the U.S.

Enforcement Actions and Strategies

Statistics

In 2013, the government brought nine enforcement actions against corporations: Philips, Parker Drilling, Ralph Lauren, Total, Diebold, Stryker, Weatherford, Bilfinger, and Archer Daniels Midland (ADM).

This is the lowest number in the past seven years, which had seen annual totals averaging thirteen cases per year since 2007. Most of these cases were coordinated actions brought by both the SEC and the DOJ, with only two independent actions brought by the SEC (Philips and Stryker) and one from the DOJ (Bilfinger). It is difficult to say whether the lower rate of corporate enforcement is a trend, in spite of the relatively low twelve corporate enforcement actions in the prior year: although a substantial number of companies have announced new investigations or reserves for enforcement fines in recent years, there have only been a handful of publicly announced declinations. The regulators, for their part, have swept aside any suggestions of waning enforcement, stating that both the DOJ and the SEC have a substantial pipeline of FCPA cases awaiting announcement.

In contrast with the lower number of corporate matters, the year saw a surge in individual actions, with twelve charged in 2013. In addition, four individual actions brought in 2012 were unsealed in 2013 (thus we have included them in our statistics for 2013). Only five of these individual actions were connected with previous enforcement actions: Jald Jensen, Bernd Kowalewski, Neal Uhl, and Peter Dubois

(incidentally, the group of individuals whose filings were belated unsealed in 2013) were all affiliated with

Bizjet, which settled with the DOJ in 2012; and Alain Riedo was a Swiss-national executive at Maxwell Technologies, which settled with the DOJ and SEC in 2012. The remaining eleven fell into two group actions, and one rather unique freestanding action: Lawrence Hoskins, Frederic Pierucci, William Pomponi, and David Rothschild were employed by and participated in a scheme at French company Alstom SA (which has not been subject to an enforcement action—yet), while Iuri Rodolfo Bethancourt, Tomas Alberto Bethancourt Clarke, Jose Alejandro Hurtado, Haydee Leticia Pabon, Maria de los Angeles de Hernandez Gonzalez, and Ernesto Lujan allegedly participated in a scheme involving a New York broker-dealer called Direct Access Partners, LLC. Among the broker-dealer defendants, Gonzalez was a Venezuelan government official charged not with FCPA bribery but with money laundering and Travel Act violations for accepting bribes. The final individual action was an obstruction of justice case against Frederic Cilins, a French national who allegedly interfered in a government investigation into a mining company’s potential violations of the FCPA in Guinea. Press reports indicate that the mining company is Beny Steinmetz Group Resources (BSGR), which has denied any wrongdoing but is under investigation in several countries, including Switzerland.

On the penalties side, the corporate penalties assessed in 2013 were markedly higher than in 2012 and rebounded to levels last seen in 2010. Altogether, the government collected $720,668,902 in financial penalties (fines, DPA/NPA penalties, disgorgement, and prejudgment interest) from corporations in 2013. This equates to an average of $80 million per corporation, with an exceptionally large range of $1.6 million (Ralph Lauren) to $152.79 million (Weatherford) and $398.2 million (Total). Weatherford and Total's penalties are, each respectively, over three times that of any of the other companies. Weatherford's high fines appear to stem from the company's widespread bribery schemes and particularly "anemic" compliance systems and controls, as well as its initial failure to cooperate with the authorities. Total engaged in a bribery scheme that spanned a decade and resulted in over $150 million in profits, resulting in the second highest disgorgement in FCPA enforcement history. Meanwhile, Ralph Lauren's low fines were purportedly the result of the "exceptional" self-reporting, cooperation, and remediation that led to an unprecedented double-NPA, although the isolated nature of the bribes (and resulting low disgorgement) likely factored in as well. When we remove those three outliers, the average is $28 million. This is in line with the averages calculated in recent years using the same criteria ($17.7 million in 2012, $22.1 million in 2011).

Individuals Charged: 2002-2013

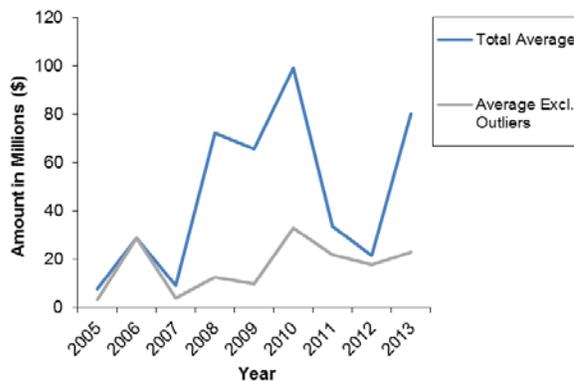

A. Recent Trends and Patterns in FCPA Enforcement

Total Criminal and Civil Fines Imposed on Corporations: 2002-2013

Corporate Penalties: Total Average vs. Average Excluding Outliers

On the individuals side, Riedo is a fugitive and two others, Cilins and Alstom executive Pomponi, are each pending trial. Two of the Alstom defendants, Rothschild and Pierucci, have pleaded guilty, while the status of the fourth Alstom defendant Hoskins is yet unclear. Similarly among the Bizjet defendants, the status is unclear for two defendants (Jensen and Kowalewski) while two pleaded guilty (Uhl and DuBois). Uhl and DuBois were each sentenced to 60 months' probation and 8 months' home detention, with a $10,100 fine imposed on Uhl and a $159,950 fine imposed on DuBois. Finally, all four of the broker-dealer defendants in the DOJ proceedings (Clarke Bethancourt, Hurtado, Gonzalez, and Lujan) have pleaded guilty, with sentencings scheduled for 2014. The parallel civil proceedings (with additional defendants Bethancourt and Pabon) were stayed pending resolution of the criminal case, and the stay had not been lifted as of December 2013.

In addition to the relative profusion of new individual enforcement, there were sentencings and other case developments in numerous pending actions. After a slew of guilty pleas last year, three CCI defendants were sentenced: Flavio Ricotti to time served and Mario Covino and Richard Morlok to three years' probation and three years' home confinement. The CCI cases are thus fully resolved, save for Korean national Han Yong Kim, whose request to make a "special appearance" was denied in June.

Meanwhile, in the case against the Siemens executives, the DOJ's cases appear to be stalled, with none of the defendants choosing to come to the U.S. to answer charges and apparently no success thus far in obtaining extradition of them. On the other hand, the SEC civil enforcement action seems close to being resolved, albeit in some strange and uneven ways. Herbert Steffen's motion to dismiss was granted for lack of jurisdiction and the SEC voluntarily dismissed all claims against Carlos Sergi, while Uriel Sharef settled with the SEC for a $275,000 civil penalty—the second-highest penalty assessed against an individual in an FCPA case. The SEC indicated that it has reached an agreement-in-principle to settle claims against Andres Truppel, and has requested that the court enter default judgments against Stephan Signer and Ulrich Bock.

In contrast, the three Magyar Telekom executives charged by the SEC, Elek Straub, Andras Balogh, and Tamas Morvai, are apparently proceeding to trial and the case has now entered the pretrial discovery phase, after the defendants' motions to dismiss were denied in February 2013. Similarly, the Noble executives James Ruehlen and Mark Jackson are also on their way to trial; after considerable pretrial litigation (discussed below) regarding the statute of limitation and other issues resulting in the SEC filing an amended complaint in March 2013, Ruehlen and Jackson filed answers on April 2013, denying most of the SEC's allegations.

In yet another case with multiple individual defendants, Haiti Telecom, the legal battles continue: briefs were filed in the appeal of Jean Rene Duperval, while oral arguments were held in the appeal of Joel Esquenazi and Carlos Rodriguez. Three of the remaining defendants (Washington Vasconez Cruz, Amadeus Richers, and Cecilia Zurita) have been classified as fugitives, and Marguerite Grandison's case was closed when she entered into an eighteen-month diversion program.

Finally, the year also saw resolutions from the rather distant past, with Thomas Farrell, Clayton Lewis, and Hans Bodmer (all charged in 2003) each sentenced to time served, and Paul Novak (charged in 2008) sentenced to fifteen months in prison and a $1 million fine. In addition, Frederic Bourke's (charged in 2005) long legal journey finally came to an end—after two unsuccessful appeals of his original 2009 conviction, the United States Supreme Court refused to hear his case. He began his prison sentence of one year and one day in May 2013.

Types of Settlements

As in the past, nearly all of the criminal corporate resolutions were in the form of deferred or non-prosecution agreements, with only two corporations pleading guilty (respectively, ADM subsidiary Alfred C. Toepfer International (Ukraine) Ltd. and Weatherford subsidiary Weatherford Services Ltd.). The civil corporate resolutions took the form of administrative cease-and-desist orders and civil settlements, with one notable exception—the SEC's first-ever FCPA-related non-prosecution agreement with a company (Ralph Lauren). As we noted last year, however, the government has not been clear as to the factors that influence the type of settlement, and unfortunately, the Ralph Lauren double-NPA does not supply any meaningful clarity. Both the SEC and DOJ credited Ralph Lauren's prompt self-reporting, remedial measures, and "extensive, thorough, real-time cooperation," including measures such as revising and enhancing compliance policies and conducting a world-wide risk assessment. The SEC also noted that Ralph Lauren ceased retail operations in Argentina, the site of the alleged bribes. Yet, it is difficult to distinguish these factors from those set out by the SEC (albeit in a less effusive manner) in Philips, a case that predated Ralph Lauren: self-reporting, cooperation, and "significant remedial measures" but Philips was subject to an administrative cease-and-desist order. Moreover, as we have noted before, although we, too, would like to get NPAs rather than DPAs for our clients, the practical consequences are still the same—allegations of wrongdoing (with admissions in DOJ cases), penalties, monitoring or reporting, tolling of the statute of limitations, limits on public statements, and bad publicity.

Interestingly, subsequent to the Ralph Lauren NPAs, nearly every enforcement action contained allegations of at least one notable deficiency in the self-reporting/cooperation/remediation process: Diebold only undertook "some" remedial measures that were "not sufficient to address and reduce the risk of occurrence" (which led to the decision to impose a monitor); Stryker, Weatherford, and Bilfinger did not self-report; Weatherford engaged in misconduct during the SEC's investigation; and Bilfinger's cooperation came "at a late date." The ADM settlement documents did not contain overt references to any shortcomings in the self-reporting company's cooperation or remediation, but while the parent company was granted an NPA, it still had to settle civil charges by the SEC and its subsidiary pleaded guilty to criminal charges.

Elements of Settlements

Monitors. Independent compliance monitors made a comeback in 2013, albeit in the hybrid form we have seen in recent years, in which the monitor's term is only eighteen months followed by eighteen months of self-reporting. Out of seven DOJ actions, monitors were imposed on four companies: hybrid monitors for Diebold, Weatherford, and Bilfinger, and a full three-year monitor for Total. Consistent with the DOJ's approach in other recent cases against foreign companies, the DPA specifies that the monitor is to be a French national. Parker Drilling, Ralph Lauren, and ADM agreed to self-report for the duration of their respective settlement agreements.

We have previously noted the lack of clarity in what factors lead to an independent compliance monitor. The year's enforcement actions, however, showed a measure of transparency in the government's reasoning, which seemed to place weight on the company's ability to remediate its past wrongdoing. For example, in the DPA with Diebold, the DOJ stated that Diebold's remediation was "not sufficient to address and reduce the risk of recurrence of the Company's misconduct and warrants the retention of an independent corporate monitor." In contrast, the DPA with Parker Drilling (which was allowed to self-monitor) gave a long list of examples of the company's "extensive" remediation. As to the other actions, it seems reasonable that Ralph Lauren would not have a monitor, given the double-NPA and the smaller scope of the alleged scheme. It seems equally reasonable for Total to have a monitor, given the severity of its offense and the total lack of any references to remediation in its DPA. In contrast,

A. Recent Trends and Patterns in FCPA Enforcement

Weatherford's DPA gives a long list of the “extensive” remediation the company undertook, but it also mentions the “extent and pervasiveness of the Company’s criminal conduct,” which may have tipped the balance toward a monitorship. The Bilfinger DPA gives only a general and brief description of cooperation and remediation, but it does note that Bilfinger’s cooperation came “at a late date.”

Discount. In prior years, companies have typically received discounts from the Sentencing Guidelines as a reward for their cooperation and settlement. Where no discounts were granted, the fines would generally be at the very bottom of the range set by the Sentencing Guidelines. In 2013, however, both Total and Bilfinger received fines that were higher than the bottom of the Sentencing Guidelines range, Weatherford's fine was squarely at the bottom of the range, and only three companies received discounts: Diebold (30%), ADM Ukraine (30%), and Parker Drilling (20%). ADM Ukraine received an additional deduction of $1,338,387 to account for a fine imposed by German authorities on ADM Ukraine's direct parent company, Alfred C. Toepfer International GmbH. Such unusual circumstances aside, the factors that affected the imposition of monitors—remediation, cooperation, and severity of the offense—seem to also affected the discount. Foreign corporations appear to be getting the short end of the stick (Diebold, Parker Drilling, ADM, and Ralph Lauren are all U.S. companies), but this is likely because non-U.S. companies may not be as willing to cooperate with U.S. government authorities nor, perhaps, have the requisite savvy to navigate the process of cooperating with an overseas regulator.

Approval of Settlements. SEC civil settlements against companies for FCPA violations tend to be approved within thirty days, but, as we noted last year, U.S. District Judge Richard Leon refused to “rubber stamp” two pending settlements: Tyco (settlement agreement signed in 2012) and IBM (settlement agreement signed in 2011). In doing so, he stated that he was “increasingly concerned” by the SEC’s settlement policies, and he refused to approve the deal with IBM unless the company agreed to file reports to the court about its compliance program and any potential FCPA violations. IBM, backed by the SEC, had argued that such reporting would be too burdensome, but the company ultimately agreed to modified reporting and Judge Leon approved the settlement in July 2013. Under the new terms of the settlement, IBM is required to: 1) file annual reports to the court and SEC describing its anticorruption compliance programs; 2) immediately report any reasonable likelihood of FCPA violations; and 3) report within 60 days of learning that it is subject to any criminal or civil probe or enforcement proceeding. Tyco's settlement, which had already included reporting requirements, received approval in June 2013.

Judge Leon’s intervention, though unusual, was not particularly controversial given that court approval is part and parcel of a civil settlement. DPAs, on the other hand, have been viewed as being exempt from judicial scrutiny—until July 2013, when Judge John Gleeson of the Eastern District of New York published a lengthy written opinion in U.S. v. HSBC Bank USA holding that a court has authority to approve and oversee the implementation of a DPA pursuant to its “supervisory power.”

Judge Gleeson, acknowledging that his was a “novel” theory, noted the importance of the supervisory power in “preserv[ing] the judicial process from contamination,” and reasoned that, since the parties “have chosen to implicate the Court in their resolution of this matter,” the court would not be a “potted plant.” Nonetheless, Judge Gleeson recognized the “significant deference” the court owed to the government and approved the DPA “without hesitation.” However, in a similar vein to Judge Leon’s reporting requirements, he ordered the government and HSBC to file quarterly reports keeping the court apprised of all significant developments in the implementation of the DPA. Judge Gleeson also clearly distinguished DPAs from NPAs, noting that the latter is “not the business of the courts” as it falls within the government’s “absolute discretion to decide not to prosecute.”

While not an FCPA case, the HSBC USA case does raise the question of whether courts will exercise such authority in overseeing and approving DPAs in future FCPA enforcement actions. Given Judge Gleeson’s own discussion of DPAs vs. NPAs—and the functional equivalent of the two in terms of admissions, penalties, and supervision—the risk that a court may examine the merits (and factual predicates) of a proposed DPA may well cause the DOJ to be more willing to proceed on the NPA path in the future.

Perennial Statutory Issues

Jurisdiction

The enforcement actions in 2013 were well within established limits, with the possible exception of the Bilfinger matter. In December, the DOJ charged the German company with conspiring to violate and violating the FCPA under sections 78dd-1 (applying to “issuers”) and 78dd-2 (applying to “domestic concerns”) by conspiring with Willbros Group, Inc. (a U.S. issuer) and its foreign subsidiaries (U.S. domestic concerns) to pay bribes to Nigerian government officials for contracts in Nigeria. Sections 78dd-1 and 78dd-2 apply to officers, directors, employees, and agents, but there were no allegations that Bilfinger, a company wholly separate from Willbros, was an agent of Willbros or its subsidiaries. The information simply alleges that Bilfinger, “together with Willbros Group Inc., an issuer under the FCPA, Willbros International Inc., a domestic concern under the FCPA, and their employees and agents, who were domestic concerns under the FCPA,” violated the substantive anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA. It is therefore unclear whether jurisdiction was based on aiding and abetting the Willbros entities or Bilfinger’s conspiracy relationship with the Willbros entities. The latter would likely refer to liability under Pinkerton v. U.S., 328 U.S. 640 (1946); namely, “being liable for the reasonably foreseeable substantive FCPA crimes committed by a co-conspirator in furtherance of a conspiracy.” The government has made clear, through the 2012 FCPA Guide and otherwise, that it can and will assert jurisdiction over foreign defendants on aiding and abetting liability and Pinkerton conspiracy liability. However, one might question why such theories were used in the Bilfinger matter, given the circumstances of the case. Based on the allegations, it appears that Bilfinger could have been charged under 78dd-3, which applies to “other persons” that commit an act in furtherance of a bribe “while in the territory of the U.S.,” because the DOJ did introduce a territorial nexus by alleging that an unnamed

A. Recent Trends and Patterns in FCPA Enforcement

Bilfinger employee flew from Houston to Boston to discuss the scheme and that an unidentified individual/entity wired funds related to the scheme from Houston to Germany.¹

Meanwhile, 2013 saw two judicial decisions discussing the scope of the FCPA's jurisdiction, with similar analyses but opposite outcomes.

SEC v. Straub, et al.

In late 2011, the SEC sued three former employees at Magyar Telekom Plc (Elek Straub, Andras Balogh, and Tamas Morvai, all Hungarian citizens) for violations of the FCPA. The defendants filed a motion to dismiss partly based on jurisdiction grounds. While much of the subsequent briefing focused on whether the defendants had the requisite minimum contacts with the United States to establish personal jurisdiction, the defendants also argued that the SEC's claim was insufficient for failure to meet the FCPA's territorial jurisdiction requirement for the anti-bribery counts.

The sole territorial nexus alleged by the SEC against the Magyar executives was that one defendant, located in Hungary, sent and received email messages to and from "representatives of the Greek intermediary" in furtherance of the bribery scheme "from locations outside the United States but [] routed through and/or stored on network servers located within the United States." The Magyar defendants argued that the SEC had failed to allege that they "personally knew that their emails would be 'routed through and/or stored' on servers within the United States," and therefore had failed to state a claim under the anti-bribery provision. In February, Judge Richard Sullivan of the Southern District of New York denied the defendants' motion, describing the issue of "whether § 78dd-1(a) requires that a defendant intend to use the mails or any means or instrumentality of interstate commerce" as a "matter of first impression in the FCPA context." Judge Sullivan concluded, however, based on analysis of the statute itself, legislative history, and case law on similarly worded statutes, that "defendants need not have formed the particularized mens rea with respect to the instrumentalities of commerce," and thus that the SEC had sufficiently pled that the defendants had "used the means or instrumentalities of interstate commerce, pursuant to the FCPA." In his opinion, Judge Sullivan first analyzed the placement of the word "corruptly" in section 78dd-a(a) as meant to modify the "offer, payment, promise to pay, or authorization of the payment of any money . . . or . . . anything of value" that follows in the text of the statute. He described the section as "not a model of precision in legislative drafting," however, so he also looked to legislative history, "[b]ecause the plain language of the provision is ambiguous, even when read in context and after applying traditional canons of statutory construction" Judge Sullivan then concluded that, "although Congress intended to make an 'intent' or mens rea requirement for the underlying bribery, it expressed no corresponding intent to make such a requirement for the 'make use of . . . any means or instrumentality of interstate commerce' element."² In further support of his interpretation, Judge Sullivan observed that the language of section 78dd-1(a) is similar to other statutes, such as mail and wire fraud and money laundering statutes, for which courts have held that the use of interstate commerce in furtherance of a violation is a jurisdictional element of those offenses.³

² Judge Sullivan noted, however, that this was "not to say that a defendant need know that he is violating the FCPA by bribing an official—only that he intends to wrongfully influence that official."

A. Recent Trends and Patterns in FCPA Enforcement

With respect to the question of personal jurisdiction, Judge Sullivan observed that the “minimum contacts” standard was met where, during and prior to the alleged violations, Magyar’s securities were publicly traded and registered with the SEC, such that defendants “knew or had reason to know that any false or misleading financial reports would be given to prospective American purchasers of those securities.” He pointed in particular to the allegations that the defendants signed false representation letters related to Magyar’s reporting to the SEC. As such, Judge Sullivan concluded, “it is not only that Magyar traded securities through ADRs listed on the NYSE that satisfies the minimum contacts standard but also that Defendants allegedly engaged in a cover-up through their statements to Magyar’s auditors knowing that the company traded ADRs on an American exchange, and that prospective purchasers would likely be influenced by any false financial statements and filings.” On that basis, he had “little trouble” inferring that the defendants intended to cause an injury in the United States, even if doing so was not their primary intention.⁴ Judge Sullivan also noted that exercise of personal jurisdiction was not unreasonable as the defendants had not “made a particular showing that the burden on them [to defend the action in the United States] would be ‘severe’ or ‘gravely difficult.’” He concluded by pointing out that the federal courts had a strong interest in litigating the case and that the defendants could “potentially evade liability altogether” if the SEC were not able to enforce the FCPA against the defendants in the United States.

SEC v. Sharef, et al.

Also in 2011, the SEC charged seven former executives of Siemens Aktiengesellschaft and its regional company in Argentina, Siemens S.A., Uriel Sharef, Ulrich Bock, Carlos Sergi, Stephan Signer, Herbert Steffen, Andres Truppel, and Bernd Regendantz, of violating the FCPA by engaging in a bribery scheme to retain a government contract to produce national identity cards for Argentine citizens, in which some payments were processed through U.S. bank accounts. Three years earlier, in 2008, Siemens had settled with the SEC in connection with the same scheme. (Similarly, Siemens settled with the DOJ, and several years later the DOJ charged many of the same executives as the SEC but none have appeared in the U.S. to answer the criminal charges.)

Defendant Steffen, a German citizen, filed a motion to dismiss the action on personal jurisdiction grounds, which Judge Shira Scheindlin of the Southern District of New York granted in February 2013, within weeks of Judge Sullivan’s decision in the Magyar executives case.⁵ In granting Steffen’s motion, Judge Scheindlin concluded that the SEC had failed to establish the requisite minimum contacts between him and the United States, finding that his actions were “far too attenuated from the resulting harm.” In distinguishing the decision from that in Straub, Judge Scheindlin opined that the “exercise of jurisdiction over foreign defendants based on the effect of their conduct on SEC filings is in need of a limiting principle. . . . If this court were to hold that Steffen’s support for the bribery scheme satisfied the minimum contacts analysis, even though he neither authorized the bribe, nor directed the cover-up, much less played any role in the falsified filings, minimum contacts would be boundless.” Judge Scheindlin further concluded that exercise of jurisdiction over Steffen would not be reasonable, given his “lack of geographic ties to the United States, his age [74], his poor proficiency in English, and the forum’s diminished interest in adjudicating the matter,” where the SEC and DOJ had obtained “comprehensive remedies against Siemens” and an individual action against Steffen had been resolved in Germany.

⁴ The defendants subsequently moved for leave to file an interlocutory appeal, which the Court denied, finding that the case did not present the sort of “exceptional circumstances” that would justify it.

A. Recent Trends and Patterns in FCPA Enforcement

Despite the different outcomes, the decisions in the two cases are consistent in their interpretation of the requirement of minimum contacts to establish personal jurisdiction in civil enforcement actions. Both Judge Sullivan and Judge Scheindlin were careful to note that their decisions regarding personal jurisdiction turned on the facts of each case, specifically, the extent to which each defendant directed the alleged activity to the United States. In addition to Judge Scheindlin’s limitations noted above, for his part, Judge Sullivan cautioned that his ruling did not “create a per se rule regarding employees of an issuer,” but rather was the result of a “fact-based inquiry—namely, an analysis of the SEC’s specific allegations regarding the Defendants’ bribery scheme, Defendants’ falsification of Magyar’s books and records, and Defendants’ personal involvement in making representations and sub-representations with respect to and in anticipation of Magyar’s SEC filings.”

Parent/Subsidiary Liability

We have previously highlighted the SEC’s disconcerting practice of charging parent companies with anti-bribery violations based on the corrupt payments of their subsidiaries, even when the facts alleged in the pleadings do not establish any parental involvement in bribery. In the Ralph Lauren case, both the SEC and DOJ took an even larger leap, by seemingly imposing apparently strict criminal and civil liability on a parent company for the corrupt acts of its subsidiary. Ralph Lauren’s Argentine subsidiary paid bribes to customs officials authorized by Ralph Lauren Argentina’s general manager to clear goods through customs over a four-year period. Both agencies characterized the general manager as Ralph Lauren’s “agent,” based solely on his position as general manager of the subsidiary and the fact that Ralph Lauren had appointed him to that position. The pleadings cursorily state that the manager had been hired by Ralph Lauren to manage the business of the Argentine subsidiary and “thus was an employee and agent of an issuer, as that term is used in the FCPA.” Given that the manager was also an employee and officer of the subsidiary in question, we view this as an extremely tenuous basis for parent liability.

⁵ Defendants Bernd Regendantz and Uriel Sharef settled with the SEC for $40,000 and $275,000, respectively. The action was dismissed as to defendant Carlos Sergi and final judgments as to the remaining defendants are pending.

A. Recent Trends and Patterns in FCPA Enforcement

Neither agency, moreover, included any allegation of any authorization, direction, or control by RLC of its subsidiary's corrupt conduct, or even its knowledge of such conduct.

The theoretical underpinnings of this unprecedented and aggressive expansion of corporate liability were foreshadowed in the 2012 FCPA Guide. Although the government confirmed that a parent's "authorization, direction, and control" of the subsidiary's specific corrupt conduct remains one basis for liability, it also enunciated a much broader and potentially unlimited pure agency theory, the fundamental characteristic of which is general control. Accordingly, DOJ and SEC warned that they will evaluate the parent's control—including the parent's knowledge and direction of the subsidiary's actions, both generally and in the context of the specific transaction. Thus, the government apparently intends to treat a subsidiary as the parent's agent by focusing not on the formal relationship, present in all cases, between a parent and a subsidiary, informed by the practical realities of how the parent and subsidiary interact, and then apply "traditional principles of respondeat superior" to hold the parent liable for bribery by the subsidiary, whether or not specifically authorized, directed, or controlled by the parent.

Under this theory, a subsidiary is virtually always an agent of its parent, and thus the parent is strictly liable for any acts "within the scope of [the agent's] duties" and intended to benefit the parent—even if the parent had policies prohibiting bribery. This flagrantly disrespects the corporate form and the black-letter rule that to "pierce the corporate veil" the parent must have operated the subsidiary as an alter ego and itself paid no attention to the corporate form.

Although we have noted elements of this approach in prior SEC actions, the DOJ's espousal of such a theory is particularly worrisome, as it impacts non-issuer domestic concerns and foreign companies—a much broader universe of companies. We have previously criticized the SEC for reaching for an anti-bribery charge against a parent company when a books-and-records or internal controls charge was more jurisdictionally sound and supported by the evidence. We can only speculate that the DOJ did the same in the Ralph Lauren case because it had no jurisdiction over the foreign subsidiary itself, given that it also did not allege any act by the subsidiary in U.S. territory. However, given the DOJ's parallel authority to charge issuers with criminal violations of the books-and-records and internal controls provisions, there is similarly no justification for stretching the anti-bribery provisions merely to allege or charge them. The fact that the Ralph Lauren case was resolved through an NPA rather than a DPA (or a guilty plea) does not excuse this approach—when the DOJ announces it will not prosecute but requires the company to admit to facts establishing a criminal violation of the law, it is stating, as a fact, that the company committed a crime. In such case, it is obligated to demonstrate, through the pleadings, in whatever form they are presented, that it could, in fact, prove each and every element of the offense.

Ralph Lauren also provides a puzzling contrast with two other enforcement actions in 2013, which were in the more conventional mold of charging a parent with anti-bribery violations only if specific indications of parental involvement were or could be alleged: Weatherford and Total.

In Weatherford, the SEC charged the parent company with anti-bribery violations in addition to books-and-records and internal controls violations. Weatherford allegedly authorized $11.8 million in payments to officials in the Middle East through a distributor between 2005 and 2011. Weatherford also retained a Swiss agent to funnel bribes to an Angolan official, and bribed other officials via a joint venture. The SEC complaint went on to note that operationally Weatherford's subsidiaries acted as agents of Weatherford in connection with such bribery and certain Weatherford employees and employees of its subsidiaries were directly involved in or consciously disregarded the high probability that the distributor might misuse the payments for bribes. The DOJ, however, charged the parent only with failure to establish effective internal controls.

Further, in its criminal information against Total, the DOJ expressly outlined the different ways in which the parent had engaged in a conspiracy to violate the anti-bribery provisions. For instance, Total allegedly negotiated a consulting arrangement with Iranian officials pursuant to which it would make unlawful payments to a designated intermediary, in connection with a government corporation signing an agreement with Total to develop oil and gas fields in Iran.

Obtain or Retain Business

In prior years, we saw allegations that veered beyond the traditional boundaries of the “obtaining or retaining business” element, and indeed, the 2012 FCPA Guide confirmed that the business purpose test is “broadly interpreted.” However, the business purpose in each of the 2013 enforcement actions remained within uncontroversial territory, being closely related to securing contracts or sales. Indeed, many pleadings included a practically verbatim recitation of the statute: “obtain and retain lucrative contracts” (Total); “obtain and retain contracts” (Diebold, Bilfinger); and “obtain or retain business” (Stryker). The types of benefits alleged in the other actions still remained closely tied to obtaining or retaining business and followed established precedent: a reduced fine for customs violations in Parker Drilling, customs clearance in Ralph Lauren, and obtaining inside information on competitors' pricing in Weatherford.

A somewhat ambiguous benefit was alleged in ADM, which paid bribes to obtain VAT refunds. While we have seen bribes allegedly paid for tax benefits in past enforcement actions (e.g., assistance in a tax dispute and a tax rebate in Diageo, reduction of tax liabilities in Alcatel-Lucent and the Panalpina cases), the difference here is that the Ukrainian government owed ADM the VAT refunds even prior to receiving the illicit payments. That is, one view could be that the bribes were not paid to create a previously non-existent benefit, but to expedite the benefit that was already due to ADM. Seemingly recognizing this, the SEC was careful to allege that “[g]etting these VAT refunds earlier—before the Ukraine endured a brief period of hyperinflation—gave ACTI Ukraine a business advantage resulting in a benefit to ADM of roughly $33 million.” Any time a company has more money in its coffers is a business advantage, the linkage to obtain or retain specific or even general business, however, seems here, however, to be so tenuous as to be non-existent.

Instrumentalities

As in recent years, most of the cases brought in 2013 involved government officials that were employed by “instrumentalities” such as state-owned hospitals and healthcare facilities (Philips, Stryker), state-owned oil companies (Total, Weatherford, Bilfinger), state-owned banks (Diebold). In many instances, the government described facts that supported instrumentality status: for example, in Diebold, the DOJ alleged that the recipient banks were approximately 70% owned by the Chinese government and that the government retained controlling rights, including the right to appoint and nominate a majority of the board of directors and top manager. Other enforcement actions were not as detailed—in Weatherford, the pleadings indicated that at least some of the foreign officials at issue were employees of a “state-owned oil company in the Middle East” without providing further details or even identifying the specific country. The enforcement actions of 2013 thus seem to take for granted the notion that state-owned entities are instrumentalities of a foreign government. Indeed, to date the government’s view has prevailed and all challenges to the notion have uniformly failed. In October 2013, however, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit heard oral argument in the Esquenazi/Rodriguez appeal, which centers on defendants’ assertion that Haiti’s state-owned telecom company was not an instrumentality of the Haitian government. The discussion will likely heat up again in the coming year—a decision in the appeal is expected in early 2014.

Finally, there was one instance in which the government official was neither an official of the government nor an instrumentality thereof: in Bilfinger, bribes were paid to an unnamed political party (“the dominant political party of Nigeria”) in addition to government officials and employees of state-owned companies. This is consistent with the language of the FCPA itself, which prohibits bribes to “any foreign political party or official thereof, or to any candidate for foreign political office.”

Statute of Limitations

Though the FCPA does not specify a statute of limitations, the five-year period set by 28 U.S.C. § 2462 governs civil enforcement of the Act and significantly limits the SEC’s ability to bring cases based on claims occurring outside the limitations period. Recent cases, however, reveal that the SEC continues to try to stretch the boundaries of the statutory period of repose by asserting various theories, such as the equitable doctrine of fraudulent concealment. The extent of the government’s ability to stretch these limits has been of particular significance in the cases against the Noble and Magyar executives.

In the Ruehlen and Jackson cases, the SEC argued that it could use the “fraudulent concealment rule” to extend the statute of limitations on its claim against the Noble executives and seek civil penalties for conduct occurring more than five years prior to bringing its case. As we previously reported, defendants moved in 2012 to dismiss the SEC’s first complaint, arguing that the events giving rise to the claims had occurred outside of the limitations period and that the SEC had failed to plead any basis for tolling the limitations period. The court’s decision, partially granting and partially denying the motion to dismiss, agreed that the SEC’s claims accruing before February 2007 should be barred but noted that the tolling agreements signed by defendants with the SEC, though not pleaded in the complaint, could serve to suspend the running of the statute of limitations and allow the SEC to bring claims based on conduct occurring one year earlier (after May 2006 or five years prior to the execution of the tolling agreements). The court then granted the SEC leave to amend the complaint and allege additional facts establishing the existence of the tolling agreements and also to plead facts that would warrant additional tolling based on the doctrine of fraudulent concealment, i.e., facts that not only established that defendants concealed the conduct complained of but that the SEC had reasonably relied on those denials, as well as facts establishing that the SEC had acted diligently in gathering the facts that form the basis of its claim.

The SEC duly filed an amended complaint on January 2013 that specifically alleged the tolling agreements (which the defendants did not dispute). However, the SEC still failed to plead facts establishing its diligence in investigating the facts behind the allegations of the complaint (a clear violation of the court's express instructions), nor did it plead that it relied on defendant's denials of wrongdoing. Defendants accordingly moved to dismiss this amended complaint, arguing that, because the SEC failed to rectify its pleading deficiencies, it was still not entitled to extend the statute of limitations. Further sounding the death knell to the SEC's amended complaint was the Supreme Court's decision in SEC v. Gabelli, which defendants submitted as a supplemental authority in support of their motion to dismiss argument. In Gabelli, the Supreme Court rejected the SEC's argument that under § 2462 the statute does not begin to run until the plaintiff has discovered its claim or when the claim could have been discovered with reasonable diligence by the plaintiff. Reasoning that "the discovery rule exists in part to preserve the claims of victims who do not know they are injured and who reasonably do not inquire as to any injury" and that "in the context of enforcement actions for civil penalties" the SEC is not like an individual victim who relies on apparent injury to learn of a wrong, the Supreme Court held that no "discovery" rule could be read into § 2462 and affirmed that the five year statute of limitations begins to run when the defendants allegedly fraudulent conduct occurs.

In light of Gabelli, both parties filed a joint motion seeking leave for the SEC to file a second amended complaint. This time, the SEC neatly cured the limitations period trap that its previous complaints had fallen into by seeking civil penalties only for wrongful conduct that fell within the statute of limitations, i.e. violations that accrued on or after May 10, 2006, as allowed under the tolling agreements. The second amended complaint does not explicitly seek disgorgement but does still seek injunctive relief to permanently restrain the defendants from committing the violations with which they have been charged (most of which occurred almost seven years before the amended complaint was filed). The defendants' motion to dismiss decision had raised limitations issues about injunctive relief, but the court did not resolve them, stating that "determining the likelihood of future violations is almost always a fact-specific inquiry."

The same issue may well arise in the Magyar executives case. In that case, the court denied the defendants' motion to dismiss in 2012, finding that the limitations period was tolled while the defendants, none of whom are nationals or even residents of the United States, were located outside of the territory of the United States. Earlier this year, the defendants petitioned to bring an interlocutory appeal arguing that reversal of the court's order would bring a swift end to the case because it would eliminate any prospect of the recovery of civil penalties (without civil penalties, the SEC would have no case). Judge Sullivan, however, denied the request, noting that "even if reversal would eliminate the SEC's claim for civil penalties, the claims for disgorgement and injunctive relief would still survive" and equitable remedies are exempt from § 2462's limitations period.

A. Recent Trends and Patterns in FCPA Enforcement

Thus, the ancient distinction between law and equity appears in these cases potentially to have blurred the otherwise clear repose promised by § 2462. The SEC, however, has previously been criticized by various district courts for seeking “obey the law” injunctions, in part on the ground that such injunctions add nothing to every person’s responsibility to obey the law. In these cases, particularly in the Noble case, where even the legal tolling theory does not bring most of the alleged violations within the limitations period, the courts may well have to address the appropriateness of the SEC seeking injunctive relief as a substitute for time-barred civil relief, particularly if the SEC also seeks associated equitable relief such as disgorgement when it is barred by statute from obtaining civil penalties.

Anything of Value

While cash payments have remained the most common form of payment among recent FCPA cases, several cases featured non-cash benefits as well. For example, in Stryker and Diebold the agencies focused on inaccurately recorded “sponsorships” or “training”. Similarly, the DOJ and SEC have noted the use of expensive and extravagant gifts (perfume, handbags, and apparel) as forms of bribery in Ralph Lauren. Recent enforcement activity has also highlighted the breadth behind the “anything of value” element. For example, in Stryker, the SEC charged the company with violations of the payment of a $197,055 “charitable donation” to a public university in Greece to curry favor with an influential professor.

However, perhaps the most distinctive “item of value” in 2013 was found not in an enforcement action but a pending investigation into several financial institutions’ hiring practices in China. According to press reports, several financial institutions focused recruiting efforts on the children of influential Chinese state officials. Documents allegedly demonstrate that job applicants with prominent Chinese families, although not unqualified, faced less rigorous hiring standards than other average counterparts. These investigations raise the issue of whether hiring qualified relatives of foreign officials is necessarily corrupt or illegal. Indeed, because many of the candidates were highly educated and well-qualified in their own right, it is questionable whether their relationship with Chinese state officials should be sufficient to trigger FCPA liability.

Modes of Payment

Companies continued to find creative ways of raising funds to pay bribes, and in most cases used third parties, such as a local agent with questionable industry qualifications (Parker Drilling), a “customs clearance agency” (Ralph Lauren), an employee at a Swiss bank and a British Virgin Islands limited liability company that both acted at the direction of an Iranian government official (Total), freight forwarding agents and distributors (Weatherford), and a stevedoring (shipping) company and insurance company (ADM). The allegations relating to ADM’s use of the insurance company contained some particularly explicit correspondence: as the company entered into sham insurance contracts with the provider, the executives made clear that the contracts should “include no insurance protection but serve the purpose only of generating a commission for the VAT repayment . . . Regardless of the wording of the contract, the content is completely different. That means that in the case of a conflict, claims could not be made successfully.” In the case of Diebold, the company engaged in private bribery by entering into fictitious contracts with local distributors. Companies even used outside counsel to pay bribes, using schemes in which the law firm would invoice the company for purported legal services rendered (a U.S. law firm in Parker Drilling and a Mexican law firm in Stryker). The arrangement closest to a direct payment was found in Weatherford, where the company entered into a joint venture with entities controlled by certain foreign officials, without receiving any capital, expertise, or labor contributions from those entities. The corrupt payments were made in the form of joint venture dividends, which went to the government officials.

The payments were also disguised in various ways, such as “loading and delivery expenses” and “stamp tax/label tax” (Ralph Lauren), “legal fees and expenses” (Parker Drilling), “business development expenses” (Total), “honorarios medicos” and “donations and grants” (Stryker), and prepayments for commodities and insurance premiums (ADM). In ADM, the culpable subsidiaries misrepresented the payments not only in its books and records, but also to ADM, the parent company. They first referred to payments as “charitable donations” to the government that were necessary to recover their VAT refunds. Later, they explained that the VAT collection “came at a price, the price being the government required a ‘depreciation’ of 18%,” which ADM understood to be the cost of negotiating a legal settlement with the Ukrainian government. In Weatherford, a “volume discount” was granted to a distributor, who used the discounted amounts to create a slush fund to pay bribes. Leisure trips were disguised as legitimate travel and sponsorship of conferences (Stryker), as well as the old standard, “training” (Diebold).

Unusual Developments

This year has seen a number of unique enforcement actions, not easily categorized under a single theme. Generally speaking, these cases demonstrate a potential shift, or at least expansion, of enforcement actions as compared to those in the previous decade.

Broker-Dealers and the Financial Sector

In May of 2013, the DOJ and SEC announced charges against two Miami-based brokers—Tomas Alberto Clarke Bethancourt and Jose Alejandro Hurtado—at the New York based financial services firm of Direct Access Partners LLC (DAP). The case is one of a few enforcement actions involving the financial services industry and is the first where enforcement agencies have specifically pursued individuals for bribes related to the provision of financial services.

Interestingly, the matter appears to have stemmed from the SEC’s examination of DAP, suggesting that SEC regulated firms’ compliance programs are being tested as part of the Commission’s normal review. The potential impact of the enforcement action on the financial sector was not lost on the DOJ which called the charges a “wake-up call to anyone in the financial services industry who thinks bribery is the way to get ahead.” No similar known enforcement actions have been initiated since and it remains to be seen whether the financial sector will play an increasingly significant role in FCPA enforcement in the future.

A. Recent Trends and Patterns in FCPA Enforcement

Undercover Cooperating Defendant

In the BizJet case, four executives of the aircraft maintenance, repair, and overhaul company, BizJet, organized a bribery scheme to pay government officials in Latin America in exchange for valuable aircraft service contracts. Subsequently, previously sealed documents revealed that one of the defendants and former vice president of the company, Peter DuBois, agreed to work as an undercover informant for the DOJ as part of his plea agreement. DuBois is described as having recorded conversations with the former BizJet executives and “other subjects of the government’s ongoing investigation.” Later revelations made clear that DuBois’s cooperation led to the investigation and eventual prosecution of another aircraft maintenance company—NORDAM Group.

Obstruction of Justice, Cilins, & BSGR

Possibly among the most intriguing story lines is the ongoing development of the alleged bribery scandal involving Beny Steinmetz Group Resources (BSGR) and a lucrative mining concession in the African nation of Guinea. In April 2013, Frederic Cilins, a French national described as acting as an agent for a then unnamed mining company, was arrested and charged with obstruction of justice and money laundering. Cilins allegedly attempted to pay a cooperating witness (the former wife of Lansana Conté, the former dictator of Guinea) $1 million in exchange for the destruction of documents which implicated Cilins’s employer in a significant bribery scandal and a signed affidavit containing numerous false statements regarding the manner in which the mining concession was acquired. Subsequent developments revealed that the unnamed mining company was BSGR, owned by Beny Steinmetz, Israel’s wealthiest citizen.

Compliance Guidance

While there was only one DOJ FCPA Opinion Release in 2013 (discussed below), the enforcement actions in 2013 provided a fair amount of guidance on various compliance topics, as did remarks made by DOJ and SEC officials in public forums, particularly Charles Dross, deputy chief of the DOJ’s Fraud Section, and Kara Brockmeyer, chief of the SEC Enforcement Division’s FCPA unit, who spoke at a number of conferences throughout the year.

Travel and Entertainment

For many years, we have argued that companies over-analyze travel and entertainment, sometimes at the expense of more serious compliance risks. While providing such benefits to government officials may well violate local law and regulations, and are often included in FCPA settlements to paint a picture of a lax compliance environment, they are rarely charged as pure “obtain or retain business” bribes. It is thus the extreme, and often fairly easily identified, travel and entertainment that present the most risk. This view was implicitly endorsed by Ms. Brockmeyer, who referred to “problematic entertainment” while specifically excluding “the little things” such as taking foreign officials out to a nice dinner after spending a day touring a factory. She then referred to the Diebold action, which included taking officials to a veritable laundry list of vacation locales (including Paris, Las Vegas, the Grand Canyon, Hawaii, Napa

A. Recent Trends and Patterns in FCPA Enforcement

Valley, Bali, and New Zealand). Ms. Brockmeyer acknowledged that business travel could be “perfectly legitimate” but cautioned that “if your factory’s in Michigan, then you should not be taking your government official to Las Vegas on the way.”

Besides Diebold, two other 2013 settlements also included notable examples of improper travel and entertainment, all of which clearly crossed the boundaries of legitimate business travel. In Stryker, the company provided six nights in New York City, two Broadway shows, and five days in Aruba for a Polish official and her husband. In Weatherford, the company provided a trip to the World Cup soccer tournament, a honeymoon for the daughter of an Algerian government official, and a religious trip for an Algerian government official.

Gifts

The DOJ Opinion Procedure Release of 2013 addressed a request from a partner at a U.S. law firm that represented a foreign country in various international arbitrations. The partner had become a personal friend of an official at that foreign country, and wished to pay the medical expenses of the foreign official’s daughter. Various safeguards were put into place, including full transparency with the respective employers of the partner and the official, a representation from the partner that the intent was purely humanitarian, and a certified letter from the Attorney General of the foreign country representing that 1) the payment of medical treatment would not affect the government’s decisions for hiring legal counsel and 2) the payment would not violate the laws of the foreign country.

After considering the facts and circumstances, the DOJ stated that it did not intend to take any enforcement action with respect to the proposed payments. It did make clear its stance that “[a] person may violate the FCPA by making a payment or gift to a foreign official’s family member as an indirect way of corruptly influencing that foreign official,” citing U.S. v. Liebo, 923 F.2d 1308, 1311 (8th Cir. 1991). This may not be an entirely appropriate statement for the issue at hand, since the benefit to the daughter in this case would go directly to the official, who “lack[ed] the financial means to pay for [the] treatment for his daughter.” With that being said, a literal interpretation of the DOJ’s reference to “an indirect way of corruptly influencing [a] foreign official” could very well overstep the boundaries of the statute, which requires that “money or anything of value” be given to the government official. Of course, the benefit does not have to be handed directly to the official, but the benefit must still inure to the official in some way. The DOJ’s statement could be cause for concern as it seems to insinuate that a payment to a family member that could not be traced to a benefit to the official himself, even if it were intended to influence the official, might also violate the FCPA. As far as we are aware, no enforcement actions have reached this far, and it remains to be seen whether the government will be willing to cross this line in the future.

Charitable Donations

The line between legitimate charitable contributions and corrupt payments is another area of substantial debate, particularly if no direct benefit flows to the government official. Not surprisingly, in the cases brought by the government in 2013, it went to great lengths to demonstrate unambiguous corrupt intent and direct benefit to the corrupt official. For example, in Stryker, the company paid a “sizeable and atypical donation” to a Greek public university, which was used to fund a laboratory run by a corrupt government official. In other cases, companies attempted to disguise payments as charitable donations: Weatherford’s religious trip for an Algerian government official was improperly booked as a charitable donation, and the ADM subsidiary responsible for paying bribes told the company headquarters that “charitable donations” to the government were necessary to obtain tax refunds.

Meanwhile, charitable organizations have been implicated in at least one company currently under FCPA investigation. Hyperdynamics Corp., a Texas-based oil company, said in a statement that it understands that the DOJ is investigating whether the company’s activities in obtaining and retaining concession rights to mine in Guinea, as well as its “relationships with charitable organizations,” violate the FCPA and anti-money laundering statutes. According to press reports, in 2006 Hyperdynamics won virtually all rights to explore for oil off the coast of the Republic of Guinea, despite having had no prior oil exploration experience. The former CEO of Hyperdynamics is reportedly the founder of a charity called “American Friends of Guinea,” to which he donated over two million shares of Hyperdynamics stock upon his resignation from the company in 2009.

Third Party Due Diligence

Nearly all of the cash payments alleged in the 2013 enforcement actions were made through third party intermediaries—a “politically connected” agent in Parker Drilling, a customs broker in Ralph Lauren, an employee of a Swiss bank who acted at the direction of a government official in Total, Mexican outside counsel in Stryker, joint venture partners, freight forwarding agents, and distributors in Weatherford, and a shipping company and an insurance company in ADM. In fact, Ms. Brockmeyer commented at one conference that more than 60 percent of the SEC’s cases in the last two years involved third party intermediaries. Noting that such intermediaries pose a substantial corruption risk, Ms. Brockmeyer identified some key red flags when evaluating third parties, such as 1) lacking business purpose for the third party; 2) paying an inflated rate to the third party; and 3) dealing with a third party that does not have the infrastructure or support to provide the contracted services.

Self-Reporting

The benefits of self-reporting are not always clear. A voluntary disclosure virtually guarantees a costly government investigation, and even companies that do not self-report can and will receive credit for cooperation and remediation (see, e.g., Parker Drilling). The cases in 2013, however, do appear to support the notion that voluntary disclosure reaps benefits. Of the nine companies that were subject to enforcement actions in 2013, four received credit for self-reporting their activity to the SEC and DOJ (Philips, Ralph Lauren, Diebold, ADM). Although it is difficult to distinguish the benefits from cooperation/remediation from the benefits that are solely attributed to self-reporting, the four companies appeared to reap specific benefits: no bribery charges and no civil penalties for Philips, double-NPA for Ralph Lauren, thirty percent criminal penalty discounts (the largest of the year) each for Diebold and ADM Ukraine, and no civil penalties and an NPA for ADM. In two of those actions, the regulators specified the prompt self-disclosure following discovery of problematic activity, with Philips reporting after a few months (reported in “early 2010” after discovering the unlawful payments in December 2009) and Ralph Lauren reporting within two weeks. This is consistent with government guidance, and Mr. Duross noted a practical angle: companies that wait to report until the internal investigation is “done” run the risk of “going to meet with the government to make their report and enforcement officials having questions that were not asked during the investigation or that may lead to the company having to go back and retread ground that has already been covered, through witness interviews, document collection or otherwise.”

A. Recent Trends and Patterns in FCPA Enforcement

In contrast, the companies that did not self-report were subject to SEC civil penalties (Weatherford, Stryker) or did not receive a criminal penalty discount (Weatherford, Bilfinger, Total). Parker Drilling was the lone outlier, as it evaded civil penalties and received a 20 percent discount in spite of its failure to self-report.

Meanwhile, an increasing number of whistleblower tips may also affect the calculus to self-report. Under the Dodd-Frank Act, the SEC will pay rewards to eligible whistleblowers who voluntarily provide the SEC with original information that leads to a successful enforcement action yielding monetary sanctions of over $1 million. In November 2013, the SEC’s Office of the Whistleblower reported that it logged 3,238 whistleblower tips and complaints in 2013, approximately 150 of which involved FCPA issues. Ms. Brockmeyer noted that there have been “some very, very good whistleblower complaints” in the FCPA space, and companies may lean more strongly toward self-reporting if there is a high risk of a whistleblower tip to the SEC.

Cooperation and Remediation

Cooperation and remediation featured in all of the enforcement actions in 2013, although some received more attention than others. The one most prominently touted by the government was certainly the Ralph Lauren double NPA; indeed, Ms. Brockmeyer noted that the case stood out because it was “an opportunity for us to talk publicly about the types of cooperation we think really are above and beyond the types of cooperation . . . to get meaningful credit.” The Ralph Lauren criminal NPA gave several examples of cooperation and remediation, much of them standard fare, but also noting some unusual actions, such as ceasing retail operations in Argentina (the site of the bribes) and winding down all operations in the country, translating an amended anticorruption policy into eight languages, and conducting a world-wide risk assessment.

Most of the stated examples, however, mirror those provided in the 2012 FCPA Guide, and indeed, many of them feature in the other 2013 settlements, although many refer only to the general concept of “cooperation” or “remediation” without going into the details of specific activities the company undertook. Nearly all conducted internal investigations (except for Bilfinger), most adopted enhanced anticorruption policies and protocols (except for Total), and many terminated culpable employees and/or agents (Philips, Parker Drilling, Weatherford, Bilfinger, ADM). Interestingly, in the 2013 settlements there were also instances in which the government specifically called out deficient cooperation and/or remediation. In Bilfinger, the DOJ noted that the company’s cooperation came “at a late date,” and in

Weatherford the SEC noted that the company engaged in misconduct during the SEC's investigation, including failing to provide the SEC with accurate and complete information. In Diebold, the DOJ specified that the company undertook "some" remedial measures that were "not sufficient to address and reduce the risk of recurrence" and thus justified its decision to impose an independent monitor.

Representatives from the DOJ and SEC provided some further insight into cooperation and remediation. At one conference, Matthew Queler, Assistant Chief of the DOJ's FCPA Unit and Tracy Price, Assistant Director of the SEC's FCPA Unit, conveyed their view that a robust internal investigation can enhance a company's credibility with the authorities. Ms. Price emphasized the value of cooperating early, by noting that early conversations with the government on potential roadblocks to an investigation, such as foreign blocking statutes and data privacy laws, provide authorities an opportunity to help the company overcome potential issues. Ms. Price further noted that early government participation may help the company focus its investigation on issues of most interest to the authorities. From the DOJ side, Mr. Queler stressed the importance of comprehensive document preservation, stating that if a company preserves only a lower-level employee's materials and not the materials of the employee's supervisors and management the authorities may be skeptical about the thoroughness of the company's investigation.

Commercial Bribery

The SEC has emphasized the broad reach of the FCPA's accounting provisions. For example, Diebold was charged with accounting violations for commercial bribery. In Diebold, the company entered into false contracts with distributors to pay bribes to its private-sector customers in Russia. While Ms. Brockmeyer commented that the SEC is not necessarily looking for commercial bribery cases, she stated that the SEC would charge those economic violations as well if they are found in the course of a foreign bribery investigation.

As we have noted previously, the expansiveness of the books and records provisions, as well as coverage of commercial bribery under other federal and state statutes, the definition of "foreign government official" or "instrumentality of a foreign government" is not particularly important from a compliance perspective. A company subject to the accounting provisions of the FCPA is obligated to properly record all payments (including commercial bribes) in its books and records, and it would be rare indeed to see a company willing to be fully transparent in that context. And of course, private bribery is illegal in most jurisdictions, so companies are best served to include a blanket prohibition on all bribery (both public and private) in their compliance policies.

Private Litigation

The year saw a number of the derivative and securities class action lawsuits that typically follow disclosures of FCPA investigations. One of the more notable private litigation cases, however, involves a former Siemens employee who brought an action alleging that Siemens had violated the whistleblower protections provided by Dodd-Frank.

A. Recent Trends and Patterns in FCPA Enforcement

Meng-Lin Liu, a former employee at a Siemens subsidiary in China, Siemens China Ltd. (SLC), filed a complaint on January 15, 2013, against Siemens, alleging that it violated the Anti-Retaliation Provision of the Dodd-Frank Act. The complaint alleged that Siemens retaliated against Liu when he complained of compliance violations at SLC; in particular, that SLC circumvented internal FCPA controls, failed to conduct adequate due diligence on third parties, and inflated bids in order to pass funds through intermediaries to government officials. Liu claims that Siemens retaliated against him after he raised these allegations to senior business and compliance officials at SLC. He alleged that he received a negative performance review, that he was removed from several of his compliance-related job duties, and that he was ultimately told that he should not return to work for the remainder of his employment contract, which was then terminated.

The Southern District of New York dismissed the case against Siemens on October 21, 2013, finding that Dodd-Frank's anti-retaliation provision does not apply extraterritorially and, therefore, did not cover Liu, a Chinese citizen, for conduct that occurred outside of the United States. A person outside of the United States can still be a whistleblower, and thus eligible for whistleblower awards, but they will not be protected from retaliation under Dodd-Frank. The outcome of the case is an important lesson for non-U.S. employees about the reach of Dodd-Frank protections and should serve as a warning for would-be whistleblowers that they may not be protected from retaliatory action.

In another private litigation involving a whistleblower, a shareholder derivative action was brought against the members of NCR's board of directors, alleging that they were aware of, and failed to properly respond to, the company's bribery issues in China and the Middle East. The FCPA violations discussed in the complaint came to light after an anonymous whistleblower provided documents to the Wall Street Journal. Additionally, shareholder lawsuits have been brought against other companies that are actively conducting investigations into potential FCPA violations, including Wal-Mart (for its ever-expanding bribery investigation for alleged conduct in Mexico and elsewhere) and Juniper (which in August 2013 disclosed an ongoing FCPA investigation).

Finally, in early 2013 Kazuo Okada, a member of the Wynn Resorts board of directors, filed a complaint against Wynn Resorts for alleged violations of the securities laws. Wynn Resorts had issued a proxy statement to seek shareholders' approval to remove Okada from the board, and Okada alleged that the proxy statement made numerous false and misleading statements, which in turn usurped the shareholders' right to make an informed decision. The suit was largely in response to the lawsuit filed by Wynn Resorts against Okada in 2012, in which Wynn Resorts claimed that Okada breached his fiduciary duties by violating the FCPA in the course of his independent development of a casino in the Philippines.

Okada voluntarily dismissed his suit toward the end of the year, but the U.S. government continues to investigate Okada and his company, Universal Entertainment Corp., for the bribery allegations. In April 2013, the U.S. government filed a motion in the Wynn Resorts case to intervene and for a temporary and partial stay of discovery, based on its ongoing investigation. The stay was granted and it appears that the investigation continues to intensify—in October 2013, the government requested an extension of the stay, presenting new evidence to the court under seal which they argued warranted further investigation.

A. Recent Trends and Patterns in FCPA Enforcement

Enforcement in the United Kingdom

While there has been little reported enforcement activity in the U.K. during 2013, the Serious Fraud Office (“SFO”) has suffered a year of negative publicity in relation to a number of issues including the loss of data obtained in the course of its closed investigation into BAE Systems, the collapse of its prosecution of Victor Dahdaleh, and the ongoing action for damages brought by the Tchenguiz brothers.

One development this year was the new National Crime Agency (“NCA”) becoming fully operational in October. It replaced the Serious Organised Crime Agency and is responsible for investigating and prosecuting serious and organized crime (including economic crime) in the U.K. While the SFO remains the lead agency for investigation of large and complex bribery and corruption cases, it is likely that it will work closely with the NCA in this area going forward (not least because of the NCA’s larger budget). While there has been speculation that the SFO might be merged into the NCA, at present the two criminal enforcement agencies remain separate.

Enforcement Actions

This year saw the third conviction of an individual for an offense under the Bribery Act, when a student at Bath University (the son of a Chinese public official) was found guilty of attempting to bribe his tutors. This follows earlier convictions of a court clerk (who received bribes in return for fixing driving convictions) and a taxi driver (who was convicted of attempting to bribe a mini-cab licensing officer).

In August 2013 the SFO announced that it had brought its first charges under the Bribery Act (the previous prosecutions had been brought by other prosecuting bodies). The case relates to alleged commercial bribes in connection with an alleged £23 million fraud concerning the promotion and sale of biofuel investment products to U.K. investors at Sustainable AgroEnergy plc between April 2011 and February 2012. Three of the four defendants in the case were charged with offenses of making and accepting a financial advantage contrary to sections 1(1) and 2(1) of the Bribery Act. No charge has been brought against the company itself, which is in administration. The first hearing took place on 7 October 2013, and the case is listed for trial starting on September 22, 2014.

The SFO has also charged a number of individuals associated with a U.K.-based printing company (Smith & Ouzman Limited) in connection with various transactions in Africa. The alleged offenses pre-date the effective date of the Bribery Act, and the charges of corruptly agreeing to make payments totalling over £400,000 to influence the award of business contracts to a company have therefore been brought under the Prevention of Corruption Act 1906. The trial is due to take place in November 2014.

Thus, the year 2013 was another year without any corporate prosecutions under the Bribery Act. However, it is likely that the absence of any such prosecutions to date primarily reflects the time necessary to investigate and bring a serious prosecution for such offenses committed since the Bribery Act came into force. In this regard, it is worth noting that David Green, the current head of the SFO, has recently stated that his office has a number of matters currently under investigation. Furthermore, on December 23,

A. Recent Trends and Patterns in FCPA Enforcement

2013, the SFO confirmed that it “has opened a criminal investigation into allegations of bribery and corruption at Rolls Royce” (although the company had disclosed the investigation long ago).

Draft Sentencing Guidelines for Fraud, Bribery and Money Laundering Offenses

On June 27, 2013, the Sentencing Council published a consultation on new sentencing guidelines for fraud, bribery, and money laundering offenses. Along with guidelines for the sentencing of individuals, the draft guidelines include specific sentencing guidelines for corporate offenders. There are currently no sentencing guidelines for organizations convicted of financial crimes, despite the Bribery Act having been in force for over two years.

For corporate offenders of financial crimes, the draft guidelines propose a step-by-step basis for determining the appropriate sentence. First, the court will consider whether it is appropriate for compensation to be paid to the victims of the crime. Second, the court will look at the culpability and harm factors involved in the offense. Harm is represented by a financial figure assessed as the actual gross amount obtained or intended to be obtained (or loss avoided or intended to be avoided) by the offender as a result of the offense. The court will apply a multiplier to that figure and then depart from that starting point after considering aggravating and mitigating features of the case and any other factors that should be considered in determining the final amount of the penalty (such as assistance given to the prosecution and any guilty plea).

Deferred Prosecution Agreements

The Crime and Courts Act 2013 (the “CCA”) received Royal Assent on April 25, 2013 and is expected to come into force in early 2014. Once in force, schedule 17 of the CCA will permit the use of Deferred Prosecution Agreements (“DPAs”) in England and Wales for the first time for the investigation and prosecution of corporate economic crimes including offenses under the Bribery Act 2010. On June 27, 2013, the Director of the SFO and the Director of Public Prosecutions in the U.K. released a draft Code of Practice on DPAs giving guidance to prosecutors on the use of DPAs. The final version of the draft Code must be published before schedule 17 of the CCA comes into force.

In contrast to the U.S. approach, DPAs under the CCA can only be struck with companies, not individuals. Similar to the U.S., the DPA will involve an agreement by a prosecutor to defer prosecution in exchange for the company agreeing to comply with certain terms and conditions (which may also include financial penalties). We expect that these terms and conditions are likely to follow the U.S. model and require acceptance of responsibility, disgorgement of profits, financial penalties, enhanced anti-bribery compliance efforts, and, possibly, monitorships.

As noted above, for the most part courts in the United States have a limited role in approving or even reviewing DPAs (although, as noted above, the court in HSBC USA strongly rejected that view). The English model differs significantly and involves the court at a number of stages prior to the final execution of the DPA. Under the CCA, the court must approve the DPA before it is finalized. The draft Code makes clear that a DPA will only be appropriate (and therefore will only receive judicial approval) where both an “evidential” test and a “public interest” test are satisfied. To satisfy this hurdle, there will be three separate court hearings and the prosecution will be required to demonstrate to the court’s satisfaction that (i) there is a realistic prospect of conviction and (ii) the public interest is served by a DPA rather than a prosecution. At the first hearing, the court will determine whether the DPA is in the interests of justice and is fair, reasonable, and proportionate; at the second, the prosecutor and company will present the terms of the DPA, and the judge may formally approve the agreement. Only after these two preliminary hearings (which will be held in private) will there be a public hearing, where the court will state its reasons for approving the DPA and the DPA will then become formally binding upon the parties.

DPAs should provide a new and flexible means to deal with corporate economic and financial crime as an alternative to criminal prosecution and civil enforcement (such as civil recovery orders under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002), benefitting both prosecutors and companies. However, the involvement of the courts, and the requirement for an evidentiary hearing and findings, may discourage companies from making voluntary disclosures and seeking a DPA. Therefore only time will tell whether the English style of DPA will prove to be an efficient and productive method of eliciting corporate disclosure and cooperation and resolving Bribery Act enforcement actions.

Anti-Bribery Controls

In October 2013 the U.K. Financial Conduct Authority (“FCA”, the successor to the Financial Services Authority) published the findings of its thematic review into the anti-money laundering and anti-bribery and corruption systems and controls of twenty-two wealth and asset management firms. This follows similar reports published in respect of other industries.

The FCA found both good examples of risk management and a number of weaknesses in the firms’ anti-bribery and corruption systems and controls. This led the FCA to conclude that there is still work for most firms to do to ensure bribery and corruption risks are appropriately mitigated, especially where the firms were part of major financial groups which should have been aware of the FCA’s expectations. The FCA emphasized that given its previous communications in this area it had expected firms to have taken more actions to reduce the risk of money laundering and bribery and corruption.

In Chapter 3 of its thematic review, the FCA gave a number of examples of good and poor practice. For example, in relation to anti-bribery and corruption controls, examples of good practice include having gift and entertainment policies and procedures that clearly define the approval process including clear instructions for escalation, definitions and guidelines for staff to follow. Conversely, examples of poor practice include gift and entertainment activity which is not consistently monitored by senior management, or where the firm’s policies and procedures do not address other areas of bribery and corruption but focus on only one area such as gifts and entertainment.

The FCA expects all firms it regulates to consider its findings and to improve their anti-money laundering and anti-bribery and corruption systems and controls where necessary. The FCA noted that significant weaknesses remained even at the firms it had visited which formed part of groups that had been subject to previous regulatory attention.

A. Recent Trends and Patterns in FCPA Enforcement

Conclusion

As a result of the OECD Convention (which encouraged international cooperation) and, perhaps even more significantly, the Sarbanes-Oxley Act (which spurred voluntary disclosures and auditor attention to compliance controls), the number of FCPA enforcement actions surged over the past decade. At its peak, the number of U.S. enforcement actions in a single year was twenty, while the annual average over the past ten years has been about ten. These numbers obviously represent a substantial increase over the first decades of FCPA enforcement, where international cooperation was erratic and the incentives for corporation cooperation were less persuasive, and the last two years' dip in numbers might be viewed as an ebbing of that tide. However, it is highly unlikely that, despite the drop in cases, there is a trend or pattern of less enforcement in the future, particularly given that a number of companies have disclosed investigations over the past year and the authorities have stated that they have a pipeline of cases they intend to resolve in the coming year. Indeed, it would take only a few more cases in 2014 to demonstrate precisely the opposite.

On the other hand, this year's increase in average penalties, even after adjusting for outliers, is also probably not yet a trend or pattern. FCPA penalties reached their peak in 2010 at almost $100 million, and the average penalty over the past decade has been about $50 million on a gross basis. As we have noted, however, these numbers are largely driven by the TSKJ cases⁶ (which alone account for over $1.5 billion over the four years) and a few other outliers such as Siemens. When high and low outliers are eliminated, the average penalty drops to about $26 million, which is similar to the past year's adjusted average of $28 million.

Finally, several years ago we noted a convergence of compliance standards, noting the similarities between compliance programs required by FCPA settlements (and later incorporated into the FCPA Guide), similar requirements in a Canadian settlement, the OECD Practice Guidance, and, of course, the Bribery Act Guidance. With some exceptions, this has not yet been matched by a similar convergence of enforcement amongst the OECD signatories, but the steps being taken in the U.K. to adopt deferred prosecution agreements may well create incentives for voluntary disclosures and corporate settlements and result in a similar surge of cases in the U.K. However, in the U.K. and elsewhere, such a surge will require implementation of appropriate legal tools, dedication of sufficient investigative and prosecutorial resources, incentives for corporate cooperation and disclosure, and, above all, political will.

146. United States v. Archer Daniels Midland Company \(2013\)⁷
United States v. Alfred C. Toepfer International \(Ukraine\) Limited \(C.D. Ill. 2013\)⁸

Nature of the Business. Archer Daniels Midland Company (“ADM”), a Delaware corporation headquartered in Illinois, manufactures, processes, and sells agricultural commodities. Alfred C. Toepfer International (Ukraine) Ltd. (“ACTI Ukraine”) was an indirect 80 percent-owned subsidiary of ADM, that traded and sold commodities in and outside of the Ukraine.

Business Location. Venezuela and Ukraine.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $22,000 in Ukraine; not stated as to Venezuela.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $100 million in Ukraine; not stated as to Venezuela.
3. Intermediary. Insurance company, third party vendor, third party agent.
4. The foreign official. Ukranian government officials; employee of oil company indirectly owned by the Venezuelan government.

Influence to be Obtained. According to court filings and the admitted statement of facts attached to ADM’s deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ, ACTI Ukraine and other ADM affiliates paid bribes to government officials in Ukraine and Venezuela.

In Ukraine, ACTI Ukraine and its affiliate in Germany, Alfred C. Toepfer International G.m.b.H. (“ACTI Hamburg”) engaged in multiple fraudulent schemes to pay Ukrainian officials to release VAT refunds that were being delayed or refused by the Ukrainian government. ACTI Ukraine and ACTI Hamburg entered into fraudulent agreements with a shipping company and an insurance company to raise the funds and funnel the payments and misrepresented the bribes as charitable donations or “depreciations” required by the Ukrainian government.

In Venezuela, ADM’s Latin American subsidiary (“ADM LA”) paid a commission to a broker in connection with the sale of soybean oil to a state-owned Venezuelan oil company, even though the broker had no involvement in the transaction. The “commission” was transferred to the bank account of an employee of the Venezuelan oil company. ADM LA also used the broker to make payments to principals of ADM’s other customers in Venezuela. In addition, ADM LA participated in a scheme in which refunds for customer overpayments were paid not to the customers directly but to accounts owned by employees or principals of the customer.

Enforcement. On December 20, 2013, ADM entered into a three-year non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ, and ACTI Ukraine pleaded guilty to one count of conspiring to violate the antibribery provisions of the FCPA. ADM agreed to a monetary penalty of $9.45 million pursuant to the non-prosecution agreement; that amount was credited against the $17,771,613 million criminal fine imposed on ACTI Ukraine pursuant to its guilty plea.

In a related civil settlement with the SEC, ADM agreed to pay approximately $36.5 million in disgorgement and prejudgment interest.

145. United States v. Bilfinger SE (S.D. Tex. 2013)⁹

Nature of the Business. Bilfinger SE is a German engineering and services company and majority owner of Bilfinger Berger Gas and Oil Services Nigeria Ltd. (“BBGOS”), a German company based in Nigeria.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $6 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $388 million.
3. Intermediary. Third party consultants, direct.
4. The foreign official. 1) Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation (“NNPC”) officials; 2) officials of NNPC’s wholly-owned subsidiary National Petroleum Investment Management Services; 3) officials of NNPC’s majority-owned joint venture operator, Shell Petroleum Development Company of Nigeria, Ltd.; 4) an official in the executive branch of the Nigerian government; 5) the dominant political party in Nigeria.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the DOJ’s criminal Information, Bilfinger subsidiary BBGOS entered into a consortium agreement with entities affiliated with Willbros Group Inc. to bid on and perform the the Eastern Gas Gathering System (“EGGS”) project, a natural gas pipeline system in the Niger Delta designed to relieve existing pipeline capacity constraints. From 2003 and 2005, Bilfinger, together with the Willbros entities, used contractual payments, fraudulent loans, and petty cash obtained by fraudulent invoices to funnel money to two “consultants” for the purposes of bribing Nigerian officials to obtain and retain the EGGS contracts. In addition, Bilfinger provided loans to Willbros to make the corrupt payments when Willbros encountered difficulties due to an internal investigation.

Enforcement. On December 9, 2013, Bilfinger entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ, pursuant to which it agreed to pay a fine of $32 million. In addition to the monetary penalty, Bilfinger agreed to retain an independent compliance monitor for 18 months, with self-reporting to follow for the remaining duration of the deferred prosecution agreement.

In 2006-2008, the DOJ and SEC brought proceedings against Willbros Group, its subsidiary Willbros International Inc., and seven Willbros employees for related conduct. The Willbros entities paid collective fines of $32 million, and the Willbros individual defendants were subject to civil and criminal fines. Two individual defendants were also sentenced to imprisonment.

United States v. Weatherford Services, Ltd. \(S.D. Tex. 2013\)¹¹

Nature of the Business. Weatherford International Ltd, a Switzerland corporation, provides equipment and services to the oil industry in over 100 countries. During the relevant period, Weatherford was incorporated in Bermuda and headquartered in Texas. It maintains a class of securities trading on the New York Stock Exchange. Weatherford Services Ltd. (“WSL”), a Bermuda corporation, is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Weatherford International Ltd. Among other responsibilities, WSL managed most of Weatherford’s activities in Angola.

Business Location. Angola, Algeria, Albania, Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $14.2 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Profits of approximately $59.3 million.
3. Intermediary. Subsidiary companies; third-party distributors; third-party agents; joint ventures.
4. The foreign official. Government officials in Angola; employees at a state-owned oil company in an unnamed country in the Middle East; Iraqi Ministry of Oil; employees at Sonatrach, an Algerian state-owned oil company; employees at Albania’s National Petroleum Agency; Albanian tax director.

Influence to be Obtained. In Angola, between 2006 and 2007, Weatherford Oil Tool Middle East Limited (“WOTME”), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Weatherford, retained a Swiss agent to pay bribes to an Angolan official. WOTME paid these bribes for the approval of an oil services contract renewal. Although the contract was with a privately-owned corporation, Angolan law requires Sonangol, the Angolan state-owned oil company, to approve the award or renewal of any oil services contract in Angola. To facilitate these bribes, WOTME entered into a consultancy agreement with the Swiss agent. Even though the agent refused to sign the initial agreement because it contained an FCPA clause, neither Weatherford nor WSL conducted any anti-corruption due diligence on the agent and ultimately retained the agent.

Also in Angola, in 2004, WSL formed a joint venture with a company controlled by Sonangol officials and a company controlled by a relative of an Angolan minister, with the view of obtaining well screen contracts from Sonangol. Prior to entering into the joint venture, neither Weatherford nor WSL conducted any meaningful due diligence on either joint venture partner. Instead, Weatherford’s in-house counsel falsely represented to outside counsel that the joint venture had been vetted and approved by other outside counsel, when, in fact, no outside law firm ever conducted such vetting or gave such approval. Sonangol officials awarded all well screens contracts to the joint venture, and Weatherford paid dividends to the joint venture partners, even though they contributed no capital, expertise, or labor.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

In an unidentified country in the Middle East, between 2005 and 2011, WOTME awarded improper volume discounts to a company that supplied Weatherford products to a state-owned and controlled national oil company. The volume discounts were used to create a slush fund for bribe payments to decision makers at the national oil company. Prior to entering into the contract with the distributor neither WOTME nor Weatherford conducted any due diligence on the distributor, even though: (a) the distributor would be furnishing Weatherford goods directly to an instrumentality of a foreign government; (b) a foreign official had directed WOTME to contract with that particular distributor; and (c) WOTME knew that the country's royal family had an ownership stake in the distributor.

In Iraq, WOTME paid illegal kickbacks to the Iraqi government as part of the United Nations Oil for Food Program. To conceal the payments, WOTME inflated the price of the contracts before submitting them to the UN for approval. The payments were then recorded as cost of goods sold on the company's books and records.

Enforcement. On November 26, 2013, Weatherford entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ under which Weatherford agreed to pay an $87.2 million penalty. In addition to the monetary penalty, Weatherford agreed to retain an independent corporate compliance monitor for eighteen months, with self-reporting to follow for the remaining duration of the deferred prosecution agreement.

Also on November 26, 2013, WSL plead guilty to violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA and agreed to pay a fine of $420,000.

In a related civil settlement with the SEC, Weatherford International agreed to pay disgorgement and prejudgment interest of approximately $95.4 million, and a penalty of $1.85 million. The disgorgement amount was offset by the $31,646,907 fine Weatherford paid pursuant to a DPA with the U.S. Attorney's Office.

In a separate matter, Weatherford and four of its subsidiaries agreed to pay a combined $100 million to resolve criminal charges relating to violations of export controls.

143. United States v. Diebold, Inc. (N.D. Ohio 2013)¹²

Nature of the Business. Diebold, Inc., an Ohio company, is a global provider of automated teller machines and bank security systems.

Business Location. China, Indonesia, Russia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $1.75 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $281 million.
3. Intermediary. Third parties designated by state-owned banks, distributors.
4. The foreign official. Employees and officials of state-owned banks in China and Indonesia (also employees of private bank customers in Russia).

Influence to be Obtained. According to the criminal information filed by the DOJ, Diebold repeatedly provided payments, gifts, and non-business travel for employees of state-owned and controlled banks in China and Indonesia to secure and retain business with those banks. Diebold attempted to disguise the payments and benefits through various means, including by making payments through third parties designated by the banks and by inaccurately recording leisure trips for bank employees as “training.”

Diebold also created and entered into false contracts with a distributor in Russia for services that the distributor was not performing. The distributor, in turn, used the funds to pay bribes to employees of Diebold’s privately-owned bank customers in Russia to obtain and retain contracts with those customers.

Enforcement. On October 22, 2013, Diebold entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ under which it agreed to pay a $25.2 million penalty for violations of the anti-bribery and books and records provisions of the FCPA. In addition to the monetary penalty, Diebold agreed to retain a compliance monitor for at least 18 months, with self-reporting to follow for the remaining duration of the deferred prosecution agreement.

In a related settlement with the SEC, Diebold agreed to pay approximately $23 million in disgorgement and prejudgment interest.

142. United States v. Alain Riedo (S.D. Cal. 2013)¹³

Nature of the Business. Maxwell Technologies S.A., incorporated and headquartered in Switzerland, manufactures and sells high-voltage/high-tension capacitors in several countries. It is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Maxwell Technologies, Inc., a U.S. corporation. Alain Riedo, a Swiss citizen, was Maxwell S.A.'s Vice President and General Manager and was also Senior Vice President of Maxwell Inc.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $2.8 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $15 million.
3. Intermediary. Sales agents/consultants.
4. The foreign official. Officials at state-owned and controlled electric-utility infrastructure agencies of the Chinese government.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the indictment filed by the DOJ, Riedo conspired from about 2002 to about 2009 with certain other Maxwell managers, senior officers, and third-party agents to bribe officials at Pinggao Group Co. Ltd, Xi-an XD High Voltage Apparatus Co., Ltd., and New Northeast Electric Shenyang HV Switchgear Co., Ltd., which were Chinese government agencies. The alleged bribes were paid in exchange for the officials' assistance in securing contracts for the sale of Maxwell's high voltage capacitor products to state-owned manufacturers of electrical-utility infrastructure. Riedo allegedly engaged third-party agents to market and sell Maxwell's capacitors to Chinese consumers and ensured that the quotes procured from Maxwell S.A. contained a secret mark-up of approximately 20 percent. The mark-up money was characterized as a "special arrangement" or "consulting fee" in the agents' invoices to Maxwell S.A. and then used to bribe employees at the Chinese government agencies. Riedo allegedly allowed these false characterizations to be recorded in Maxwell's books and financial statements and filings, and hampered efforts by other Maxwell executives to learn the truth about operations and finances at Maxwell S.A.'s operations.

Enforcement. On October 15, 2013, the DOJ obtained an indictment against Alain Riedo, and the court issued a warrant for his arrest. As of December 31, 2013, Riedo is considered a fugitive.

In 2011, Maxwell Technologies resolved DOJ and SEC parallel actions concerning its business conduct in China by agreeing to pay approximately $14 million in penalties and disgorgement.

Nature of the Business. Total, S.A. is a French corporation that explores for and develops oil and gas resources worldwide. Its American Depositary Shares are registered with the SEC and listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Business Location. Iran.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $60 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $147 million.
3. Intermediary. Unnamed third parties designated by the foreign official.
4. The foreign official. Official for a subsidiary of the National Iranian Oil Company and for an engineering company majority-owned and controlled by the Iranian government.

Influence to be Obtained. In 1995, to secure a contract with NIOC to develop oil and gas fields in Iranian territorial waters, Total met with an Iranian official to discuss unlawful payments to an intermediary whom the official designated. Total then entered into an agreement with the intermediary, which provided that the parties would execute “Consulting Service Requests,” which were to detail Total’s bribe payments at the direction of the Iranian official. Total paid approximately $16 million to the intermediary in connection with the scheme.

In 1997, in connection with the development of another gas field in Iran, Total entered into a second consulting agreement, this time with a second intermediary, who was also designated by the Iranian official. In September 1997, NIOC granted Total a 40% interest in developing the field and, over the next seven years, Total paid approximately $44 million at the Iranian official’s direction to accounts designated by the second intermediary. Total characterized these payments as “business development expenses.”

Enforcement. On May 29, 2013, the DOJ filed a criminal information charging Total with conspiracy to violate the FCPA and with violations of the books and records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. On the same day, Total entered into a deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ, pursuant to which the company paid a $245.2 million penalty and agreed to appoint an independent compliance monitor for three years.

In a related settlement with the SEC, Total was ordered to pay disgorgement of $153 million. French officials have also announced charges against Total for violations of French laws.

140. United States v. Tomas Alberto Clarke Bethancourt, Jose Alejandro Hurtado, and Maria de los Angeles Gonzalez de Hernandez, a/k/a "Maria de los Angeles Gonzales," a/k/a "Mary" \(S.D.N.Y. 2013\)¹⁵
United States v. Ernesto Lujan \(S.D.N.Y. 2013\)¹⁶

Nature of the Business. U.S. employees of Direct Access Partners LLC ("DAP"), a New York broker-dealer, were charged with paying bribes to a senior government official in Venezuela's state-owned economic development bank, Banco de Desarrollo Económico y Social de Venezuela ("BANDES"), to obtain business for the broker-dealer.

Tomas Alberto Clarke Bethancourt ("Clarke") is a U.S. citizen and, beginning in or around 2008, was the Senior Vice President in the Global Markets Group of DAP. Clarke was listed as the account opening salesman for the BANDES account. Jose Alejandro Hurtado, a U.S. citizen, was an employee of DAP. Ernesto Lujan, also a U.S. citizen, was the Managing Partner of the Global Markets Group of DAP and ran its Miami office beginning in approximately 2008.

Business Location. Venezuela.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $3.6 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $60 million.
3. Intermediary. Shell entity.
4. The foreign official. Maria de los Angeles Gonzalez de Hernandez ("Gonzalez"), a senior official at BANDES.

Influence to be Obtained. From at least December 2008 to October 2010, the DOJ alleges that Lujan, Clarke, and Hurtado paid bribes to Gonzalez. According to the criminal Complaint and subsequent criminal Informations, the parties allegedly attempted to conceal the payments by passing them through a number of intermediary corporations and accounts in Switzerland. At least $9.5 million was allegedly transferred from DAP to a Swiss bank account controlled by Clarke, who in turn transferred at least $6.5 million to a Swiss bank account controlled by Lujan. Lujan allegedly transferred at least $1.5 million of that money to a Swiss bank account controlled by Gonzales.

The court filings also allege that Clarke, Hurtado and Lujan conspired to transfer the money to accounts outside of the U.S. to conceal the payments and route them to Hernandez and that the parties violated the Travel Act.

¹⁶ U.S. v. Lujan, No. 1:13-mj-01501 (S.D.N.Y. 2013).

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

Enforcement. The criminal complaint against Clarke, Hurtado, and Gonzalez was filed in March 2013, but it was unsealed only after they were arrested in Miami on May 3, 2013. Ernesto Lujan was charged and arrested in June 2013.

On August 30, 2013, Clarke, Hurtado, and Lujan pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA, to violate the Travel Act, and to commit money laundering, as well as substantive counts of these offenses. Sentencing for Clarke and Lujan is scheduled for Feb. 11, 2014. Hurtado is scheduled for sentencing on March 6, 2014.

On November 18, Gonzalez pleaded guilty to two counts each of money laundering and violating the Travel Act, as well as conspiracy. Sentencing for Gonzalez is scheduled for Aug. 15, 2014.

Parallel SEC proceedings were commenced against Clarke, Hurtado, and Lujan for securities fraud. The trial has been stayed pending resolution of the criminal action.

139. United States v. Ralph Lauren Corporation (2013)¹⁷

Nature of the Business. Ralph Lauren Corporation (“RLC”), a Delaware corporation headquartered in New York, is in the business of design, marketing, and distribution of apparel, accessories, and other consumer products around the world.

Business Location. Argentina.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $538,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Customs broker.
4. The foreign official. Argentine customs officials and other government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. From 2006 to 2009, the Argentine subsidiary of RLC paid bribes and gifts to Argentine customs officials to assist in improperly obtaining paperwork necessary for its products to clear customs, permit clearance of items without the necessary paperwork, permit clearance of prohibited goods, and avoid inspection of products by Argentine customs officials. The payments were made through a customs broker, who passed the bribes on to customs officials. The gifts, which were given directly to Argentine government officials to secure the importation of RLC’s goods into Argentina, included perfume, dresses, and handbags valued at between $400 and $14,000 each.

Enforcement. On April 22, 2013, RLC entered into a two-year non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ, pursuant to which it admitted to the alleged conduct and agreed to pay an $882,000 penalty. RLC has since ceased its operations in Argentina.

Also on April 22, 2013, RLC entered into a parallel two-year non-prosecution agreement with the SEC, pursuant to which it agreed to pay approximately $735,000 in disgorgement and prejudgment interest.

138. United States v. Frederic Cilins (S.D.N.Y. 2013)¹⁸

Nature of the Business. Press reports describe Cilins as an “agent” of the Beny Steinmetz Group Resources (“BSGR”), who allegedly paid witnesses to obstruct an ongoing FCPA investigation into BSGR’s operations in Guinea. BSGR is a Guernsey-based mining and resource extraction company operating around the world and is owned by Israeli businessman Beny Steinmetz.

Business Location. Guinea.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Not stated.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Agent/consultant.
4. The foreign official. Guinean government official with authority to influence the award of mining concessions.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the complaint and indictment, a federal grand jury was investigating possible violations of the FCPA and anti-money laundering statutes by a mining company in connection with mining concessions in Guinea. During the investigation, investigators began working with the former wife (the “cooperating witness”) of a now-deceased Guinean government official suspected of receiving bribes in exchange for the award of the valuable mining concession. As alleged in the complaint, the cooperating witness revealed that while her husband was in office, both were visited by several individuals from an unnamed company, including the defendant Frederic Cilins. During these meetings, these individuals offered bribes to the cooperating witness and various other government officials to secure valuable mining rights in Guinea.

In March 2013, investigators learned that Cilins contacted the cooperating witness in an effort to destroy any record of the alleged bribes. Through a series of recorded phone calls and face-to-face meetings, Cilins allegedly agreed to pay the cooperating witness approximately $1 million in exchange for the relevant documents, and sought to induce the cooperating witness to sign an affidavit containing false statements. Throughout these conversations, the complaint alleges that Cilins made multiple statements which suggested his actions were at the direction of a superior within the unnamed company.

Enforcement. On April 14, 2013, Cilins was arrested by federal officials in Jacksonville, Florida. Thereafter, on April 25, 2013, Cilins was indicted by a grand jury sitting in the Southern District of New York on five counts of obstruction of justice related charges including tampering with a witness and destroying records in a federal investigation. Cilins pleaded not guilty to all charges and was denied bail.

137. United States v. Parker Drilling Company (E.D. Va. 2013)¹⁹

Nature of the Business. Parker Drilling Company is a publicly listed drilling-services company headquartered in Houston, Texas, with subsidiaries operating throughout the world, including Parker Drilling (Nigeria) Limited, a wholly-owned subsidiary incorporated in Cayman Islands.

Business Location. Nigeria, Mexico.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $1.25 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Saved $3.05 million in fines.
3. Intermediary. Nigerian agent, U.S. law firm.
4. The foreign official. Officials and employees of the Nigerian Minister of Finance, Nigeria State Security Service, Nigeria Customs Service; Nigerian President-appointed “Panel of Inquiry for the Investigation of All Cases of Temporary Import Permits.”

Influence to be Obtained. According to the criminal information filed by the DOJ, in 2001 and 2002 Parker Drilling failed to pay certain tariffs and duties associated with Nigeria’s Customs & Excise Management Act of 1958. When the Nigerian government formed a panel to investigate companies’ compliance to the Act, it found that Parker Drilling had violated Nigeria’s laws and assessed a fine of $3.8 million against the company. During these proceedings, Parker Drilling allegedly retained a Nigerian agent to help resolve the customs issues. Parker Drilling authorized payments to this Nigerian agent totaling $1.25 million, most of which were paid through Parker Drilling’s U.S. law firm. The Nigerian agent used those funds, in part, to entertain Nigerian government officials involved with the customs issues. Subsequently, Parker Drilling’s fine was reduced to $750,000—a reduction of 3.05 million, or approximately 80 percent.

Enforcement. On April 16, 2013, the DOJ filed a criminal information against Parker Drilling, charging the company with violating the anti-bribery provision of the FCPA. On the same day, the DOJ entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement, under which Parker Drilling agreed to pay a monetary penalty of $11,760,000.

In a related settlement with the SEC, Parker Drilling agreed to pay approximately $4.1 million in disgorgement and prejudgment interest.

United States v. Lawrence Hoskins and William Pomponi \(second superseding indictment, filed July 2013\)²¹
United States v. David Rothschild \(D. Conn. 2012\)²²

Nature of the Business. Alstom SA (identified in the pleadings only as a “French power and transportation company”) provides power generation and transportation-related services around the world. Its shares were listed on the NYSE until August 2004. Alstom has several subsidiaries, including subsidiaries in Connecticut, Switzerland, and Indonesia. Lawrence Hoskins was a Senior Vice President for the Asia region at Alstom. William Pomponi was the Vice-President of regional sales at Alstom Connecticut. Frederic Pierucci held executive-level positions at Alstom Connecticut and other Alstom-related entities, including Vice-President of Global Sales. David Rothschild was formerly a vice-president of regional sales at Alstom Connecticut.

Business Location. Indonesia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $2.3 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $118 million.
3. Intermediary. Two Indonesian consultants.
4. The foreign official. An Indonesian Member of Parliament; High-ranking members of Perusahaan Listrik Negara (“PLN”), the state-owned and state-controlled electricity company in Indonesia.

Influence to be Obtained. Pierucci, Pomponi, Hoskins, and Rothschild allegedly paid bribes to Indonesian officials in exchange for their assistance in securing a contract for Alstom to provide power-related services for Indonesian citizens (called the Tarahan Project). One of the PLN officials was a high-ranking member of the evaluation committee for the Tarahan Project, and the other had broad decision-making authority and influence over the award of contracts by PLN, including on the Tarahan Project. The Member of Parliament was also a “key legislator” and “Vice Chairman of the Parliament Commission dedicated for Power and Energy” who had “easy direct access personally to PLN Board.”

The defendants retained two consultants purportedly to provide legitimate consulting services, but actually to use them to pay bribes to Indonesian officials. Defendants were responsible for approving the selection of, and authorizing payments to the consultants, knowing that a portion of these payments was intended for the Indonesian officials.

The first consultant, retained in 2002, was to receive a commission (three percent of the Tarahan Project contract value) from which he was expected to pay bribes. The consultant allegedly received hundreds of thousands of dollars into his Maryland bank account to be used to bribe the Indonesian Member of Parliament and then transferred the bribe money to a bank account in Indonesia for the official's benefit. In 2003, the consulting agreement was amended to restrict the consultant's responsibilities to paying bribes only to the Indonesian Member of Parliament, and accordingly his commission rate was reduced to one percent. Between 2005 and 2009, Alstom Connecticut made four separate payments to the first consultant's bank account in Maryland.

In April 2004, Alstom, its subsidiaries, and its Consortium Partner retained a second consultant in connection with the Tarahan Project. The charges also allege that Alstom deviated from its usual Terms of Payment (whereby it paid consultants on a pro-rata basis) in order to make a much larger up-front payment to the second consultant so that the consultant could "get the right influence."

In May 2005, Alstom, its subsidiaries and its Consortium Partner secured the Tarahan Project.

Enforcement. Lawrence Hoskins was charged as a co-defendant with William Pomponi in a second superseding indictment filed by the DOJ on July 30, 2013. As of December 2013, the case is pending in the District Court of Connecticut.

Pomponi had been previously charged with Frederic Pierucci on April 30, 2013. Pierucci, a French national, was arrested at the New York JFK International Airport on April 14, 2013. On July 29, 2013, Pierucci pleaded guilty to one count of conspiring to violate the FCPA and one count of violating the FCPA. As of December 2013, sentencing information is under seal. Pierucci's indictment was initially filed under seal on November 27, 2012, and was not made publicly available until April 16, 2013.

David Rothschild pleaded guilty to a charge of conspiring to violate the FCPA on November 2, 2012, but the plea was unsealed on April 16, 2013.

135. United States v. Tyco International, Ltd. \(2012\)²³
United States v. Tyco Valves & Controls Middle East, Inc. \(E.D. Va. 2012\)²⁴

Nature of the Business. Tyco International, Ltd., a Swiss company, manufactures and sells products related to security, fire protection, and energy. Tyco Valves & Controls Middle East, Inc. (“TVC ME”) is an indirect, wholly-owned subsidiary of Tyco that sold and marketed valves and other industrial equipment throughout the Middle East for the oil, gas, petrochemical, commercial construction, water treatment, and desalination industries.

Business Location. Iran, Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates (“UAE”).

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $488,479.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $1,153,500.
3. Intermediary. Joint venture; sales agents and consultants; subsidiary companies.
4. The foreign official. Employees of government customers in China, Croatia, India, Libya, Saudi Arabia, Serbia, Syria, Turkey, Malaysia, and the UAE; Officials of Saudi Aramco (“Aramco”), a Saudi Arabian oil and gas company that was wholly owned, controlled, and managed by the government; Officials of Emirates National Oil Company (“ENOC”), a state-owned entity in Dubai; Officials of Vopak Horizon Fujairah (“Vopak”), a subsidiary of ENOC based in the U.A.E.; Officials of National Iranian Gas Company (“NIGC”), a state-owned entity in Iran.

Influence to be Obtained. Between 2003 and 2006, TVC ME, with others, intentionally bribed employees of end-customers in Saudi Arabia, the UAE, and Iran, including employees at Aramco, ENOC, Vopak, and NIGC, to obtain or retain business. TVC ME also paid bribes to employees of foreign government customers to remove TVC manufacturing plants from various Aramco “blacklists” or “holds,” to win specific bids, and obtain specific product approval.

TVC ME improperly recorded the bribes in company books, records, and accounts, falsely describing the payments, as “consultancy costs,” “commissions,” or “equipment costs.” TVC ME also made payments through a Local Sponsor [a company in Saudi Arabia that acted as a distributor for TVC ME in Saudi Arabia]. The Local Sponsor provided TVC ME with false documentation, such as fictitious invoices for consultancy costs, bills for fictitious commissions, or “unanticipated costs for equipment,” to justify payments to the Local Sponsor that were intended to be used for bribes. The Local Sponsor received commissions for all contracts that they secured for TVC ME in Saudi Arabia.

Enforcement. On September 20, 2012, Tyco International entered into a non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ under which it agreed to pay a $13.68 million penalty for falsifying books and records in connection with corrupt payments by its subsidiaries (including TVC ME) to foreign government officials.

134. United States v. Pfizer H.C.P. Corporation (D.D.C. 2012)²⁵

Nature of the Business. Pfizer Inc. is a global pharmaceutical, animal health, and consumer products company incorporated in Delaware. Pfizer H.C.P. Corporation is an indirect wholly-owned subsidiary of Pfizer Inc.

Business Location. Bulgaria, Croatia, Kazakhstan, Russia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $2 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Sales agents and consultants; subsidiary companies.
4. The foreign official. Unspecified Croatian official and professor; Russian medical doctors employed at public hospitals; high-ranking Russian government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. Employees at Pfizer HCP and Pfizer Inc.'s Russian subsidiary made and authorized payments of cash and other things of value to government officials (including doctors employed by state-owned hospitals) for the purpose of improperly influencing their decisions regarding regulatory and formulary approvals, purchase decisions, prescription decisions, and customs clearance.

In Bulgaria, Pfizer HCP employees gave doctors employed in Bulgarian public hospitals a specific target for prescriptions and provided support for international travel on the basis of promises to prescribe Pfizer products by the doctors. Managers referred to the bribes as “sponsorships” and instructed sales staff to “very precisely state the grounds for recommending the sponsorship, and also what the doctor in question is expected to do or has already done.”

In Croatia, Pfizer HCP employees entered into a bogus “consulting agreement” with a Croatian government official to secure the registration of Pfizer products. Pfizer HCP's Croatian employees entered into agreements with doctors employed at public hospitals, who promised purchases of a Pfizer product in exchange for travel benefits and bonuses based on a percentage of sales.

In Kazakhstan, Pfizer HCP entered into an exclusive distribution contract for a Pfizer product with a Kazakh company, believing that all or part of the value of the contract would be provided to a high-level Kazakh government official to corruptly obtain approval for the registration of a Pfizer product in Kazakhstan.

In Russia, Pfizer Russia employees used conference attendance and travel as a corrupt inducement for healthcare providers to prescribe or purchase Pfizer products. Pfizer Russia employees also used purported sales initiatives to make corrupt payments. The sales initiative, known as the “Hospital Program,” appeared to be a mechanism for Pfizer Russia to provide the equivalent of indirect price discounts or in-kind benefits to government hospitals in connection with their purchases of Pfizer products. In practice, however, the Hospital Program was used to make cash payments to individual healthcare professionals to corruptly influence purchases and prescriptions.

Funds for these payments were often generated by Pfizer HCP employees through the use of collusive vendors to create fraudulent invoices. The payments were falsely recorded in Pfizer’s books and records, as “Travel and Entertainment,” “Convention and Trade Meetings and Conference,” “Distribution Freight,” “Clinical Grants/Clinical Trials,” “Gifts,” and “Professional Services - Non Consultant.”

Enforcement. On August 7, 2012, the Pfizer HCP entered into a two-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ under which Pfizer HCP agreed to pay a fine of $15 million, implement an “enhanced” corporate compliance program, and engage in regular reporting to the DOJ regarding the status of its remediation and implementation of the enhanced compliance measures.

In a related civil settlement with the SEC, Pfizer HCP’s parent company Pfizer Inc. agreed to pay disgorgement and prejudgment interest of approximately $26.3 million.

133. United States v. The NORDAM Group, Inc. \(2012\)²⁶

Nature of the Business. The NORDAM Group Inc., a Delaware corporation based in Tulsa, Oklahoma, manufactures aircraft parts and provides aircraft maintenance, repair and overhaul (“MRO”) services. NORDAM Singapore Pte Ltd. (“NSPL”) is a wholly-owned subsidiary of NORDAM.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $1.5 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Over $2.48 million in contract profits.
3. Intermediary. Subsidiary company.
4. The foreign official. Employees of airlines controlled and owned by the Chinese government.

Influence to be Obtained. Between 1999 and 2008, employees of NORDAM allegedly paid bribes totaling $1.5 million to employees of airlines controlled and owned by the People’s Republic of China to secure contracts to perform MRO services for those airlines.

The bribes paid both directly and indirectly to airline employees were referred to internally as “commissions” or “facilitator fees.” These facilitator fees were paid to “facilitators,” who were the actual employees of NORDAM’s customers. In an effort to disguise the bribes, three employees of NORDAM’s affiliate entered into sales representation agreements with fictitious entities and then used the money paid by NORDAM to those entities to pay bribes to the airlines employees.

Although many of the bribe payments were paid out of NORDAM’s gross profits, in some instances NORDAM and its affiliates artificially inflated the customer invoice to offset the bribes paid to those customers’ employees. As a result, in these instances, NORDAM’s customers were unknowingly reimbursing NORDAM for the bribes that NORDAM paid to customer employees to secure the projects.

Enforcement. On July 17, 2012, NORDAM entered into a three-year non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ. As part of that agreement, NORDAM is required to cease and desist from further violating the books and records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA and pay a penalty of $2 million. In addition to the monetary penalty, NORDAM must adhere to rigorous compliance, bookkeeping, and internal controls standards and cooperate fully with the DOJ. The NPA notes that the DOJ agreed to a fine below the standard range because NORDAM demonstrated that a fine exceeding $2 million would jeopardize its continued viability.

Nature of the Business. Orthofix International, N.V. is a multinational corporation involved in the design, development, manufacture, marketing, and distribution of medical devices. Although incorporated in Curaçao, it is based in Lewisville, Texas, and operates in multiple countries around the world including the U.S, the U.K, Italy, and Mexico. Orthofix is publicly traded on the NASDAQ stock exchange.

Business Location. Mexico.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $300,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Subsidiary company.
4. The foreign official. Employees of state-owned hospitals; officials employed by the Mexican state social-services agency, the Instituto Mexicano del Seguro Social (“IMSS”).

Influence to be Obtained. According to the criminal information, Orthofix and its Mexican subsidiary Promeca, S.A de C.V. (“Promeca”) sought to secure agreements from Mexican officials employed by state-owned hospitals as well as the IMSS that guaranteed the sale of Orthofix products. In return for the agreements, the Mexican officials would receive a percentage of the collected revenue generated as a result of the sales in addition to various other gifts which Orthofix officials commonly referred to as “chocolates.” The Orthofix official overseeing Promeca was aware of the conduct but failed to stop or report the scheme to Orthofix. These payments were disguised as “promotional expenses” on Promeca’s books and records.

Enforcement. On July 10, 2012, the DOJ filed a criminal information alleging that Orthofix violated the FCPA’s internal control provisions by failing to maintain an effective anti-corruption compliance program and adequate financial controls. As an example, the DOJ cited Orthofix’s failure to translate its anti-corruption policy into Spanish and its failure to train both Orthofix and Promeca employees on these anti-corruption policies. Orthofix settled the DOJ’s charges through a deferred prosecution agreement where it agreed to pay $2.22 million in monetary penalties, undertake various improvements in its anti-corruption compliance program, and perform an “independent review” as part of a self-monitoring requirement.

In a related civil settlement with the SEC, Orthofix agreed to pay approximately $5.2 million in disgorgement and prejudgment interest.

Nature of the Business. Data Systems & Solutions LLC (“DS&S”), a U.S. limited liability company incorporated in Delaware and headquartered in Reston, Virginia, provides design, installation, maintenance, and other services to nuclear power and fossil fuel plants.

Business Location. Lithuania.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $485,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $32.4 million.
3. Intermediary. Subcontractor.
4. The foreign official. Officials at the Ignalina Nuclear Power Plant, a state-owned nuclear power plant in Lithuania.

Influence to be Obtained. Starting in 1999 and through June 2004, DS&S directly and through third-party subcontractors paid bribes and other things of value to officials at Ignalina Nuclear Power Plant in exchange for multi-million instrumentation and controls contracts. These bribes were funneled through third-party subcontractors located in the United States and abroad. The subcontractors, in turn, made repeated payments to high-level officials at Ignalina Nuclear Power Plant via check or wire transfer. The payments were often disguised through fictitious scopes of work and payment of above-market rates to employees of the subcontractors. DS&S also provided gifts, entertainment, and payment of domestic and international travel to employees of Ignalina Nuclear Power Plant in exchange for those employees’ agreements to secure contracts for DS&S.

Enforcement. On June 18, 2012, Data Systems & Solutions entered into a two-year deferred prosecution agreement under which DS&S agreed to pay a fine of $8.82 million, to take remedial actions to implement and correct deficiencies in its compliance program, and to make periodic reports to the DOJ regarding its remedial efforts. The DOJ noted that entry into the DPA was supported by DS&S’s extraordinary cooperation and extensive remediation that it had undertaken during and after an internal investigation.

130. United States v. Garth Peterson (E.D.N.Y. 2012)²⁹

Nature of the Business. Garth Peterson, an American citizen, was a managing director in charge of Morgan Stanley's Real Estate Group's ("MSRE") Shanghai office. Morgan Stanley is a global financial services firm listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Morgan Stanley, through MSRE, created and managed real estate funds for institutional investors and high net-worth investors.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $2.8 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unspecified.
3. Intermediary. Shell entity.
4. The foreign official. Executive at Shanghai Yongye Enterprise (Group) Co. Ltd. ("Yongye"), a state-owned, limited liability corporation incorporated by the Luwan District government, to operate as the Luwan District government's real estate development arm.

Influence to be Obtained. In the fall of 2004, a Chinese official at Yongye helped to facilitate Morgan Stanley's purchase of a building. To consummate the purchase, MSRE required the consent of the Chinese Official. MSRE obtained this consent, and the Chinese Official further helped MSRE to obtain governmental approvals. In exchange for this assistance, Peterson conspired to circumvent Morgan Stanley's internal controls to transfer a multi-million dollar interest in the Shanghai tower to compensate the Chinese Official. Peterson falsely represented to Morgan Stanley that Yongye was purchasing a real estate interest in the tower, when in fact the interest would be conveyed to a shell company controlled by him, the Chinese Official, and a Canadian lawyer. After Peterson and his co-conspirators falsely represented to Morgan Stanley that Yongye owned the shell company, Morgan Stanley sold the real estate interest in 2006 to the shell company at a discount. In 2006, the real estate interest appreciated significantly, and, as a result, the Chinese Official realized an immediate paper profit of approximately $2.8 million.

Enforcement. On April 25, 2012, Peterson pleaded guilty to a one-count criminal information charging him with conspiring to evade Morgan Stanley's internal controls. Peterson's employer, Morgan Stanley, was not subject to civil or criminal charges. The DOJ noted in its information Morgan Stanley's strong compliance program and the lengths to which Morgan Stanley went to train and remind Peterson of FCPA compliance.

On August 16, 2012, Peterson was sentenced to nine months of incarceration and three years of supervised release. This sentence was significantly shorter than the 57-71 month range recommended by the Sentencing Guidelines and the 57 months sought by the prosecutors. A civil fine was not imposed because, in a separate civil action, Peterson was ordered to disgorge approximately $3.82 million. In a separately filed statement, Judge Jack B. Weinstein explained that the sentence reflected the seriousness of the crime and was sufficient, but not greater than necessary, to comply with the purposes of sentencing. Judge Weinstein took into account Peterson's harsh upbringing and then opined that white collar criminals are more easily deterred because they are more likely to weigh the risks against the probability of any gain. Lastly, Judge Weinstein noted that the sentence would send a message that any bribery of foreign officials will result in a substantial prison sentence and significant financial penalties.

129. United States v. Biomet, Inc. (D.D.C. 2012)³⁰

Nature of the Business. Biomet, Inc. is a manufacturer of orthopedic medical devices. Biomet is incorporated in Indiana and has its principal place of business in Warsaw, Indiana.

Business Location. Argentina, Brazil, China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $1,536,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Subsidiary companies, third party distributors.
4. The foreign official. Health care providers employed by publicly-owned and operated hospitals in Argentina, Brazil, and China.

Influence to be Obtained. From approximately 2000 to 2008, Biomet, its subsidiaries, employees, and agents made various improper payments to health care providers employed at publicly owned and operated hospitals in Argentina, Brazil, and China to secure lucrative business for sales of Biomet products to hospitals. Biomet conducted business in these countries through subsidiaries, including Biomet Argentina SA, Biomet International Corporation, Biomet China, and Scandimed AB.

In Argentina, Biomet employees paid doctors kickbacks of between 15 and 20 percent of each sale. Phony invoices were used to justify the payments, and the bribes were recorded as “consulting fees” or “commissions” in Biomet’s books and records. Executives and internal auditors at Biomet’s Indiana headquarters were aware of the payments as early as 2000, but failed to stop them.

In Brazil, Biomet employees used a Brazilian distributor to bribe doctors in Brazil by paying them between 10 and 20 percent of the value of their medical device purchases. The distributor, Biomet International employees, and Biomet’s executives and internal auditors in the United States openly discussed the payments in communications.

In China, Biomet employees paid bribes through a Chinese distributor who provided doctors with money and travel in exchange for their purchases of Biomet products. These allegations include payments of “consulting fees” of between 5 and 20 percent of sales, with one surgeon receiving 25 percent upon completion of a surgery. Additionally, Biomet provided a dinner for a doctor, followed by a possible trip to Switzerland to visit his daughter and organized a trip for 20 surgeons to Spain for training, where a substantial portion of the trip was devoted to sightseeing and entertainment at Biomet’s expense.

Enforcement. The DOJ filed a criminal information against Biomet on March 26, 2012, charging Biomet with one count of conspiracy to violate the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA, three counts of violations of the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA, and one count of violating the books and records provisions of the FCPA. On the same day, Biomet entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement under which Biomet agreed to pay a monetary penalty of $17.28 million. Additionally, Biomet agreed to retain an independent corporate compliance monitor for a minimum period of 18 months and to self-monitor and report for the remainder of the DPA period.

On March 26, 2012, the SEC filed a civil complaint against Biomet. Biomet consented to the entry of a court order permanently enjoining it from any future FCPA violations and agreed to pay disgorgement and prejudgment interest totaling $5.57 million. The SEC ordered Biomet to retain an independent corporate compliance monitor for a period of 18 months.

United States v. Lufthansa Technik AG \(2012\)³²

Nature of the Business. BizJet International Sales and Support, Inc. is a provider of aircraft maintenance, repair and overhaul services based in Tulsa, Oklahoma. It is a subsidiary of Lufthansa Technik AG, a German provider of aircraft-related services.

Business Location. Mexico, Panama.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $565,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Shell company.
4. The foreign official. Officials and employees of the Mexican Policia Federal Preventiva, Mexican Coordinacion General de Transportes Aereos Presidenciales, Gobierno del Estado de Sinaloa, and the Republica de Panama Autoridad Aeronautica Civil.

Influence to be Obtained. According to court documents, from 2004 to about March 2010, BizJet engaged in a conspiracy to violate the FCPA by bribing government officials in Mexico and Panama to secure contract to perform aircraft MRO services for government agencies.

BizJet paid bribes to officials employed by the Mexican Policia Federal Preventiva (the Mexican federal police), the Mexican Coordinacion General de Transportes Aereos Presidenciales (the Mexican president's fleet), the air fleet for the Gobierno del Estado de Sinaloa (the Mexican State of Sinaloa), the air fleet for the Gobierno del Estado de Sonora (the Mexican State of Sonora), and the Republica de Panama Autoridad Aeronautica Civil (the Panamanian aviation authority). In many instances, BizJet paid the bribes directly to the foreign officials. In other instances, BizJet funneled the bribes through a shell company owned and operated by a BizJet sales manager. BizJet executives orchestrated, authorized, and approved the unlawful payments.

Enforcement. On March 12, 2012, Bizjet entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ under which it agreed to pay a monetary penalty of $11.8 million. Bizjet also agreed to report periodically to the DOJ regarding its compliance programs. Bizjet's parent company, Lufthansa Technik, entered into a non-prosecution agreement for related conduct but was not subject to a monetary penalty.

127. United States v. Smith & Nephew, Inc. (2012)³³

Nature of the Business. Smith & Nephew, plc is a global medical company incorporated in England and Wales. It issued and maintained a class of publicly-traded securities which traded on the New York Stock Exchange. Smith & Nephew, Inc. (“S&N Inc.”) was a wholly-owned subsidiary of Smith & Nephew, plc, and was a global manufacturer and supplier of orthopedic medical devices. S&N Inc. was incorporated in Delaware and headquartered in Memphis, Tennessee.

Business Location. Greece.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $9.4 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Shell companies, subsidiary companies.
4. The foreign official. Publicly-employed doctors and healthcare providers in Greece.

Influence to be Obtained. From about 1998 to about 2008, Smith & Nephew, through certain executives, employees, and affiliates, funded an offshore slush fund by selling products at full list price to a Greek distributor based in Athens and then paying the “distributor discount” to an offshore shell company controlled by the distributor. The distributor then paid cash incentives and other things of value to publicly-employed Greek health care providers to induce the purchase of medical devices manufactured by Smith & Nephew. The funds were recorded as “marketing services” to conceal the true nature of the payments in the consolidated books and records of Smith & Nephew and its subsidiaries.

Enforcement. On February 6, 2012, the DOJ filed a criminal information against S&N Inc., charging S&N Inc. with violations of the FCPA’s anti-bribery and books-and-records provisions and aiding and abetting the books and records provisions of the FCPA. On the same day, the DOJ entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement with S&N Inc. under which S&N Inc. agreed to pay a monetary penalty of $16.8 million. Additionally, the agreement calls for a monitorship term of 18 months and self-monitoring and reporting for the remainder of the DPA period.

In a related settlement with the SEC, parent company Smith & Nephew plc agreed to pay approximately $5.4 million in disgorgement and prejudgment interest.

126. United States v. Marubeni Corporation (S.D. Tex. 2012)³⁴

Nature of the Business. Marubeni Corporation, a foreign trading company organized under the laws of Japan, was an agent of the four-company joint venture formed in 1990 for bidding on a series of contracts to design and build a liquefied natural gas plant and several expansions in Bonny Island, Nigeria. The joint venture consisted of Technip S.A., Snamprogetti Netherlands B.V., Kellogg, Brown & Root, Inc., and JGC Corporation (collectively, “TSKJ”).

Business Location. Nigeria, Japan.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $51 million transferred to Marubeni’s bank account in Japan during the course of the bribery scheme, to be used, in part, to bribe Nigerian officials.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $6 billion.
3. Intermediary. Sales agent.
4. The foreign official. Nigerian government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. According to court documents, Marubeni was hired to pay bribes to lower-level Nigerian officials in connection with the Bonny Island project. On two occasions, an employee of Marubeni allegedly met with successive holders of a top-level Nigerian office to ask the office holder to designate a representative with whom TSKJ should negotiate bribes to Nigerian government officials.

TSKJ transferred $51 million to Marubeni’s bank account in Japan during the course of the bribery scheme, intending these funds to be used, in part, to bribe Nigerian officials. Marubeni’s alleged co-conspirators transferred another $132 million to bank accounts controlled by Jeffrey Tesler, another agent of the joint venture, for Tesler to use to bribe Nigerian government officials.

Enforcement. On January 17, 2012, the DOJ and Marubeni Corporation entered into a deferred prosecution agreement under which Marubeni agreed to pay a $54.6 million penalty. Marubeni also implemented and agreed to continue complying with a compliance and ethics program designed to prevent and detect violations of the FCPA, the anti-corruption provisions of Japanese law, and other applicable anti-corruption laws. Marubeni further agreed to engage an independent corporate compliance consultant to evaluate Marubeni’s corporate compliance program with respect to the FCPA and Japanese anti-corruption laws.

125. United States v. Magyar Telekom, Plc. (E.D. Va. 2011)³⁵

Nature of the Business. Magyar Telekom is the largest telecommunications company in Hungary. During the relevant time period, Deutsche Telekom, a private stock corporation organized under the laws of Germany, owns a controlling interest in Magyar Telekom. During the relevant period, both companies were issuers in the United States.

Business Location. Macedonia, Montenegro.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. €12,225,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unspecified.
3. Intermediary. Shell companies and third-party intermediaries.
4. The foreign official. Macedonian and Montenegrin government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the criminal information, Magyar Telekom's scheme in Macedonia stemmed from potential legal changes being made to the telecommunications market in that country. In early 2005, the Macedonian government tried to liberalize the Macedonian telecommunications market in a way that Magyar Telekom deemed detrimental to its Macedonian subsidiary. Magyar Telekom eventually entered into a secret agreement (the "Protocol of Cooperation") with certain high-ranking Macedonian government officials to resolve its concerns about the legal changes. Macedonian government officials agreed to delay the entrance of a third mobile license into the Macedonian telecommunications market, as well as other regulatory benefits. Magyar Telekom executives signed two copies of the Protocol of Cooperation, each with high-ranking officials of the different ruling parties of Macedonia. The Magyar Telekom executives then kept the only executed copies outside of Magyar Telekom's company records.

Pursuant to the Protocol of Cooperation, Magyar Telekom executives allegedly engaged in a course of conduct with consultants, intermediaries and other third parties, including through sham consultancy contracts with entities owned and controlled by a Greek intermediary, to make payments under circumstances in which they knew, or were aware of a high probability that circumstances existed in which, all or part of such payment would be passed on to Macedonian officials. The sham contracts were recorded as legitimate on the books and records of Magyar Telekom's subsidiary, which were then consolidated into Magyar Telekom's financials. Deutsche Telekom, Magyar Telekom's parent company, reported the results of Magyar Telekom's operations in its consolidated financial statements.

Enforcement. On December 29, 2011, the DOJ filed a criminal information against Magyar Telekom, charging Magyar Telekom with violations of the anti-bribery and books and records provisions of the

FCPA. On the same day, the DOJ entered into a two-year deferred prosecution agreement with Magyar Telekom, under which Magyar Telekom agreed to pay a monetary penalty of $59.6 million. The DOJ also entered into a non-prosecution agreement with Deutsche Telekom, under which Deutsche Telekom agreed to pay $4.36 million for failure to keep books and records that accurately detailed the activities of Magyar Telekom.

Also on December 29, 2011, the SEC filed a civil complaint against Magyar Telekom and Deutsche Telekom. Magyar Telekom, without admitting or denying the allegations against it, consented to a court order permanently enjoining it from any future FCPA violations. The company further agreed to pay $31.2 million in disgorgement and prejudgment interest.

125. United States v. Aon Corporation (2011)³⁶

Nature of the Business. Reinsurance contracts for Aon Limited, a U.K. subsidiary of Aon Corporation (“Aon”). Aon, a Delaware corporation headquartered in Chicago, is one of the largest insurance brokerage firms in the world. The company’s primary business activities involve risk management services, insurance, and reinsurance brokerage.

Business Location. Costa Rica, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, Egypt, Indonesia, Myanmar, Panama, United Arab Emirates, Vietnam.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. 865,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $1,840,200.
3. Intermediary. A tourism company associated with a government official.
4. The foreign official. Officials at the Instituto Nacional De Seguros (“INS”), Costa Rica’s state-owned insurance company.

Influence to be Obtained. In 1997, Aon Limited acquired the British insurance brokerage firm Alexander Howden and took over management of a “training and education” fund set up by Alexander Howden in connection with its reinsurance business with INS. The purported purpose of the fund was to provide education and training for INS officials. Beginning in 1997, Aon Limited contributed to this fund by allocating a portion of the brokerage commission on its INS account to the fund each year. By 2002, approximately $215,000 was deposited in the funds. Beginning in 1999, at INS’s request, Aon Limited also managed a second “training account” that was funded by contributions from other reinsurers of 3% of the premiums paid under reinsurance contracts with INS.

Between 1997 and 2005, Aon Limited used nearly all of the money contributed to these funds to reimburse INS officials for non-training related activity, including travel with spouses to overseas tourist destinations. Although some of these trips were in connection with conferences and seminars, many of the invoices and other records for trips taken by INS officials did not provide any business purpose for the expenditures, or showed that the expenses were clearly not related to a legitimate business purpose. A majority of the money paid from the funds was disbursed to a Costa Rican tourism company for which the director of the INS reinsurance department served on the board of directors.

According to the non-prosecution agreement, Aon also disclosed facts relating to improper payments in Bangladesh, Bulgaria, Egypt, Indonesia, Myanmar, Panama, the United Arab Emirates, and Vietnam.

Enforcement. Aon entered a two-year non-prosecution agreement on December 20, 2011. As part of that agreement, Aon admitted that Aon Limited’s accounting books and records related to the funds were inaccurate and that it failed to devise and maintain an adequate system of internal accounting controls with respect to foreign sales activities sufficient to ensure compliance with the FCPA. Aon agreed to pay a $1.764 million penalty to resolve violations of the FCPA. In addition to the monetary penalty, Aon Corporation must adhere to rigorous compliance, bookkeeping, and internal controls standards and cooperate fully with the DOJ.

In December 2009, Aon Limited was fined £5.25 million under a settlement with the U.K.'s Financial Services Authority for failure to establish internal controls sufficient to detect potentially corrupt payments made to third parties in Bahrain, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, Burma, Indonesia, and Vietnam. The DOJ noted that the financial penalty already paid to the U.K.'s Financial Services Authority ("FSA") by Aon Limited for improper conduct in some of these countries, and the FSA's continued supervision of AON Limited, contributed to the DOJ's decision to enter the non-prosecution agreement with Aon.

124. *United States v. Uriel Sharef, Herbert Steffen, Andres Truppel, Ulrich Bock, Eberhard Reichert, Stephan Signer, Carlos Sergi, and Miguel Czych (S.D.N.Y. 2011)*³⁷

Nature of the Business. Siemens AG is an engineering company headquartered in Munich, Germany. Siemens Business Services GmbH & Co. (“SBS”) and Siemens S.A. (“Siemens Argentina”) are both subsidiaries of Siemens AG. All allegations in this case are related to a project to develop a new national identity card in Argentina.

All of the defendants are non-U.S. citizens. Uriel Sharef, a dual citizen of Germany and Israel, was a member of Siemens AG’s Managing Board. Herbert Steffen, a citizen of Germany, was group president of Siemens AG’s transportation systems operating group, and was previously CEO of Siemens Argentina. Andres Truppel, a dual citizen of Germany and Argentina, was a consultant to Siemens, and previously CFO of Siemens Argentina. Ulrich Bock, a citizen of Germany, was a consultant to Siemens, and previously commercial head of SBS’s Major Projects subdivision. Eberhard Reichert, a citizen of Germany, was technical head of SBS’s Major Projects subdivision. Stephan Signer, a citizen of Germany, worked for SBS as a commercial director. Carlos Sergi, a citizen of Argentina, was a businessman with extensive high-level government contracts in Argentina. Miguel Czych, a citizen of Argentina, was a business associate of Carlos Sergi.

Business Location. Argentina.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $100 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $1 billion.
3. Intermediary. Business consultants and agents, shell companies.
4. The foreign official. Argentine government officials and Argentine candidates for office.

Influence to be Obtained. In 1994, the Government of Argentina issued a tender for bids to replace an existing system of manually created national identity booklets with state-of-the-art national identity cards (the “DNI Project”). According to the Indictment, the defendants paid and promised to pay bribes to Argentine government officials to obtain the contract, which was eventually awarded to Siemens. The defendants worked to conceal the illicit payments through various means, including sham contracts and shell companies associated with Sergi, Czych and other intermediaries. In May 1999, however, the Argentine government suspended the DNI project. When a new government took power in Argentina, and in the hopes of getting the DNI project resumed, the defendants allegedly paid additional bribes to the incoming officials. When the project was terminated in May 2001, the defendants allegedly responded with a multi-faceted strategy to overcome the termination. According to the Indictment, the defendants sought to recover the anticipated proceeds of the DNI project, notwithstanding the termination, by causing Siemens AG to file a fraudulent arbitration claim against the Republic of Argentina. Defendants allegedly caused Siemens to actively hide from the arbitral tribunal the fact that the DNI contract had been secured through bribery and corruption. A separate arbitration was initiated in Switzerland to enforce a sham contract between SBS and Mfast Consulting, a shell company controlled by intermediaries Sergi and Czych. The Indictment also alleges that the defendants continued the bribery scheme until August 2009, to prevent disclosure of the bribery in the arbitration and to ensure Siemens's ability to secure future government contracts in Argentina.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

Enforcement. On December 13, 2011, the DOJ filed a criminal indictment against the defendants, alleging conspiracy to violate the anti-bribery and books and records provisions of the FCPA, conspiracy to commit money laundering, and conspiracy to commit wire fraud. The DOJ also brought substantive wire fraud allegations. On December 13, 2011, the Government sent a letter to the court stating that the defendants all reside overseas and that none of the defendants are currently in custody. In the letter, the Government promised to keep the court apprised of any developments regarding the defendants' extradition. There have been no updates as of December 2013.

On the same day, the SEC filed a civil complaint alleging similar facts against many of the defendants in the DOJ case, excluding Eberhard Reichert and Miguel Czych, but including Bernd Regendantz. Regendantz was the only defendant to settle with the SEC when the civil complaint and criminal indictment were filed, and he is the only SEC defendant that is not included in the DOJ Indictment.

Previous DOJ and SEC actions against Siemens AG and its subsidiaries were filed and settled in 2008, in part based on the alleged conduct in Argentina. In the criminal action, all corporate defendants pleaded guilty (Siemens Argentina to conspiring to falsify Siemens AG's books; Siemens AG to wire fraud, books and records, and internal controls; Siemens Bangladesh and Siemens Venezuela to FCPA bribery charges), and agreed to pay criminal fines totaling $450 million. In the parallel SEC action against the corporate defendants, Siemens AG agreed to disgorge more than $350 million in ill-gotten profits. Siemens also settled with German authorities, agreeing to pay a total of €596 million in penalties.

123. United States v. Bridgestone Corporation (S.D. Tex. 2011)³⁸

Nature of the Business. Sale of marine hose in Mexico and other Latin American countries by Bridgestone International Products of America Inc. (“BIPA”), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Bridgestone Corporation (“Bridgestone”). Bridgestone is a Japanese corporation that manufactures and sells diversified industrial, chemical, and electronic products. BIPA has offices in Nashville, Tennessee and Houston, Texas and sells Bridgestone’s industrial products in North, Central, and South America.

Business Location. Mexico and other unspecified Latin America countries.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. More than $2 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $17,103,694.
3. Intermediary. Sales Agents.
4. The foreign official. Government officials employed at unidentified state-owned entities.

Influence to be Obtained. From January 1999 through May 2007, Bridgestone authorized and approved corrupt payments to be made through BIPA’s local sales agents to foreign government officials at state-owned entities in Latin America. The purpose of these payments was to secure contracts for its industrial products, including marine hose. BIPA’s local sales agents would gather information about potential projects for Bridgestone and pay government officials a percentage of the total value of the proposed contracts for those projects.

The proposed marine hose deals, including the corrupt payments, were approved by personnel at the International Engineering Products Department (“IEPD”) at Bridgestone. Once IEPD approved the deal and corrupt payments, BIPA would place the bid through the local sales agents. When BIPA secured the project, it paid the local sales agent a “commission” inflated by the amount of the corrupt payments to be made to employees of the state-owned customer. The local sales agent was then responsible for making the agreed-upon corrupt payment to the employee of the state-owned customer.

Enforcement. On September 15, 2011, Bridgestone pleaded guilty to a two-count criminal information and agreed to pay a criminal fine of $28 million. The information asserted one count for conspiracy to violate the Sherman Act, alleging that Bridgestone engaged in a bid-rigging and price-fixing conspiracy among major marine hose manufacturers from 1999 to 2007. The information also alleged a second count for conspiracy to violate the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA.

Previously, Hioki, a General Manager at IEPD, pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to violate the Sherman Act and another count of conspiracy to violate the FCPA in connection with the offenses alleged against Bridgestone, and was sentenced to twenty-four months in prison and ordered to pay an $80,000 criminal penalty.

The DOJ cited Bridgestone's extraordinary cooperation and its extensive remediation efforts as mitigating factors under the plea agreement. On October 7, 2011, the Court approved the plea agreement and sentenced Bridgestone to a $28 million criminal penalty.

122. *United States v. Tenaris, S.A. (2011)*³⁹

Nature of the Business. Tenaris, S.A. (“Tenaris”) is a corporation organized under the laws of Luxembourg. Tenaris is a global manufacturer and supplier of steel pipe products and related services to the oil and gas industry throughout the world. Tenaris’s operations include supplying steel pipe and related services in the Caspian Sea region, including Uzbekistan, through Tenaris’s offices in Azerbaijan and Kazakhstan.

Business Location. Uzbekistan.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. More than $32,140.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unknown.
3. Intermediary. Agent.
4. The foreign official. Officials at OJSC O’ztashqineftgaz (“OAO”), a subsidiary of Uzbekneftegaz, the state-owned holding company of Uzbekistan’s oil and gas industry.

Influence to be Obtained. During 2006 and 2007, Tenaris utilized the services of an agent to bid on a series of contracts with OJSC O’ztashqineftgaz (“OAO”). In or around February 2007, Tenaris entered into an agreement to pay the agent a commission of 3.5% for access to confidential bid information. Using the confidential bid information, Tenaris was awarded the contract and OAO agreed to pay Tenaris $2,719,720 for pipe used in oil and gas development in Uzbekistan. In or around April and May 2007, Tenaris entered into an agreement to pay the agent a commission of 3% for bid information related to three additional OAO contracts. By using confidential bid information Tenaris was awarded the three contracts. Tenaris’s then-regional sales personnel understood that a portion of the commissions paid to the agent would be used to pay OAO officials.

Tenaris’s then-regional sales personnel also agreed to make payments to the Uzbek government agency, Uzbekexpertiza JSC (“Uzbekexpertiza”), to encourage Uzbekexpertiza not to investigate the bidding process. However, evidence of such payment was not found. According to the SEC, in or around 2007, Tenaris also failed to accurately account for these transactions with the agent and payments to OAO officials on their books and records. Tenaris’s system of internal controls also allegedly failed to detect or prevent payments to OAO officials, including a failure to ensure that proper due diligence was conducted on the agent.

Enforcement. On May 17, 2011, the DOJ and Tenaris entered into a two-year non-prosecution agreement, under which Tenaris agreed to pay a monetary penalty in the amount of $3.5 million, implement rigorous compliance measures, toll the statute of limitations, adhere to enhanced reporting obligations, disclose required information, and cooperate fully with all law enforcement agencies. The non-prosecution agreement also required Tenaris to admit to the relevant facts.

On May 17, 2011 Tenaris also entered into a deferred prosecution agreement with the SEC, under which Tenaris agreed to pay disgorgement and prejudgment interest of $5.4 million, implement compliance measures, cooperate with the ongoing investigation, toll the statute of limitations, and observe and enhance reporting obligations. Tenaris is the first company to ever enter into a deferred prosecution agreement with the SEC.

4. The foreign official. Officials at the United Nations and other unspecified government customers.

Influence to be Obtained. From September 2001 through 2006, certain agents of Armor Holdings made corrupt payments to an U.N. procurement official to induce that official to provide non-public, inside information to an Armor Holdings subsidiary and to cause the U.N. to award body armor contracts to that subsidiary. Armor Holdings made more than $200,000 in commissions payments to an independent sales agent, a portion of which was forwarded to the U.N. procurement official. Armor Holdings employees falsely recorded the nature and purpose of these improper payments in Armor Holding’s books and records.

An Armor Holdings subsidiary also allegedly employed a separate accounting practice that disguised additional commissions paid to third-party intermediaries who brokered the sale of goods to foreign governments. Even after being warned by internal and external accountants that this practice violated U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles, Armor Holdings’ subsidiary continued the improper accounting practice. As a result, approximately $4.4 million in commissions was not properly disclosed in the books and records of the company.

Enforcement. On July 13, 2011, Armor Holdings entered into a non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ, under which it agreed to pay a monetary penalty of $10,290,000.

Separately, in an agreement with the SEC, Armor Holdings consented to entry of a permanent injunction against further violations and agreed to pay $1,552,306 in disgorgement, $458,438 in prejudgment interest, and a civil money penalty of $3,680,000.

120. United States v. DePuy, Inc. (D.D.C. 2011)⁴¹

Nature of the Business. Sale of medical devices and pharmaceuticals manufactured by DePuy, Inc. (“DePuy”) and DePuy International, both wholly-owned subsidiaries of Johnson & Johnson, a U.S.-based manufacturer and seller of health care products. Other subsidiaries, employees, and agents of Johnson & Johnson paid bribes to publicly-employed health care providers in Poland and Romania and paid kickbacks to the former government of Iraq in connection with the U.N. Oil for Food Program.

Business Location. Greece, Iraq, Poland, Romania.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Unspecified.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unspecified.
3. Intermediary. Greek distributor.
4. The foreign official. Publicly-employed doctors in Greece; publicly-employed doctors and hospital administrators in Poland; publicly-employed doctors and pharmacists in Romania; top Ministry of Health officials in Iraq.

Influence to be Obtained. From at least 1998 to 2006, DePuy and DePuy International paid bribes to public doctors in Greece who selected Johnson & Johnson surgical implants for use in various medical procedures. The scheme was perpetrated via a complicated web of transactions through distributors and agents (including a Greek distributor which DePuy International later acquired) who paid bribes recorded as commissions. The scheme was furthered by a high-level executive. In total, DePuy and its subsidiaries and employees authorized approximately $16.4 million in payments, a significant portion of which they knew would be used to pay cash incentives to publicly-employed Greek healthcare providers to induce them to purchase DePuy products.

In addition, from 2000 to 2006, Johnson & Johnson’s Polish subsidiary made improper payments and provided things of value, including travel sponsorships, to publicly-employed doctors and hospital administrators in Poland to induce them to use Johnson & Johnson medical devices and award medical device tenders.

From 2005 to 2008, a Romanian Johnson & Johnson subsidiary also authorizing approximately $140,000 in cash and travel payments to publicly-employed doctors and pharmacists in Romania to induce them to prescribe Johnson & Johnson products.

Between February 2001 and June 2004, two other Johnson & Johnson subsidiaries, Cilag AG International and Janssen Pharmaceutica N.V., paid 10% kickbacks, totaling approximately $857,387, to the former government of Iraq under the U.N. Oil for Food Program to secure contracts to provide humanitarian supplies worth $9.9 million.

Enforcement. On January 14, 2011, Johnson & Johnson, together with its subsidiaries (including DePuy) and its operating companies, entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement, under which Johnson & Johnson acknowledged responsibility for the underlying conduct and agreed to pay a $21,400,000 criminal penalty. Pursuant to that agreement, the DOJ filed a criminal information against DePuy on April 8, 2011, charging it with conspiracy, aiding and abetting, and substantive violations of the FCPA. The deferred prosecution agreement expressly reduces Johnson & Johnson's monetary penalty on the basis of the company's self-disclosure, self-investigation, and ongoing compliance measures. Although the settlement does not require that Johnson & Johnson employ a corporate monitor, it must report to the DOJ on compliance efforts bi-yearly for the duration of the agreement.

In a related settlement with the SEC, Johnson & Johnson agreed to pay $38,227,826 in disgorgement and $10,438,490 in prejudgment interest.

119. United States v. Comverse Technology Inc. (2011)⁴²

Nature of the Business. Purchase orders between a telecommunications company partially-owned by the Greek government and Comverse Ltd., an Israeli operating subsidiary of Comverse Technology, Inc. Comverse is a provider of software systems and information applications that is incorporated in New York.

Business Location. Greece, Cyprus, Israel.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $536,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $1,250,000.
3. Intermediary. Third-party agent and shell entity.
4. The foreign official. Employees of Hellenic Telecommunications Organisation S.A., which is partially owned by the Greek government.

Influence to be Obtained. Between 2000 to 2006, Comverse Ltd. paid a third-party agent commissions on purchase orders, 85% of which was used to make improper payments to customers, including employees of a Greek government-owned telecommunications company. In turn, these customers secured purchase orders for Comverse Ltd. In addition, between 2003 and 2006, Comverse Ltd. made cash payments to potential and existing customers through a shell company in Cyprus organized by the third-party agent. A Comverse Ltd. employee would withdraw the payment amount and deliver it, either directly or through an intermediary, to customers, who in turn secured purchase orders for Comverse Ltd. Employees of Comverse Ltd. then falsely recorded these payments as commissions, and these falsified records were incorporated into Comverse's books and records.

Enforcement. On April 6, 2011, the DOJ and Comverse entered into a non-prosecution agreement wherein the DOJ agreed not to prosecute Comverse or its subsidiaries for violations of the books and records provisions of the FCPA based on the above-mentioned facts. The DOJ cited Comverse's "timely, voluntary, and complete" disclosure as well as "remedial efforts already undertaken and to be undertaken by Comverse" as reasons not to pursue prosecution in the matter. Under the terms of the non-prosecution agreement, Comverse agreed to pay a penalty of $1,200,000. Comverse also admitted to the underlying conduct and agreed to continue to improve its internal controls. The terms of the agreement further require that for two years from the date of the agreement, Comverse will commit no crimes, cooperate with DOJ requests for information, and bring to the DOJ's attention criminal activities or criminal investigations of Comverse or its employees or administrative or civil proceedings against Comverse that include allegations of fraud.

See SEC Digest Number D-95.

118. United States v. JGC Corporation (S.D. Tex. 2011)⁴³

Nature of the Business. Engineering, procurement, and construction (“EPC”) contracts to design and build a liquefied natural gas (“LNG”) plant and several expansions on Bonny Island, Nigeria. JGC Corporation (“JGC”), a Japanese company, was part of a four-company joint venture formed in 1990 for bidding on a series of these contracts. The joint venture consisted of Technip S.A., Snamprogetti Netherlands B.V., Kellogg, Brown & Root, Inc., and JGC (collectively, “TSKJ”). TSKJ was awarded four EPC contracts for the Bonny Island Project between 1995 and 2004.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $182 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. More than $6 billion.
3. Intermediary. Consultant and Japanese trading company, agents.
4. The foreign official. Officials of Nigeria’s executive branch; officials of the government-owned company responsible for developing and regulating Nigeria’s oil and gas industry (Nigerian National Petroleum Company); officials of Nigeria LNG Limited, the government-controlled company formed to develop the Bonny Island Project.

Influence to be Obtained. From August 1994 until June 2004, senior executives, employees, and agents of JGC and its partners in the joint venture authorized, promised, and paid bribes to Nigerian government officials – including officials in the executive branch, employees of the government-owned Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation, and employees of government-controlled Nigeria LNG Limited – to win and retain Bonny Island EPC contracts. The joint venture ultimately obtained four contracts worth $6 billion. Employees and agents of TSKJ held “cultural meetings” with Nigerian officials to discuss how to pay bribes. To conceal the bribes, the joint venture entered into sham consulting or services agreements through which bribes were negotiated and paid to Nigerian officials. JGC, along with its joint venture partners, conspired to transfer $182 million to consultants to be used, in part, for bribes to Nigerian officials.

Enforcement. On April 6, 2011, JGC agreed to pay a $218.8 million criminal penalty as part of a two-year deferred prosecution agreement. The other companies in the TSKJ joint venture and three related agents and employees were subjected to previous DOJ criminal and SEC civil actions. Collectively, these defendants have paid approximately $1.5 billion in civil and criminal fines for bribery and related violations associated with the Bonny Island Project in Nigeria.

⁴³ U.S. v. JGC Corporation, No. 4:11-00260 (S.D. Tex. 2011).

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

This case also illustrates the widening jurisdictional scope of the FCPA. JGC is the first Japanese company prosecuted under the FCPA, and is neither a domestic concern nor an issuer. Jurisdiction was based on JGC's role in conspiring to execute the bribery scheme with co-conspirators who are domestic concerns or issuers, and causing allegedly corrupt U.S. dollar payments to be wire transferred via correspondent bank accounts in New York.

117. United States v. Tyson Foods, Inc. (D.D.C. 2011)⁴⁴

Nature of the Business. Tyson Foods, Inc. (“Tyson”), a Delaware corporation, produces protein-based and prepared food products. Tyson de Mexico, Tyson’s wholly-owned subsidiary, operates three meat-processing facilities in Mexico and processes prepared foods for sale in Mexico and abroad.

Business Location. Mexico.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $350,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Net profits of more than $880,000.
3. Intermediary. The wives of two Mexican government-employed veterinarians.
4. The foreign official. Veterinarians responsible for certifying meat exports under a federal inspection program in Mexico.

Influence to be Obtained. From 1994 to 2004, Tyson de Mexico, with the knowledge of some of Tyson’s employees at its Arkansas headquarters, placed the wives of Mexican government-employed veterinarians on Tyson de Mexico’s payroll, even though the wives did not perform any services, to obtain certification of Tyson De Mexico products for export under a federally-administered inspection program. Payments made directly or indirectly to the veterinarians through their wives during this period totaled $260,000. Between July 2004 and November 2006, Tyson representatives terminated the salaries of the veterinarians’ wives and instead paid $90,000 (the equivalent amounts previously paid to the veterinarians wives) to the veterinarians directly, based on invoices received for “professional honoraria.”

Enforcement. On February 10, 2011, Tyson signed a deferred prosecution agreement that requires Tyson to pay a $4 million penalty, implement rigorous internal controls, and cooperate fully with the DOJ. In a related matter brought by the SEC, Tyson agreed to pay more than $1.2 million in disgorgement of profits and prejudgment interest.

116. United States v. Maxwell Technologies, Inc. (S.D. Cal. 2011)⁴⁵

Nature of the Business. Marketing and sales of high-voltage capacitors to Chinese state-owned entities by Maxwell S.A., a wholly-owned Swiss subsidiary of Maxwell Technologies, Inc. (“Maxwell”). Maxwell is a Delaware corporation that manufactures energy storage and power delivery products.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. At least $2,789,131.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unspecified.
3. Intermediary. Sales Agent/Consultant.
4. The foreign official. Officials at Chinese state-owned entities.

Influence to be Obtained. From at least July 2002 through May 2009, Maxwell S.A. paid more than $2,789,131 to a third-party sales agent in China to secure sales contracts for high-voltage capacitors with Chinese state-owned manufacturers of electrical-utility infrastructure. The agent accomplished these payments by inflating purchase orders by 20%, then distributing the extra amount to officials at the state-owned entities and accounting for these fees as commission expenses in Maxwell’s books and records. Maxwell’s U.S. management discovered the bribery scheme in late 2002. However, payments to the agent only increased upon discovery. Maxwell S.A. paid its Chinese agent approximately $165,000 in 2002 and increased the payments to the agent to nearly $1.1 million in 2008.

Enforcement. On January 31, 2011, Maxwell entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement under which Maxwell agreed to pay an $8 million penalty and accept responsibility for violations of the FCPA’s anti-bribery and books and records provisions. In addition, Maxwell agreed to adopt an enhanced compliance program and internal controls to prevent future violations, to cooperate with the DOJ in ongoing investigations, and to report periodically to the DOJ concerning its compliance efforts. Maxwell also entered into a consent judgment in a related SEC action pursuant to which it agreed to pay $5.654 million in disgorgement of profits and $696,314 in prejudgment interest.

United States v. Alcatel-Lucent France, S.A., Alcatel-Lucent Trade Int'l, A.G., and Alcatel Centroamerica, S.A \(S.D. Fla. 2010\)⁴⁷

Nature of the Business. Alcatel-Lucent, S.A. (“Alcatel-Lucent”), is a French-based provider of telecommunications equipment and services and other technology products. It was created after the merger of Alcatel, S.A. (a French corporation) and Lucent Technologies, Inc. (a U.S. corporation) in 2006. Alcatel-Lucent France, S.A. is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Alcatel-Lucent, incorporated in France; Alcatel-Lucent Trade International, A.G. is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Alcatel-Lucent, incorporated in Switzerland; and Alcatel Centroamerica, S.A. is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Alcatel-Lucent, incorporated in Costa Rica. The charged conduct took place prior to the merger, during which time each of these companies was a subsidiary of Alcatel, S.A.

Business Location. Costa Rica, Honduras, Malaysia, Taiwan, Kenya, Nigeria, Bangladesh, Ecuador, Nicaragua, Angola, Ivory Coast, Uganda, and Mali.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Over $9.8 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Over $454.7 million.
3. Intermediary. Consultants and local subsidiaries.
4. The foreign officials. Officials of state-owned entities and government agencies including, but not limited to, Instituto Costarricense de Electricidad S.A. (Costa Rica); Empresa Hondureña de Telecomunicaciones (Honduras); Comisión Nacional de Telecomunicaciones (Honduras); Telekom Malaysia Berhad (Malaysia); and Taiwan Railway Administration (Taiwan). Taiwanese legislators.

Influence to be Obtained. Between 2001 and 2006, Alcatel, S.A. and its subsidiaries (collectively, “Alcatel”) made payments to government officials and state-owned company executives, through local consultants, to obtain lucrative telecommunications contracts. In Costa Rica, Honduras, Malaysia, and Taiwan, Alcatel hired unqualified, but well-connected, consultants; paid for gifts and non-business travel for government officials; and made improper payments in exchange for nonpublic information regarding tenders. Alcatel also paid inflated consultant commission rates and approved consultant payments for little to no work, with the understanding that part or all of the funds would go to government officials. Through these illicit payments and gifts, Alcatel was able to procure and retain several major contracts, reaping more than $28,873,300 in profits.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

Alcatel also entered into several suspicious consulting agreements, with a high probability that some or all of the fees would be passed on to government officials, in Kenya, Nigeria, Bangladesh, Ecuador, Nicaragua, Angola, Ivory Coast, Uganda, and Mali.

Enforcement. On December 27, 2010, the government filed a criminal information charging Alcatel-Lucent with one count of violating the internal control provisions of the FCPA and one count of violating the books and records provisions of the FCPA. On the same day, the government filed a criminal information charging Alcatel-Lucent France, S.A., Alcatel-Lucent Trade International, A.G., and Alcatel Centroamerica, S.A. with conspiring to violate the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. Each of the three subsidiaries entered into plea agreements under which each entity agreed to pay a fine of $500,000 and a special assessment fee of $400, commit no further crimes and work with Alcatel-Lucent in fulfilling compliance obligations. Under a three-year deferred prosecution agreement, signed on December 20, 2010, Alcatel-Lucent agreed to pay a $92 million penalty (with a deduction for the fines imposed on its wholly-owned subsidiaries), continue to implement a compliance and ethics program, review its internal controls, policies and procedures, and retain a compliance monitor for a three-year term.

On December 29, 2010, Alcatel-Lucent settled related charges with the SEC.

On May 9, 2011, the Instituto Costarricense de Electricidad (“ICE”) filed in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida a request to find the company a victim of the criminal conduct alleged by the DOJ, to reject the plea agreements and the Deferred Prosecution Agreements, to order restitution as part of the sentence against Alcatel-Lucent and its subsidiaries, and to enter a sentence that is commensurate with and reflective of the severity of the criminal activities of Alcatel-Lucent and its subsidiaries.

On June 6, 2011, the Court rejected the claim by ICE, and accepted the settlement between the DOJ and Alcatel-Lucent.

Subsequently, ICE appealed through a writ of mandamus to the 11th Circuit, but the appeal was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. On December 10, 2012, the United States Supreme Court denied ICE’s petition for writ of certiorari.

United States v. Jorge Granados and Manuel Caceres \(S.D. Fla. 2010\)⁴⁹
United States v. Manuel Salvoch \(S.D. Fla. 2010\)⁵⁰

Nature of the Business. Reduced rates under an exclusive long-distance services contract between Empresa Hondureña de Telecomunicaciones (“Hondutel”), the state-owned telecommunications authority in Honduras, and Latin Node Inc. (“LatiNode”), a Florida corporation that provided international telecommunications services using voice over internet protocol technology.

LatiNode was a privately held U.S. corporation until eLandia International, Inc. acquired it in 2007. From 1999 to 2007, Jorge Granados was the founder, CEO, and chairman of the board. Manuel Caceres was the company’s vice president of business development from September 2004 to 2007. Juan Pablo Vasquez was a senior commercial executive and CCO from November 2000 to 2007. Manuel Salvoch was the Chief Financial Officer from March 2005 to 2007.

Business Location. Honduras.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $545,039.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $0.07-$0.11 per minute in long-distance time sold.
3. Intermediary. Third-party consultant Servicios IP, S.A., a Guatemalan company created at the direction of LatiNode, allegedly entered into sham agreements to facilitate payments to officials in Honduras; LN Comunicaciones, a Guatemalan subsidiary of LatiNode allegedly served as an intermediary for the transfer of bribe payments.
4. The foreign official. Officials at Hondutel, the Honduran state-owned telecommunications company.

Influence to be Obtained. From April 2006 through October 2007, Vasquez, Granados, Caceres and Salvoch allegedly conspired to pay over $500,000 in bribes on behalf of LatiNode to officials of Hondutel in exchange for maintaining an interconnection agreement with Hondutel as well as receiving reduced rates and other economic benefits. The interconnection agreement permitted Latin Node to use Hondutel’s telecommunication lines to provide long distance service between the United States and Honduras. According to the court documents, Caceres’s principal role was to negotiate the payment of bribes with Hondutel officials in exchange for these benefits; Granados’s principal role was to authorize and direct the bribe payments; and Vasquez’s and Salvoch’s principal roles were to facilitate the payment of bribes to Hondutel officials. The payments were allegedly concealed by passing through Latin Node subsidiaries in Guatemala and Honduran accounts controlled by Honduran government officials.

In contemplation of LatiNode's anticipated 2007 acquisition by eLandia, the defendants allegedly discussed the need to create sham consulting agreements to disguise the bribes and instructed Hondutel and LatiNode employees to take actions to disguise or hide the payments.

In September 2007, eLandia disclosed that, after it acquired LatiNode, it discovered improper payments in the course of reviewing LatiNode's internal controls and procedures. eLandia conducted an internal investigation, terminated the improperly-obtained agreements, and voluntarily disclosed the unlawful conduct to the DOJ and the SEC. eLandia has written off its investment and sued Granados and LatiNode's parent company for misrepresentation.

Enforcement. On December 14, 2010, a federal grand jury returned a 19-count indictment against Granados and Caceres. The charges include conspiracy, money laundering, and numerous violations of the FCPA. On December 17, 2010, the DOJ filed a criminal information against Salvoch and Vasquez, alleging that they conspired to violate the FCPA. Granados and Caceres were arrested on December 20, 2010 in Miami and made initial appearances in U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida on that date.

The four LatiNode executives, Juan Pablo Vasquez, Manuel Salvoch, Jorge Granados, and Manuel Caceres, pled guilty to conspiracy to violate the FCPA on January 21, 2011, January 12, 2011, May 19, 2011, and May 18, 2011 respectively. On September 8, 2011, Granados was sentenced to 46 months in prison. Caceres was sentenced on April 19, 2012 to 23 months in prison. On April 25, 2012, Vasquez was sentenced to three years' probation and a $7,500 fine. On June 5, 2012, Salvoch was sentenced to ten months in prison and three years' supervised release.

Previously, on March 23, 2009, the DOJ filed related charges against LatiNode. On April 3, 2009, LatiNode pleaded guilty to one count of violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA and agreed to pay a $2,000,000 fine.

113. United States v. RAE Systems Inc. (D.D.C. 2010)⁵¹

Nature of the Business. RAE Systems Inc. (“RAE”) is a Delaware corporation based in San Jose, California that develops and manufactures chemical and radiation detection monitors and networks. Between 2005 and 2008, it operated in China through two second-tier subsidiaries organized as joint ventures: RAE-KLH (Beijing) Co., Limited (“RAE-KLH”), which is 96% owned by RAE, and RAE Coal Mine Safety Instruments (Fushun) Co., Ltd. (“RAE-Fushun”), which is 70% owned by RAE.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Not stated.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Joint-venture entities and a third-party agent.
4. The foreign official. Employees of Chinese state-owned entities including employees of the Dagang Oil Field.

Influence to be Obtained. In 2004, RAE carried out due diligence prior to the formation of the RAE-KLH joint venture, through which it uncovered evidence of bribery. According to an RAE due diligence report, the KLH sales structure lacked internal controls, allowing salespeople to pay cash commissions that were in turn reported in a way that distorted the company’s financial statements. Another due diligence report predicted that it would “be a challenge to change [KLH’s] business operational mode” – that relied on a “commission/incentive structure [of] under table greasing to get deals” – to “be more transparent.” The report concluded that correcting the sales practices through an effective compliance program could hurt sales. RAE did not perform due diligence prior to entering the RAE-Fushun joint venture in 2006, although multiple factors indicated due diligence concerning corruption risks was warranted.

After acquiring its interest in KLH in 2004, RAE instructed RAE-KLH personnel to stop paying bribes, but it did not institute sufficient internal controls or discontinue the system of cash-advance reimbursements which facilitated the bribery practices into 2008 at both RAE-KLH and RAE-Fushun. The joint ventures improperly recorded cash advances connected to bribes as business fees and travel and entertainment expenses, false information that was integrated into RAE’s consolidated financials.

In addition to cash bribes, both companies provided luxury gifts to employees of state owned entities, such as notebook computers, jade, fur coats, appliances, suits, and expensive liquor. In 2006 and 2007, RAE-KLH made two improper payments totaling nearly $350,000 to a consultant who funneled money to employees of the state-owned Dagang Oil Field and other government officials in exchange for business contracts.

⁵¹ Matter resolved through non-prosecution agreement (December 2010).

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

Enforcement. On December 10, 2010, RAE entered a non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ. According to the terms of the agreement, RAE will pay a monetary penalty of $1,700,000; strengthen its compliance, bookkeeping, and internal control standards and procedures; and report periodically to the DOJ on its compliance with the agreement over the course of its three-year term.

United States v. Panalpina, Inc. \(S.D. Tex. 2010\)⁵³

Nature of the Business. Panalpina World Transport (Holding) Ltd. is a global freight forwarding and logistics service firm based in Basel, Switzerland. Panalpina, Inc. is its U.S.-based subsidiary, incorporated in New York.

Business Location. Angola, Azerbaijan, Brazil, Kazakhstan, Nigeria, Russia, Turkmenistan.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $49 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unknown.
3. Intermediary. Subsidiary and agent.
4. The foreign official. Customs officials in the Nigerian Customs Service; Angolan customs and immigration officials; Azeri government officials responsible for assessing and collecting duties and tariffs on imported goods; Brazilian government officials responsible for assessing and collecting duties and tariffs on imported goods; Kazakh customs and tax officials; Russian customs officials; Turkmen customs, immigration, tax and labor officials.

Influence to be Obtained. From 2002 to 2007, Panalpina World Transport (Holding) Ltd. (“Panalpina”) operated through subsidiaries and affiliates to pay bribes to numerous foreign officials on behalf of many of its customers in the oil and gas industry. It engaged in this scheme to circumvent local rules and regulations relating to the import of goods and materials into numerous foreign jurisdictions. Several of Panalpina’s customers also admitted that they approved of or condoned the payment of bribes on their behalf, and falsely recorded the bribe payments made on their behalf as legitimate business expenses in their corporate books, records, and accounts.

Between 2002 and 2007, Panalpina, Inc. engaged in a scheme to pay bribes to Nigerian customs officials on behalf of its customers in the oil and gas industry. Panalpina, Inc. assisted its Nigerian affiliate and agent, Panalpina World Transport (Nigeria) Limited, in making improper payments to Nigerian officials and in concealing the true nature of those payments in the customers’ books and records. These payments were used to offer preferential, expedited clearance for Panalpina customers and circumvent local customs laws and processes.

Enforcement. On November 4, 2010, the DOJ and Panalpina entered into a deferred prosecution agreement, under which Panalpina agreed to pay a penalty of $70,560,000, review and revise its existing internal controls, policies, and procedures as necessary, and provide a yearly report to the DOJ on the

On November 4, 2010, the DOJ and Panalpina, Inc. entered into a plea agreement, under which Panalpina, Inc. pleaded guilty, agreed to pay a penalty of $70,560,000, and to implement a compliance and ethics program designed to detect and prevent violations of the FCPA, other anti-corruption laws, and all applicable foreign bribery laws.

111. United States v. Shell Nigeria Exploration and Production Company Ltd. (S.D. Tex. 2010)⁵⁴

Nature of the Business. Shell Nigeria Exploration and Production Company Ltd. (SNEPCO) is a Nigerian subsidiary of Royal Dutch Shell plc. (“Shell”), an English-chartered company headquartered in the Netherlands. SNEPCO endeavored to explore and produce oil in a deepwater project in Nigeria.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $2 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $7 million.
3. Intermediary. Freight forwarder, Subcontractor, Agent.
4. The foreign official. Nigerian Customs Service officials.

Influence to be Obtained. Between 2004 and 2006, Shell Nigeria Exploration and Production Company Ltd (“SNEPCO”) paid bribes to its subcontractors and agents for customs clearance services with the knowledge and intent that some or all of the money was to reimburse the subcontractors for money paid to Nigerian customs officials to import materials and equipment into Nigeria. While the freight forwarder was not specifically identified in the DOJ’s complaint, the complaint alleges that a Swiss-based freight forwarder provided a service known as “Pancourier.” This was a proprietary service provided by Panalpina World Transport (Holding) Ltd. (“Panalpina”) and its subsidiaries.

The bribes were falsely characterized by SNEPCO in its internal books and records as legitimate customs clearance charges which were, in turn, consolidated into Shell’s books, records, and accounts.

Enforcement. On November 4, 2010, the DOJ and SNEPCO entered into a deferred prosecution agreement, under which SNEPCO agreed to pay a penalty of $30 million, review and revise its existing internal controls, policies, and procedures as necessary, and provide a yearly report to the DOJ on the remediation and implementation of its compliance program and internal controls, policies, and procedures for a period of three years.

Shell settled related charges with the SEC on November 4, 2010.

110. United States v. Transocean Inc. (S.D. Tex. 2010)⁵⁵

Nature of the Business. Transocean Inc. (“Transocean”) was a Cayman Islands corporation that is now a wholly-owned subsidiary of Transocean Ltd., a Swiss corporation. Transocean and its affiliates provide offshore drilling services and equipment to oil companies worldwide.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $90,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $2.17 million.
3. Intermediary. Freight forwarder, Agent.
4. The foreign official. Nigerian Customs Service officials.

Influence to be Obtained. From 2002 to 2007, Transocean paid bribes to Nigerian customs officials through its freight forwarding agents in Nigeria to circumvent Nigerian regulations regarding the import of goods and materials and the import of Transocean’s deep-water oil rigs in Nigerian waters. Although Panalpina World Transport (Holding) Ltd. (“Panalpina”) was not identified by name in the government’s Criminal Information as one of the freight forwarders, a DOJ press release alleges that Panalpina had paid bribes on behalf of Transocean. Transocean admitted that it had approved of Panalpina’s payments to the Nigerian government.

Enforcement. On November 4, 2010, the DOJ and Transocean entered into a deferred prosecution agreement, under which Transocean agreed to pay a penalty of $13.44 million, review and revise its existing internal controls, policies, and procedures as necessary, and provide a yearly report to the DOJ on the remediation and implementation of its compliance program and internal controls, policies, and procedures for a period of three years.

Transocean settled related charges with the SEC on November 4, 2010.

Nature of the Business. Tidewater Marine International, Inc. (“TMII”) is incorporated in the Republic of Panama and is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Tidewater, Inc. (“Tidewater”), a Delaware corporation. Tidewater owns and operates offshore service and supply vessels that are chartered by energy exploration, development, and production companies. TMII provided managerial and administrative oversight for most of Tidewater’s international operations.

Business Location. Azerbaijan, Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $1.76 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $6.62 million.
3. Intermediary. Freight forwarder, Agent.
4. The foreign official. Officials of the Ministry of Taxes for the Republic of Azerbaijan; Nigerian Customs Service officials.

Influence to be Obtained. In 2001, 2003, and 2005, TMII, through its employees and agents, paid bribes amounting to approximately $160,000 to tax inspectors in Azerbaijan. The benefit received and the potential tax liability avoided as a result of those payments was approximately $820,000.

From 2002 to 2007, TMII was aware of and authorized $1.6 million worth of payments made by its Nigerian subsidiary to its freight-forwarding agent, Panalpina World Transport (Holding) Ltd. (“Panalpina”). These payments were reimbursements for bribes paid by Panalpina, on behalf of TMII, to Nigerian customs officials. The bribes were paid to induce the officials to disregard Nigerian regulations, to not impose fines and penalties, and to allow Tidewater vessels to operate in Nigerian waters without valid permits. The benefits TMII received in exchange for these payments totaled approximately $5.8 million.

Enforcement. On November 4, 2010, the DOJ and TMII entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement, under which TMII agreed to pay a penalty of $7.35 million, review and revise its existing internal controls, policies, and procedures as necessary, and provide a yearly report to the DOJ on the remediation and implementation of its compliance program and internal controls, policies, and procedures.

United States v. Pride Forasol S.A.S. \(S.D. Tex. 2010\)⁵⁸

Nature of the Business. Pride International Inc. (“Pride International”), a Delaware corporation, owns and operates numerous oil and gas drilling rigs throughout the world. Pride Forasol S.A.S. (“Pride Forasol”) is its French subsidiary.

Business Location. India, Mexico, Venezuela.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $800,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $13 million.
3. Intermediary. Subsidiary company, agent.
4. The foreign official. Officials and members of the Board of Directors of Petróleos de Venezuela S.A., a Venezuelan state-owned oil company; Judges of the Customs, Excise, and Gold Appellate Tribunal in India, an administrative judicial tribunal; Customs Administrator Operations Assistant for the Mexican customs service.

Influence to be Obtained. In 2003, Pride Forasol created and Pride International paid false invoices through which funds were paid into Dubai bank accounts in the names of unidentified third parties with the intent that they would be passed on to judges of the Customs, Excise, and Gold Appellate Tribunal in India, an administrative judicial tribunal. That bribe of $500,000 led to a favorable ruling for Pride’s Indian subsidiary relating to a litigation matter involving the payment of customs duties and penalties. The bribe brought about an estimated financial gain of $10 million to Pride Forasol.

In 2004, Pride International agreed to pay approximately $10,000 to a Mexican marketing agent with the intent that the money would be passed to officials in the Mexican customs service, to avoid taxes and penalties for alleged violations of Mexican customs regulations.

From 2003 to 2004, Pride International agreed to pay bribes totaling $294,000 to officials and members of the Board of Directors of Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. through a Venezuelan intermediary who owned a company that provided catering services to Pride’s Venezuelan subsidiary. Through these payments, Pride International was able to secure contract extensions, resulting in profits of $3,046,000.

After discovering this conduct during a routine audit, Pride International voluntarily disclosed it to the DOJ and SEC. During the course of its cooperation with the government, Pride International provided information and substantially assisted in the investigation of Panalpina World Transport (Holding) Ltd.

(“Panalpina”), an international freight forwarder that has since admitted to paying bribes to foreign officials in at least seven different countries.

Enforcement. On November 4, 2010, the DOJ and Pride International entered into a deferred prosecution agreement (“DPA”), under which Pride International agreed to pay a penalty of $32.625 million, review and revise its existing internal controls, policies, and procedures as necessary, and provide a yearly report to the DOJ on the remediation and implementation of its compliance program and internal controls, policies, and procedures for a period of three years.

Also on November 4, 2010, Pride Forasol pleaded guilty to a criminal information the government filed the same day, which charged Pride Forasol with conspiring to and violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA; and with conspiring to violate and aiding and abetting the violation of the books and records provision of the FCPA. This plea agreement, relating only to the transactions in India, was part of Pride International’s DPA, above, and Pride Forasol agreed to pay a penalty of $32.625 million.

Under the plea agreement, Pride Forasol will assist Pride International with providing annual compliance reports to the DOJ. Under the DPA, any amount paid by Pride Forasol will be deducted from the amount imposed on Pride International.

Pride International settled related charges with the SEC on November 4, 2010.

Also on November 4, 2010, Panalpina settled related charges with the SEC and DOJ. Three of Panalpina’s customers in the oil exploration and production industry also pleaded guilty to and settled related charges with the DOJ and SEC on the same day.

107. United States v. Noble Corp. (2010)⁵⁹

Nature of the Business. Noble Corporation (“Noble”) is an international oil and gas drilling contractor that owns and operates drilling rigs through its subsidiaries and affiliates. In March 2009, Noble redomesticated from the Cayman Islands and is now incorporated in Switzerland; the company is headquartered in Sugar Land, Texas.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $74,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $2,973,000.
3. Intermediary. Customs agent.
4. The foreign official. Nigeria Customs Service officials.

Influence to be Obtained. Between January 2003 and May 2007, Noble’s Nigerian subsidiary (“Noble-Nigeria”) paid a total of approximately $74,000 as “special handling charges” to its Nigerian customs agent. Noble-Nigeria and certain employees of Noble Drilling Services Inc., Noble’s U.S.-subsidiary, were aware that some or all of the money paid to the Nigerian customs agent would be paid to the Nigeria Customs Service officials for the purpose of illegally obtaining extensions for the temporary import permits for the rigs in the Nigerian waters, so as to avoid the need to either permanently import the rigs or export and re-import the rigs to obtain new temporary import permits.

Enforcement. In June 2007, Noble informed the DOJ that it was conducting an internal investigation of its operations in Nigeria and thereafter disclosed the findings and fully cooperated with the government’s investigations. On November 4, 2010, the DOJ and Noble entered into a non-prosecution agreement, under which Noble agreed to pay a penalty of $2,590,000, review and revise its existing internal controls, policies, and procedures as necessary, and provide a yearly report to the DOJ on the remediation and implementation of its compliance program and internal controls, policies, and procedures for a period of three years. In a related proceeding brought by the SEC, Noble, without admitting or denying the allegations, consented to the entry of final judgment, under which Noble would pay a total of $5,576,998 in disgorgement of its profits gained and costs avoided, with prejudgment interest.

106. United States v. Enrique Faustino Aguilar Noriega, Angela Maria Gomez Aguilar, Lindsey Manufacturing, Keith E. Lindsey, and Steve K. Lee (C.D. Cal. 2010)⁶⁰

Nature of the Business. Enrique Aguilar and Angela Aguilar are a husband and wife associated with two companies, incorporated in Panama and based in Mexico City, Grupo Internacional de Asesores S.A. (“Grupo”) and Sorvill International S.A. (“Sorvill”). The purported business of both companies is to provide sales representation to companies with business with Comisiòn Federal de Electricidad (“CFE”), a state-owned utility in Mexico. Enrique Aguilar is a director of Grupo and Sorvill and Angela Aguilar is an officer and director of Grupo and managed finances for both companies. He is a Mexican citizen and a lawful permanent resident of the U.S.; she is a citizen of Mexico.

Lindsey Manufacturing Company is a privately held California corporation headquartered in Azusa, California which manufactures emergency restoration systems (“ERSs”) and other equipment used by electrical utility companies. Lindsey Manufacturing hired Enrique Aguilar to assist in obtaining contracts with CFE based on his personal relationship with the utility’s director of operations. Keith E. Lindsey is the president and majority owner of the company; Steve K. Lee is its Vice President and CEO. Both Lindsey and Lee are U.S. citizens.

Business Location. Mexico.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $5.9 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Sales Representative.
4. The foreign officials. Current and former director of operations of Comisiòn Federal de Electricidad (“CFE”), a state-owned electrical utility in Mexico.

Influence to be Obtained. Federal prosecutors allege that between 2002 and 2008 Lindsey Manufacturing paid Enrique Aguilar a 30% commission on contracts it obtained with CFE, knowing that a portion or all of the commission money would be used to pay bribes to foreign government officials. Lindsey and Lee would accordingly raise the price of contracts with CFE to account for the commission payments. Enrique Aguilar submitted false invoices to Lindsey Manufacturing, falsely describing the payments as 15% allocated to commission and 15% allocated to “other services.”

According to the superseding indictment, between 2002 and 2008, Lindsey Manufacturing wired $5.9 million to the Global Financial brokerage account of Grupo in Texas for the purpose of paying bribes in exchange for the award of CFE contracts to Lindsey Manufacturing. Using funds in Grupo’s brokerage account at Global Financial and a Swiss bank account belonging to Sorvill, Enrique and Angela Aguilar paid the credit card bills of the current director of operations, purchased him an 82 foot yacht and a Ferrari sports car, and transferred $45,000 to his family member, a payment they falsely described as a consultant fee. With respect to the former director of operations, the Aguilars wired $600,000 from Grupo to relatives of the official, payments made pursuant to false sales representative agreements with the family members.

Enforcement. The grand jury indicted the Aguilars on September 15, 2010. (Both defendants were previously the subject of sealed indictments.) In the superseding indictment dated October 21, 2010, a federal grand jury indicted Enrique Aguilar and the three Lindsey defendants on one count of conspiracy to violate the FCPA and five counts of bribery under the FCPA. Enrique and Angela Aguilar were indicted under one count of conspiracy to violate and one count of violating federal anti-money laundering law. Angela Aguilar is not charged with any FCPA violations.

U.S. authorities arrested Angela Aguilar in Houston in August 2002. She pleaded not guilty and was held in custody until trial. The Lindsey defendants also pleaded not guilty. Keith Lindsey and Steve Lee were released pending trial on $50,000 bonds.

On May 10, 2011, a federal jury found Angela Aguilar guilty of conspiracy to launder money and the Lindsey defendants guilty of conspiracy to violate the FCPA and five substantive FCPA violations. On June 3, 2011, Angela Aguilar entered into a post-trial stipulation whereby she agreed to, among other things, (i) a sentence of time served, (ii) waiver of her rights to an appeal of her conviction and sentence, and (iii) a forfeiture in the amount of $2,511,553.

Before sentencing could take place for the other defendants, lawyers for Lindsey Manufacturing, Keith Lindsey, and Steve Lee moved to dismiss the indictments on the basis of intentional prosecutorial misconduct. The defendants alleged that the government allowed an FBI agent to make false statements to the grand jury, obtained search and seizure warrants using affidavits containing false statements, and failed to disclose exculpatory evidence as required under Brady v. Maryland. On December 1, 2011, the court granted defendants' motion, citing multiple instances of misconduct by the government. The government filed a notice of appeal to the Ninth Circuit that same day.

The December 1, 2011 order vacated the convictions and dismissed the indictments against the Lindsey defendants with prejudice. On December 9, 2011, the government stipulated that it would not enforce Angela Aguilar's collateral attack waiver if the court's order of dismissal is affirmed. In May 2012, the government withdrew its appeal to the Ninth Circuit.

The conviction of Lindsey Manufacturing was the first-ever conviction of a corporate defendant for violations of the FCPA following a trial. The case is also notable for upholding application of the FCPA to employees of foreign state-owned enterprises. During the course of the trial, defendants challenged the government's position that employees of foreign state-owned enterprises fell within the meaning of "foreign official" under the FCPA, but the court adopted the DOJ's more expansive interpretation.

105. United States v. Bobby J. Elkin, Jr. (D.D.C. 2010)⁶¹

Nature of the Business. Bobby J. Elkin, a U.S. citizen, was the country manager for Dimon, Inc.'s ("Dimon") Kyrgyzstan subsidiary, a leaf tobacco company. As a result of a 2005 merger with Standard Commercial Corporation, Dimon, Inc. now operates as Alliance One International.

Business Location. Kyrgyzstan.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. More than $3 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. None.
4. The foreign officials. Kyrgyz tobacco authority, local Kyrgyz government officials, and Kyrgyz Tax Inspection Police.

Influence to be Obtained. From 1996 to 2004, Elkin paid more than $3 million to government officials in Kyrgyzstan to obtain export licenses, gain access to processing facilities, win contracts to purchase tobacco from local growers, and avoid tax penalties.

Enforcement. On August 3, 2010, Elkin pleaded guilty to conspiracy to violate the FCPA. On October 21, 2010, he was sentenced to three years' probation and a $5,000 fine. The DOJ asked for a 30 month prison sentence. According to media reports, in sentencing Elkin to probation, the court noted Elkin's cooperation with authorities and pressure put on Elkin by Dimon to make the bribes.

In April 2010, the SEC charged Elkin and three other Dimon employees with violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA and related aiding and abetting violations. Without admitting or denying the charges, the four defendants agreed to injunctive relief. Two of the defendants, but not Elkin, paid financial penalties as well.

In other related proceedings, Alliance One settled FCPA charges with the SEC and two of Alliance One's foreign subsidiaries settled FCPA charges with the DOJ.

104. *United States v. Universal Leaf Tabacos Ltda. (E.D. Va. 2010)*⁶²

Nature of the Business. Universal Leaf Tabacos, Ltda (“Universal Brazil”), is a wholly-owned Brazilian subsidiary of Universal Corporation (“Universal”), a worldwide purchaser and supplier of processed leaf tobacco incorporated in Virginia and headquartered in Richmond, Virginia.

Business Location. Thailand.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $697,800.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Sales orders valued at over $9 million.
3. Intermediary. Tobacco sales agents.
4. The foreign official. Officials of the Thailand Tobacco Monopoly (“TTM”).

Influence to be Obtained. According to the criminal information, from at least March 2000 to July 2004, Universal Brazil engaged in a conspiracy with its competitors to secure the assistance of TTM representatives in obtaining and retaining contracts for the sale of Brazilian leaf tobacco; to falsify books, records, and accounts of Universal and Universal Brazil in connection with corrupt payments; and to make the payments appear as legitimate business expenses when, in fact, they were bribes to Thai government officials to ensure that each company would share in the Thai tobacco market. As part of the conspiracy, Universal Brazil and two subsidiaries of its competitor paid the kickbacks to the TTM officials by adding a specified amount to individual sales prices that would be remitted to their respective sales agents who would then pay the kickbacks directly to the TTM officials. These kickbacks were falsely categorized as “commissions” or “special expenses.”

Enforcement. On August 6, 2010, Universal Brazil pleaded guilty to a two-count criminal information charging it with conspiracy to violate the anti-bribery provisions and books and records provisions of the FCPA, and with violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA. Universal entered into a non-prosecution agreement, under which Universal Brazil agreed to pay a $4.4 million criminal fine, and Universal has agreed to retain an independent compliance monitor for a minimum of three years.

On August 24, 2010, Universal also settled a civil complaint filed by the SEC charging it with violating the FCPA’s anti-bribery, internal controls, and books and records provisions and requiring Universal to disgorge approximately $4.5 million in profits to resolve the civil matter.

103. United States v. Alliance One International AG \(W.D. Va. 2010\)⁶³
United States v. Alliance One Tobacco Osh, LLC \(W.D. Va. 2010\)⁶⁴

Nature of the Business. Alliance One International AG (“AOIAG”) is a wholly-owned Swiss subsidiary of Alliance One International, Inc. (“Alliance One”), a Virginia corporation that purchases, processes, and sells tobacco to manufacturers of consumer tobacco products worldwide. It was formed in 2005 as the result of a merger of Dimon Incorporated (“Dimon”) and Standard Commercial Corporation (“Standard”). AOIAG provided financial, accounting, and management services to other Alliance One foreign subsidiaries that sold tobacco to Alliance One’s customers.

Business Location. Thailand; Kyrgyzstan.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Alliance One and its subsidiaries paid approximately $1,238,750.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Tobacco sales agents.
4. The foreign officials. Officials of the Thailand Tobacco Monopoly (“TTM”); Kyrgyz provincial government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. The criminal information alleges that from 2000 to at least 2004, Dimon and Standard subsidiaries – Dimon International AG (“DIAG”) and Standard Brazil (“SB”) – and Universal Leaf Tabacos, Ltda – a subsidiary of Universal Corporation (“Universal”), a competitor of Alliance One – retained sales agents in Thailand, and collaborated through those agents to control the sale of Brazilian tobacco to the TTM. Accordingly, the subsidiaries coordinated their sales prices and paid kickbacks to officials of the TTM to ensure that each company would share in the Thai tobacco market. The kickbacks referred to as “special expenses” were allegedly paid to certain TTM representatives based on the number of kilograms of tobacco sold to the TTM.

DIAG and SB, predecessor-subsiaries of Alliance One, both falsely characterized the payments in their respective books and records as “commissions” paid to their sales agents. DIAG and SB realized profits of $4.3 million and $2.7 million, respectively, as a result of the scheme.

Enforcement. On August 26, 2010, AOIAG pleaded guilty to a three-count criminal information charging it with conspiring to violate the FCPA, violations of the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA, and violations of the books and records provisions of the FCPA. AOIAG also admitted the factual allegations contained in the information were true and correct. The guilty plea related to conduct that was committed by employees and agents of foreign subsidiaries of both Dimon and Standard prior to their merger.

Alliance One Tobacco Osh, LLC (“AOTOL”), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Alliance One that operates in Kyrgyzstan, also pleaded guilty to a separate three-count criminal information charging it with conspiracy to violate the FCPA, violations of the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA, and violations of the books and records provisions of the FCPA relating to bribes paid to government officials in Kyrgyzstan.

On October 21, 2010, the court ordered AOIAG and AOTOL to pay fines of $5,251,200 and $4,200,000 respectively. The DOJ and Alliance One entered into a non-prosecution agreement in which Alliance One agreed to cooperate with an ongoing investigation and to retain an independent compliance monitor for a minimum of three years.

On August 26, 2010, Alliance One settled a related civil complaint filed by the SEC, charging Alliance One with violating the FCPA’s anti-bribery, internal controls, and books and records provisions. Alliance One was required to disgorge approximately $10 million in profits to the SEC.

Also in August 2010, Bobby Elkin and three other former senior executives of Dimon International Kyrgyzstan, a then Dimon subsidiary, the predecessor entity of AOTOL, pleaded guilty to and settled related charges brought by the DOJ and SEC. 3. Intermediary. Mexican companies purporting to act as service and support providers.
4. The foreign official. Officials at Comisión Federal de Electricidad (“CFE”), a Mexican state-owned utility company; regional companies of the Iraqi Electricity Commission.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

ABB Ltd. — Jordan paid more than $300,000 in kickbacks to the former Iraqi government in exchange for eleven purchase orders for electrical equipment and services worth more than $5.9 million under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program. Additionally, ABB Ltd. — Jordan engaged in systematic efforts to conceal the illegal payments and circumvent internal controls by misrepresenting these payments as “consulting fees” in its books and records.

The government did not allege bribery of any individual foreign governmental officials.

From 1997 to 2004, ABB Inc. paid bribes that totaled approximately $1.9 million to officials at CFE. In exchange for the bribe payments, ABB Inc. received contracts worth more than $81 million in revenue for upgrades and maintenance to Mexico’s electrical network system. ABB Inc. admitted that the bribe payments were made through various intermediaries, including a Mexican company that served as ABB Inc.'s sales representative in Mexico for its contracts with CFE.

Enforcement. ABB Ltd. entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement on September 29, 2010 under which it agreed to fully cooperate with investigations of the company's alleged corrupt payments and to adhere to a set of enhanced corporate compliance and reporting obligations, which include the recommendations of an independent compliance consultant. ABB Ltd. also agreed to the filing of a criminal information charging ABB Ltd. – Jordan with one count of conspiracy to commit wire fraud and to violate the books and records provisions of the FCPA. According to the deferred prosecution agreement, ABB agreed to pay criminal penalties totaling $30,420,000 ($28,500,000 on behalf of ABB Inc. and $1,920,000 on behalf of ABB Ltd. – Jordan). Also on September 2010, ABB Inc. pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to violate the FCPA and one count of violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA, and was sentenced to pay a criminal fine of $17.1 million, which was deducted from the $28.5 million due under the deferred prosecution agreement. On September 29, 2010, ABB Ltd. also settled a related SEC action.

101. United States v. Snamprogetti Netherlands B.V. (S.D. Tex. 2010)⁶⁸

Nature of the Business. Engineering, procurement, and construction (“EPC”) contracts for natural gas liquefaction facilities at Bonny Island in Nigeria (“Bonny Island Project”) as part of a four-company joint venture. Snamprogetti Netherlands B.V. (“Snamprogetti”) is a corporation organized under the laws of the Netherlands and headquartered in Amsterdam. During the conduct at issue, Snamprogetti was a wholly-owned subsidiary of ENI S.p.A. (“ENI”); it is currently a wholly-owned subsidiary of Saipem S.p.A. (“Saipem”).

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $182 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Over $6 billion.
3. Intermediary. Agents.
4. The foreign official. Officials in the executive branch of the Nigerian government; employees of Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation; and employees of Nigeria LNG Limited, controlled by the Nigerian government.

Influence to be Obtained. Snamprogetti participated in a joint venture to obtain and perform EPC contracts to build and expand the Bonny Island Project for Nigeria LNG Limited, which is owned in part by the Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation. The joint venture was awarded four EPC contracts for the Bonny Island Project between 1995 and 2004. From August 1994 until June 2004, Snamprogetti and its partners in the joint venture authorized, promised, and paid bribes to Nigerian government officials, including officials in the executive branch, employees of the government-owned Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation, and employees of government-controlled Nigeria LNG Limited, to win and retain the EPC contracts to build the Bonny Island Project. To conceal the bribes, the joint venture entered into sham consulting or services agreements with intermediaries and held “cultural meetings” where the joint venture partners met with their agents to plan how to pay the bribes. One consultant hired to pay bribes to high-level Nigerian government officials received over $132 million for use in bribing the officials. Another consultant, hired to bribe lower level Nigerian officials, received over $50 million to use for that purpose.

Enforcement. On July 7, 2010, Snamprogetti, ENI, and Saipem entered into a deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ. Snamprogetti agreed to pay a $240 million fine and to cooperate with related investigations. ENI and Saipem each agreed to pay the fine if Snamprogetti defaulted and to cooperate with related investigations. In exchange, the DOJ agreed to defer prosecution of the two criminal counts that it brought against Snamprogetti: conspiracy to violate the FCPA and aiding and abetting violations of the FCPA. If Snamprogetti complies with the terms of the deferred prosecution agreement, the DOJ will drop the charges after two years. In a related civil case brought by the SEC, Snamprogetti and ENI jointly agreed to pay $125 million in disgorgement of profits.

Nature of the Business. Engineering, procurement, and construction (“EPC”) contracts for natural gas liquefaction facilities on Bonny Island in Nigeria (“Bonny Island Project”) as part of a four-company joint venture. Technip S.A. (“Technip”) is a French corporation headquartered in Paris.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $182 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Over $6 billion.
3. Intermediary. Agents.
4. The foreign official. Officials in the executive branch of the Nigerian government, employees of Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation, and employees of Nigeria LNG Limited, controlled by the Nigerian government.

Influence to be Obtained. Technip participated in a joint venture to obtain and perform EPC contracts to build and expand the Bonny Island Project for Nigeria LNG Limited, which is owned in part by the Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation. The joint venture was awarded four EPC contracts for the Bonny Island Project between 1995 and 2004. From August 1994 until June 2004, Technip and its partners in the joint venture authorized, promised, and paid bribes to Nigerian government officials, including officials in the executive branch, employees of the government-owned Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation, and employees of government-controlled Nigeria LNG Limited, to win and retain the EPC contracts to build the Bonny Island Project. To conceal the bribes, the joint venture entered into sham consulting or services agreements with intermediaries and held “cultural meetings” where the joint venture partners met with their agents to plan how to pay the bribes. The joint venture used U.K. and Japanese agents to transfer approximately $182 million to Nigerian officials during the relevant time period.

Enforcement. On June 28, 2010, Technip entered into a two-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ in which it agreed to pay a $240 million penalty and to continue to cooperate with ongoing investigations. Technip also agreed to engage a corporate compliance monitor. In a related civil case brought by the SEC, Technip agreed to pay $98 million in disgorgement of profits.

United States v. DaimlerChrysler Automotive Russia SAO \(D.D.C. 2010\)⁷²
United States v. DaimlerChrysler China Ltd. \(D.D.C. 2010\)⁷³

Nature of the Business. Securing numerous contracts with government customers for the purchase of Daimler vehicles. Daimler is a German vehicle manufacturing company with business operations throughout the world.

Business Location. At least 22 countries including China, Croatia, Egypt, Greece, Hungary, Indonesia, Iraq, Ivory Coast, Latvia, Nigeria, Russia, Serbia and Montenegro, Thailand, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan, and Vietnam.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Tens of millions.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Over $50 million.
3. Intermediary. Various.
4. The foreign official. Various officials involved in the purchase of vehicles around the world.

Influence to be Obtained. Between 1998 and 2008, Daimler AG (“Daimler”) and its subsidiaries made hundreds of improper payments worth tens of millions of dollars to foreign officials to obtain vehicle contracts in at least 22 countries. The alleged improper payments include:

- “Third-party accounts,” maintained as receivable ledger accounts on Daimler’s books but controlled by third parties outside the company or by Daimler subsidiaries. Prior to 2002, these accounts enabled cash disbursements from a “cash desk” located at a Daimler facility in Stuttgart, Germany. Daimler employees took the cash and transported it to other countries to pay bribes to foreign officials. Daimler used these accounts to make improper payments by other methods too.
- Daimler subsidiary DaimlerChrysler Automotive Russia SAO (“DCAR”) made payments to Russian government officials by over-invoicing the customer and then paying the excess amount back to the government officials. Daimler and DCAR also made payments to third parties in connection with the sale of commercial vehicles to Russian government customers with the understanding that the payments would be passed on to Russian government officials.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

- Employees of DaimlerChrysler China Ltd. (“DCCL”) and Daimler made improper payments in the form of commissions, delegation travel, and gifts for the benefit of Chinese government officials in connection with the sale of vehicles to Chinese government customers. Daimler and DCCL inflated the sales price of vehicles sold to Chinese government customers, then maintained a special account to track these overpayments and disburse them to and for the benefit of Chinese officials. Daimler and DCCL also made payments to third party agents who passed the payments on to Chinese officials or used them to buy the officials gifts or trips.
- Daimler Export and Trade Finance GmbH (“DETF”) paid bribes to Croatian government officials, both directly and via U.S.-based shell companies, to secure the sale of fire trucks to the Croatian government.
- Daimler paid kickbacks to the former Iraqi government to obtain contracts for the sale of vehicles to the government of Iraq under the oil-for-food program. Like other companies that have been prosecuted in oil-for-food cases, Daimler agreed to pay a 10% commission to the Iraqi government by inflating contract prices by 10%. The payments were characterized as “after sales services fees,” but no services were performed. Most of Daimler’s oil-for-food contracts involved third-party intermediaries, but Daimler understood its partners would pay the illegal kickbacks to Iraqi ministries.

Enforcement. On March 22, 2010, Daimler and its Chinese subsidiary, DCCL, entered into deferred prosecution agreements with the DOJ. Daimler admitted to violating the books and records provisions of the FCPA and conspiracy to violate the books and records provisions of the FCPA. DCCL admitted to violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA and conspiracy to violate the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA. On the same day, Daimler’s Russian subsidiary, DCAR, and Daimler’s finance subsidiary, DETF, each pleaded guilty to violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA and conspiracy to violate the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA.

Under the terms of its agreement with the DOJ, Daimler must hire an independent monitor for three years to oversee the implementation of a robust compliance program. If Daimler complies fully with its agreement for a period of two years and seven days, the DOJ agrees not to bring any other charges based on this underlying conduct or other conduct that Daimler disclosed to the DOJ.

Daimler and its subsidiaries must pay a $93.6 million fine to the DOJ. Separately, to settle civil charges brought by the SEC, Daimler agreed to pay $91.4 million in disgorgement.

98. United States v. Innospec, Inc.⁷⁴

Nature of the Business. Manufacture and sale of fuel additives and other specialty chemicals by Innospec, Inc. (“Innospec”), a Delaware corporation based in the United Kingdom.

Business Location. Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Over $5,800,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $50 million in profits.
3. Intermediary. Sales Agent/Consultant.
4. The foreign official. Iraqi government officials (Ministry of Oil).

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks from humanitarian goods suppliers.

From 2000 to 2008, Innospec paid, or promised to pay, more than $5,800,000 in kickbacks to the Iraqi government and bribes to Iraqi officials to secure contracts to sell tetraethyl lead (“TEL”) to the Iraqi Ministry of Oil. Innospec’s Swiss subsidiary, Alcor, obtained contracts in the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program by paying kickbacks to Iraq and Iraqi government officials through an Iraqi agent, Ousama Naaman. After the termination of the Oil-for-Food Program, Innospec continued to use Naaman to pay bribes to Iraqi officials, including officials at the Iraqi Ministry of Oil, to secure TEL business from Iraq. Innospec also paid for lavish trips for Iraqi officials, including a honeymoon in Thailand for one and “pocket money” for others during the trips.

Enforcement. On March 18, 2010, Innospec pleaded guilty to violating the anti-bribery and books and records provisions of the FCPA, wire fraud, and conspiracy to commit all three.

The DOJ’s sentencing memorandum notes that Innospec initially denied culpability but has been cooperating with the DOJ since early 2008, including conducting an extensive internal investigation that resulted in the identification of additional improper payments to officials in Indonesia. According to the sentencing memorandum, from 2000 until 2005, Innospec paid bribes to Indonesian government officials to induce the purchase of higher levels of TEL than Indonesia required. The sentencing memorandum notes that this conduct is not charged in the United States because Innospec’s British subsidiary is pleading guilty to it in the United Kingdom. Payments to the Indonesian officials totaled approximately $2,883,507, and from 2000 to 2005 Innospec's profits from sales to Indonesia were approximately $21,506,610.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

Innospec will pay $40.2 million as part of a global settlement with the DOJ, the SEC, the U.K. Serious Fraud Office ("SFO"), and the Office of Foreign Assets Control ("OFAC"). The settlement with OFAC is in connection with the sale of chemicals to Cuban power plants. Innospec agreed to pay a criminal fine of $14.1 million to the DOJ, disgorgement of $11.2 million to the SEC, a criminal fine of $12.7 million to the SFO, and $2.2 million to OFAC. Innospec also agreed to injunctive relief and certain undertakings regarding its FCPA compliance program, including retaining an independent compliance monitor for at least three years.

97. United States v. BAE Systems PLC \(D.D.C. 2010\)⁷⁵

Nature of the Business. Defense, security, and aerospace products. BAE Systems PLC, formerly known as British Aerospace, is a multi-national defense contractor with its headquarters in the United Kingdom.

Business Location. Czech Republic, Hungary, and Saudi Arabia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. More than £135,000,000 and $14,000,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. At least $200,000,000.
3. Intermediary. Offshore shell companies and marketing advisors.
4. The foreign officials. Saudi public official.

Influence to be Obtained. In 2000, BAE made commitments to the U.S. government that it would create and implement policies and procedures to ensure compliance with provisions of the FCPA and relevant provisions of the OECD Convention on Combating Bribery of Foreign Public Officials in International Business Transactions. According to the DOJ, in May and June 2002 BAE falsely stated to the Department of Defense that it had implemented sufficient mechanisms to ensure compliance with the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA.

Before and after its commitments to the U.S. government, BAE regularly retained “marketing advisors” to assist in securing sales of defense articles. Substantial payments were made to these advisors without the type of scrutiny and review required by the FCPA or represented by BAE to the U.S. government. BAE used offshore shell companies to conceal its relationships and payments to these advisors.

Specifically, BAE made undisclosed and unscrutinized payments of more than £19,000,000 to entities associated with an unnamed individual, and at least some of these payments were to secure leases of fighter aircraft to the Czech Republic and Hungary. Additionally, BAE provided substantial benefits, including the purchase of travel and accommodations, security services, real estate, automobiles, and personal items, to a Saudi public official, who was in a position of influence regarding the fighter aircraft BAE sold to the U.K. government, which then sold the aircraft to the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. BAE also agreed to transfer sums totaling more than £10,000,000 and more than $9,000,000 to a bank account in Switzerland controlled by an intermediary while aware there was a high probability that the intermediary would transfer part of these payments to the Saudi public official.

Enforcement. The DOJ filed a criminal information on February 4, 2010 charging BAE with conspiring to defraud the U.S. and to make false statements to the U.S. government, and with violating the Arms Export Control Act and International Traffic in Arms Regulations by failing to disclose commission payments.

⁷⁵ U.S. v. BAE Systems, No. 1:10-cr-00035 (D.D.C. 2010).

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

On March 1, 2010, BAE pleaded guilty to these charges and agreed to pay a penalty of $400,000,000, implement an effective compliance system, and retain a compliance monitor for a three-year term.

BAE was not charged with FCPA liability. However, according to the statement of offense, BAE made payments to advisors through offshore shell companies even though “there was a high probability that part of the payments would be used to ensure that [BAE] was favored in the foreign government decisions regarding the sales of defense articles.” It is likely that debarment consequences were considered; the sentencing memorandum notes “mandatory exclusion under EU debarment regulations is unlikely in light of the nature of the charge” to which BAE is pleading.

On February 5, 2010, BAE announced that it had reached settlements with the DOJ and the U.K.’s Serious Fraud Office (“SFO”). To resolve the SFO’s investigation, BAE agreed to plead guilty to breach of duty to keep accounting records for payments made to a marketing advisor in Tanzania and pay a penalty of £30 million.

96. United States v. Richard T. Bistrong \(D.D.C. 2010\)⁷⁶

Nature of the Business. Military and law enforcement equipment. Richard T. Bistrong, a U.S. citizen, was vice-president for international sales of Armor Holdings, Inc., a protective equipment company headquartered in Jacksonville, Florida.

Business Location. Netherlands and Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $4.4 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. At least $8.4 million.
3. Intermediary. Agents.
4. The foreign officials. U.N. procurement official, Dutch procurement officer, and an official with the Independent National Election Commission of Nigeria (“INECN”).

Influence to be Obtained. From 2001 to 2006, Bistrong and others used agents and consultants to make corrupt payments to foreign officials to obtain business for a protective equipment company and then concealed those payments by falsifying invoices. Bistrong made payments through an agent to a U.N. procurement official to obtain non-public information about other bids submitted for a contract to supply U.N. peacekeeping forces with body armor. Bistrong also used a third-party intermediary to make payments based on an invoice for marketing services to a Dutch procurement officer who used his influence to have the National Police Services Agency of the Netherlands issue a tender that could be satisfied only by pepper spray manufactured by Bistrong’s employer. Further, Bistrong admitted that he had instructed a colleague to pay a kickback to a company designated by an official with INECN in exchange for INECN’s purchase of fingerprint ink pads from Bistrong’s employer.

According to media reports, Bistrong is the individual who facilitate introductions between undercover U.S. government agents and the 22 members of the military and law enforcement products industry who were later charged with offering bribes to the Minister of Defense of an unnamed African country (the so-called “SHOT-Show” cases). Jonathan Spiller, former CEO of Armor Holdings, was one of the 22 executives and employees. Armor Holdings became a subsidiary of BAE Systems in 2007 and voluntarily disclosed the unlawful conduct to the DOJ and SEC.

Enforcement. On January 21, 2010, the DOJ filed a criminal information charging Bistrong with conspiracy to violate the FCPA’s anti-bribery provision, its books and records provisions, and the Department of Commerce’s export license requirements. On September 16, 2010, Bistrong pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to violate the FCPA. Prior to his sentencing, the DOJ requested that Bistrong be spared jail based on his “extraordinary cooperation.” However, on July 31, 2012, Bistrong was sentenced to 18 months in prison followed by 36 months’ probation.

Meanwhile, the SHOT-Show cases were dismissed in their entirety in February 2012.

Separately, Armor Holdings, Inc. entered into a non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ, agreeing to pay a $10.29 million fine. Armor Holdings also signed an agreement with the SEC, consenting to entry of a permanent injunction against further violations and agreeing to pay $1,552,306 in disgorgement, $458,438 in prejudgment interest, and a civil money penalty of $3,680,000.

95. *United States v. UTStarcom, Inc. (2009)*⁷⁷

Nature of the Business. Provision of global telecommunications services, including the design, manufacture, and sales of network equipment and handsets by UTStarcom China Co. Ltd., a wholly-owned subsidiary of UTStarcom, Inc. (“UTStarcom”), a Delaware corporation.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $7,000,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. None.
4. The foreign officials. Employees of Chinese government-owned telecommunications companies.

Influence to be Obtained. Obtaining lucrative telecommunications contracts for UTStarcom China Co. Ltd. Between 2002 and 2007, UTStarcom paid for more than 225 overseas “training” trips for employees of Chinese government-owned telecommunications companies. In actuality, the trips were primarily for sightseeing. UTStarcom arranged for the all-expense paid trips to destinations including Hawaii, Las Vegas, and New York to obtain and retain customer contracts and then improperly recorded the trips as training expenses.

In 2006, UTStarcom’s audit committee began an internal investigation into the improper payments which eventually uncovered and disclosed the infractions.

Enforcement. On December 31, 2009, UTStarcom entered into a non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ, agreeing to pay a $1.5 million penalty, implement rigorous internal controls, and cooperate fully going forward.

In a complaint filed December 31, 2009, the SEC alleged corrupt conduct by UTStarcom in addition to the provision of travel detailed in the non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ. On April 13, 2011, without admitting or denying the allegations, UTStarcom consented to entry of final judgment in its matter against the SEC.

1. Amount of the value. Various payments made as part of a 20% commission to sales agents defendants believed represented a government official.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $15 million.
3. Intermediary. Sales Agents.
4. The foreign official. None (Undercover FBI Sting).

Influence to be Obtained. On January 19, 2010, the DOJ unsealed the indictments of 22 executives and employees of companies in the military and law enforcement equipment industry for engaging in a scheme to bribe foreign government officials. According to the DOJ, it is the largest single investigation and prosecution against individuals in the history of the DOJ's enforcement of the FCPA and the first large-scale use of undercover law enforcement techniques to uncover FCPA violations. FBI agents arrested 21 of the defendants in Las Vegas during an industry conference. The indictments are known as the "SHOT-Show" cases.

According to the DOJ press release, a business associate of the 22 executives and employees facilitated introductions with undercover FBI agents posing as representatives or procurement officers for the Minister of Defense of an unnamed Africa country. The defendants allegedly agreed to pay a sales agent a 20% commission to obtain a contract to outfit the African country's presidential guard, knowing that half the "commission" would be paid as a bribe to the Minister of Defense and half would be split between the sales agent and the business associate who facilitated the introduction. The DOJ alleges the defendants made "commission" payments to bank accounts in the U.S. as test sales for the purpose of winning the larger contract.

According to media reports, Richard T. Bistrong is the individual, unnamed in the indictments, who facilitated introductions between the undercover FBI agents and the 22 indicted individuals. On January 21, 2010, the DOJ charged Bistrong with conspiracy to violate the FCPA, but with regard to actions unrelated to the SHOT-Show sting. Bistrong pleaded guilty on September 16, 2010, and on July 31, 2012, he was sentenced to 18 months in prison followed by 36 months' probation.

Enforcement. On December 11, 2009, the DOJ filed indictments charging the 22 executives and employees with conspiring to violate the FCPA, substantive violations of the FCPA, and conspiring to engage in money laundering. The original indictments did not charge a single conspiracy but a number of separate conspiracies. However, on March 16, 2010, the DOJ filed a superseding indictment replacing the original 16 indictments in the "Shot Show" cases with one indictment that alleges a single overarching conspiracy. The 44 count superseding indictment seeks forfeiture of any proceeds traceable to FCPA offenses or money laundering. In support of the conspiracy allegation, the superseding indictment alleges that the defendants attended a dinner in Washington, DC on October 5, 2009 to celebrate the completion of the first phase of the contract with the African company and that they traveled to the "SHOT-Show" conference in Las Vegas in January 2010 in connection with the same business.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

Three defendants pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA: Daniel Alvarez on March 11, 2011; Jonathan Spiller on March 29, 2011; and Haim Geri on April 28, 2011.

The trials resulted in a series of mistrials and acquittals, and, in February 2012, the court granted the DOJ's motion to dismiss the charges against the remaining defendants. Later that month, charges against Alvarez, Spiller, and Geri were dismissed as well.

93. United States v. Joel Esquenazi, Carlos Rodriguez, Robert Antoine, Jean Rene Duperval, and Marguerite Grandison \(S.D. Fla. 2009\)
United States v. Washington Vasconez Cruz, Cecilia Zurita, Amadeus Richers, Cinergy Telecommunications, Inc., Patrick Joseph, Jean Rene Duperval, and Marguerite Grandison \(second superseding indictment, filed January 2012\)⁹⁴
United States v. Jean Fourcand \(S.D. Fla. 2010\)⁹⁵

Nature of the Business. Three Miami-Dade County telecommunications companies executed a series of contracts with Telecommunications D'Haiti that allowed the companies' customers to place telephone calls to Haiti. U.S. citizens Joel Esquenazi and Carlos Rodriguez are executives of one of the unnamed Miami-Dade telecommunications companies. Cinergy Telecommunications, Inc. ("Cinergy") is one of the companies alleged to have paid bribes, with Washington Vasconez Cruz (Cinergy's President), his wife Cecilia Zurita (former Vice President of Cinergy), and Amadeus Richers (Cinergy's Director) authorizing the payments. Jean Rene Duperval, Robert Antoine and Patrick Joseph, Haitian citizens, are former Directors of International Relations of Telecommunications D' Haiti, Haiti's state-owned national telecommunications company. Marguerite Grandison, a permanent resident of the U.S. and sister of Duperval, is the President of Telecom Consulting Services Corp., one of the Miami-Dade County telecommunications companies.

Business Location. Haiti.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $888,818 in illegal money transfers in furtherance of the conspiracy and another $75,000 in bribes.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Shell company, and co-defendant Grandison's company.
4. The foreign officials. Duperval, Antoine and Joseph, Directors of International Relations of Telecommunications D'Haiti.

Influence to be Obtained. Esquenazi, Rodriguez, Grandison, Cinergy, Vasconez, and Richers were charged with making illegal payments to Haitian officials Duperval and Antoine. In exchange, Duperval and Antoine are alleged to have conferred business advantages on the Miami-Dade County companies, including issuing preferred telecommunications rates, reducing the number of minutes for which payment was owed, and giving a variety of credits to owed sums. A shell company, owned by alleged co-conspirator Juan Diaz, and co-defendant Grandison's company were allegedly used to make the payments to Duperval and Antoine.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

Enforcement. On December 4, 2009, the DOJ filed a 21-count indictment charging Esquenazi, Rodriguez, and Grandison with conspiring to violate and violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA, money laundering, and other offenses. Duperval and Antoine, the alleged recipients of the bribes, are charged with money laundering, not FCPA violations. A special unit of the Haitian National Police arrested Duperval in Haiti and expelled him to the U.S. to face charges. Antoine pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit money laundering, and on June 1, 2010, he was sentenced to 48 months in prison. On May 29, 2012, Antoine's sentence was reduced to 18 months upon motion by the DOJ. In April 2009, alleged co-conspirators Diaz and Antonio Perez pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA's anti-bribery provision and to commit money laundering.

The court has denied multiple motions to dismiss filed by Esquenazi, including one motion to dismiss challenging whether Duperval and Antoine are foreign officials within the meaning of the FCPA. On July 13, 2011, a superseding indictment was filed against Washington Vasconez Cruz, Amadeus Richers, Cinergy Telecommunications, Inc., Patrick Joseph, Jean Rene Duperval and Marguerite Grandison. On November 25, 2010, as a result of a redacted confession by Duperval, Judge Jose E. Martinez ordered the trial of Esquenazi and Rodriguez severed from the trial of Duperval and Grandison. The trial of Esquenazi and Rodriguez began on July 18, 2011, and both were convicted on all counts on August 5, 2011. On October 13, 2011, the court denied motions for judgment of acquittal and a new trial filed by Esquenazi and Rodriguez. On October 25, 2011, Esquenazi was sentenced to 15 years in prison, the longest sentence imposed to date in a case involving violations of the FCPA. Rodriguez was sentenced to 84 months. The defendants were also ordered to forfeit $3.09 million. Both appealed their convictions to the Eleventh Circuit, and oral arguments were held on October 11, 2013.

On January 19, 2012, a second superseding indictment was filed against Vasconez, Richers, Cinergy, Joseph, Duperval, and Grandison, with the addition of Vasconez's wife, Cecilia Zurita (former Vice President of Cinergy).

On February 24, 2012, the court issued an order of dismissal as to Cinergy after the government learned that Cinergy was a non-operational entity that effectively exists only on paper. Cinergy then filed a petition for re-hearing on, or in the alternative, clarification of, the order of dismissal. The court denied the motion, and Cinergy filed, and subsequently voluntarily dismissed, an appeal to the Eleventh Circuit.

Duperval's trial began on March 1, 2012. He was found guilty on all counts, and he was sentenced to 108 months' imprisonment and three years of supervised release, along with a $2,100 assessment. Duperval filed an appeal to the Eleventh Circuit on June 1, 2012. As of December 31, 2013, briefing is complete, but oral arguments have not yet been scheduled.

On February 8, 2012, Joseph pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit money laundering, and was sentenced to 12 months in prison on July 6, 2012.

In February 2012, Grandison entered into an 18-month pretrial diversion agreement with the DOJ. Upon successful completion of the diversion program in August 2013, the charges against Grandison were dismissed on September 24, 2013.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

Vasconez, Zurita, and Richers are fugitives.

The DOJ acknowledged the substantial assistance of Haitian authorities in the investigation.

Related Case. U.S. v. Fourcand (S.D. Fla. 2010).

On February 19, 2010, Jean Fourcand, a U.S. citizen, pleaded guilty to money laundering. Fourcand received funds in 2001 and 2002 from U.S. telecommunications companies for the benefit of Robert Antoine. The funds Fourcand received were bribery payments, and Antoine conferred advantages on the three Miami-Dade County telecommunications companies in return. Juan Diaz served as intermediary for the funds Fourcand received. Fourcand agreed to forfeit $18,500. On May 5, 2010, Fourcand was sentenced to six months in prison.

92. United States v. John Joseph O’Shea \(S.D. Tex. 2009\)⁹⁶
United States v. Fernando Maya Basurto \(S.D. Tex. 2009\)⁹⁷

Nature of the Business. John Joseph O’Shea was the general manager of the Texas unit of ABB, a multinational conglomerate headquartered in Switzerland. Fernando Maya Basurto directed a Mexican company that served as a sales representative for ABB in Mexico.

Business Location. Mexico.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Over $900,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $81 million.
3. Intermediary. Mexican shell companies.
4. The foreign official. Four top officials with the Comisión Federal de Electricidad (“CFE”), Mexico’s national electric grid operator.

Influence to be Obtained. Federal prosecutors allege O’Shea conspired with Basurto to bribe four officials of the CFE to obtain lucrative contracts for upgrading Mexico’s electrical network. ABB acquired the Texas unit in 1999, when prosecutors allege the bribery scheme was already underway. CFE officials were allegedly to be paid 10% of the revenues from a contract awarded to ABB known as the Evergreen contract. The officials received over $900,000 in bribes before an internal investigation at ABB halted the transfers. The payments were routed through Mexican shell corporations and a bank account in Germany. Basurto and another co-conspirator received approximately 9% on the value of the contracts in exchange for being a conduit for the bribes and other services. O’Shea also received kickback payments from Basurto and the other co-conspirator under this arrangement. O’Shea was ultimately fired, and after that, he, Basurto, and some of the Mexican officials allegedly tried to cover up the bribery by creating fake, backdated documents. ABB voluntarily disclosed the suspected bribery to U.S. and Mexican authorities in 2005.

Enforcement. On November 16, 2009, Basurto pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to violate the FCPA, money laundering, and falsifying records. Pursuant to his plea, he agreed to forfeit $2,030,076.74. On April 5, 2012, Basurto was sentenced to time served, which amounted to the 22 months he served in jail after his arrest in 2009.

Also on November 16, 2009, the DOJ charged O’Shea with conspiracy, twelve counts of violating the FCPA, four counts of international money laundering violations, and falsifying records in a federal investigation. On December 3, 2009, O’Shea pleaded not guilty to all counts. On January 16, 2012, after a three-day jury trial, U.S. District Judge Lynn N. Hughes granted O’Shea’s motion for acquittal on the substantive charges. Judge Hughes commented that the government’s principal witness, Basurto, Jr., “knows almost nothing.” Additionally, Judge Hughes noted that while the government is not required to “trace a particular dollar to a particular pocket of a particular official,” the government is required to show some connection between a payment and a foreign official, which it failed to do in O’Shea’s case. On February 9, 2012, upon the government’s motion to dismiss, the remaining counts of the indictment were dismissed with prejudice .

91. United States v. Charles Paul Edward Jumet \(E.D. Va. 2009\)⁹⁸
United States v. John W. Warwick \(E.D. Va. 2009\)⁹⁹

Nature of the Business. Maritime contract from the Panamanian government. Charles Paul Edward Jumet, a U.S. citizen, was vice president and later president of the Ports Engineering Consultants Corporation (“PECC”), a Panama company. John Warwick, a U.S. citizen, was president of PECC.

Business Location. Panama.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Over $200,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. None.
4. The foreign officials. Administrator of Panama’s National Maritime Ports Authority and a high-ranking elected executive official of the Republic of Panama.

Influence to be Obtained. In 1997, PECC was awarded a no-bid, 20-year contract by the Administrator of Panama’s National Maritime Ports Authority allowing PECC to collect tariffs from ships that went into the port of Panama, maintain the lighthouse and buoys, and conduct engineering studies. In exchange for the contract, Jumet and Warwick authorized over $200,000 in corrupt payments to the Administrator of Panama’s National Maritime Ports Authority and a high-ranking elected executive official of the Republic of Panama. The payments were made in the form of “dividends” to shareholder shell companies belonging to these officials. Jumet claimed a “dividend” check for $18,000 was a donation for the high-ranking official’s re-election campaign. The contract was suspended by Panama’s Comptroller General in 2000, but after an investigation payments to PECC by the Panamanian government resumed in 2003.

Enforcement. On November 10, 2009, the DOJ charged Jumet with conspiracy to bribe foreign officials in violation of the FCPA, as well as making a false statement to the U.S. government that a check was a campaign donation rather than a bribe. Jumet pleaded guilty on November 13, 2009. As part of his plea agreement, Jumet agreed to cooperate with the DOJ in its ongoing investigation. On April 19, 2010, Jumet was sentenced to 87 months of imprisonment, which consists of 60 months for the count of violating the FCPA and 27 months for the count of making a false statement, to be served consecutively. He was also sentenced to three years of supervised release on each count, to run concurrently, and a fine of $15,000 on the count of violating the FCPA.

On December 15, 2009, the DOJ charged Warwick with conspiracy to bribe foreign officials in violation of the FCPA. Warwick pleaded guilty on February 10, 2010. As part of his plea agreement, Warwick agreed to forfeit $331,000, which represents the proceeds of this crime. On June 25, 2010, Warwick was sentenced to 37 months of imprisonment and a supervised release of two years.

Jumet and Warwick may have only been charged with conspiracy to violate the FCPA, rather than substantive violations of the FCPA, because almost all of their corrupt conduct took place outside of the statute of limitations period. The most recent corrupt payment was made in July 2003, falling outside of the 5-year statute of limitations period, so the DOJ may have made a request for foreign evidence to toll the statute of limitations.

90. United States v. AGCO Ltd. (D.D.C. 2009)¹⁰⁰

Nature of the Business. AGCO Ltd. is the U.K. subsidiary of AGCO Corp. (“AGCO”), a U.S. corporation based in Duluth, Georgia that manufactures and sells agricultural machinery and equipment.

Business Location. Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $553,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Jordanian agent.
4. The foreign officials. Former Iraqi Ministry of Agriculture.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

Following the creation of the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program in 2000, AGCO Ltd. hired a Jordanian agent to help increase its business with Iraq. From 2001 to 2002, AGCO Ltd. paid approximately $553,000 to the former Iraqi Ministry of Agriculture through its Jordanian agent to secure three contracts for the sale of agricultural equipment. To pay these kickbacks, AGCO Ltd. inflated the price of its contracts by 13 to 21% before submitting the contracts to the U.N. for approval. From 2001 to 2003, AGCO Ltd. falsely described these kickbacks in its books and records as “Ministry Accruals” it paid to its agent. AGCO’s legal department failed to review AGCO Ltd.’s contracts, agency agreements, and payment requests submitted to the U.N. in connection with AGCO’s Oil-for-Food contracts.

Enforcement. On September 30, 2009, the DOJ filed a criminal information against AGCO Ltd., charging it with one count of conspiracy to commit wire fraud and to violate the books and records provisions of the FCPA. AGCO acknowledged responsibility for its subsidiaries’ actions related to the Oil-for-Food program and entered into a three-year deferred-prosecution agreement (“DPA”) with the DOJ.

Under the DPA, AGCO agreed to pay a penalty of $1.6 million and cooperate with the DOJ in further related investigations. AGCO also agreed to implement an anti-corruption compliance program and review, and modify if necessary, its internal controls. If AGCO abides by the terms of the DPA, the government will dismiss the criminal information filed against AGCO Ltd. at the end of the three-year term of the agreement.

89. *United States v. Helmerich & Payne, Inc. (2009)*¹⁰¹

Nature of the Business. Helmerich & Payne, Inc. (“H&P”), a U.S. corporation, engages in the contract drilling of oil and gas wells in the United States and internationally.

Business Location. Argentina, Venezuela.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Payments totaling approximately $173,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. The avoidance of approximately $204,000 in customs-related costs.
3. Intermediary. Customs brokers.
4. The foreign officials. Argentine and Venezuelan customs officials.

Influence to be Obtained. Between 2003 and 2008, H&P’s Argentine and Venezuelan subsidiaries made approximately $173,000 in improper payments through their customs brokers to customs officials in Argentina and Venezuela to allow and to expedite the importation and exportation of equipment and materials that were not in compliance with the regulations of those countries. Those improper payments enabled the subsidiaries to avoid approximately $204,000 in expenses they would have incurred had they properly imported and exported the equipment and materials. The subsidiaries also made approximately $10,000 in facilitation payments. The customs brokers disguised the improper payments and the facilitation payments on their invoices to the subsidiaries.

Enforcement. On July 29, 2009, the DOJ and H&P entered into a 2-year non-prosecution agreement, under which H&P agreed to pay a fine of $1 million, to take remedial actions, and to make periodic reports to the DOJ regarding its compliance with the NPA. H&P also settled a related action with the SEC, consenting to a disgorgement of $375,681 including prejudgment interest.

88. United States v. Control Components, Inc. (C.D. Cal. 2009)¹⁰²

Nature of the Business. Control Components, Inc. (“CCI”), a Delaware corporation based in Rancho Santa Margarita, California, designs and manufactures severe service control valves used in the nuclear, oil and gas, and power generation industries. CCI is a wholly-owned subsidiary of British engineering company, IMI plc (“IMI”).

Business Location. China, South Korea, Malaysia, and the United Arab Emirates.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $4,900,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Consultants.
4. The foreign officials. Employees of various state-owned entities, including, but not limited to: employees of Jiangsu Nuclear Power Corporation, Guohua Electric Power, China Petroleum Materials and Equipment Corporation, PetroChina, Dongfang Electric Corporation, and China National Offshore Oil Company (China); Korea Hydro Nuclear Power (South Korea); Petronas (Malaysia); and National Petroleum Construction Company (United Arab Emirates).

Influence to be Obtained. From 2003 through 2007, CCI senior executives approved, and in some cases personally made, payments totaling approximately $4.9 million to officers and employees of numerous state-owned customers for the purpose of influencing the award of contracts and project technical specifications. From these payments, CCI derived approximately $31.7 million in net profits.

During the same period, CCI made corrupt payments of approximately $1.95 million to employees of privately owned companies. In total, CCI made approximately 236 corrupt payments in more than 30 countries.

CCI executives also rewarded customers’ employees for the award of contracts with expensive gifts and extravagant overseas holidays to destinations including Disneyland, Las Vegas, and Hawaii under the guise of training and inspection trips. In addition, CCI paid the college tuition of the children of at least two executives of CCI’s customers.

In 2004, CCI employees provided false and misleading information in connection with an internal audit of CCI commission payments carried out by IMI and created false invoices to cover up illicit payments. In 2007, many of the same employees continued to provide false and misleading information and destroyed documents to mislead internal investigators.

Enforcement. On July 22, 2009, federal prosecutors filed a criminal information against CCI alleging one count of conspiracy to violate the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA and the Travel Act (through commercial bribery in violation of California state law). CCI was also charged with two counts of violation of the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA based on payments to employees of China National Offshore Oil Company, totaling approximately $58,500, and Korea Hydro and Nuclear Power, totaling approximately $57,173.

On the same day, CCI and the DOJ entered an agreement under which CCI pleaded guilty to the three count indictment. CCI agreed to: pay a criminal fine of $18,200,000 and a special assessment of $1,200, create and adopt an anti-corruption compliance code, and enter a three-year term of organizational probation during which time it will retain an independent corporate compliance monitor. The fine agreed upon is below the applicable sentencing guideline range in recognition of CCI's disclosure of evidence and termination of CCI officers and employees primarily involved in the illegal conduct, among other factors. The district court entered judgment and commitment against CCI, in accordance with the terms of the plea agreement, on July 31, 2009.

In related matters, the DOJ obtained indictments against eight former CCI executives related to the same conduct—as of the end of 2013, seven have pleaded guilty and have been sentenced. The remaining defendant, Han Yong Kim, is considered a fugitive after his failed motion for leave to file a special appearance, and U.S. officials continue to seek his extradition. Kim filed a renewed motion for leave to file a special appearance in May 2013.

87. United States v. Novo Nordisk A/S (D.D.C. 2009)¹⁰³

Nature of the Business. Novo Nordisk is an international manufacturer of insulin, medicines, and other pharmaceutical supplies headquartered in Denmark.

Business Location. Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $1.4 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. €22 million.
3. Intermediary. Agent.
4. The foreign official. Kickbacks were paid to Kimadia, a state-owned company which was part of the Iraqi Ministry of Health.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

Novo Nordisk paid illegal kickbacks to the former government of Iraq to secure contracts to provide insulin and other medical supplies to Iraq under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program. Novo Nordisk agents and employees in Greece and Jordan handled the sales to Iraq. Novo Nordisk inflated the price of contracts by 10% before submitting them to the United Nations for approval and then used the extra funds to make illegal payments to the Iraqi Ministry of Health through a Jordanian intermediary. Novo Nordisk inaccurately recorded the payments as “commissions” in its books and records.

The government did not allege bribery of any individual foreign governmental officials.

Enforcement. Federal prosecutors filed a criminal information against Novo Nordisk on May 11, 2009 charging conspiracy to commit wire fraud and violate the books and records provisions of the FCPA. Pursuant to a deferred prosecution agreement, Novo Nordisk agreed to pay a $9 million fine.

In a related settlement with the SEC, Novo Nordisk agreed to pay $3,025,066 in civil penalties and $6,005,079 in disgorgement and prejudgment interest.

86. United States v. Juan Diaz (S.D. Fla. 2009)¹⁰⁴

Nature of the Business. Three Miami-Dade County telecommunications companies executed a series of contracts with Telecommunications D'Haiti that allowed the companies' customers to place telephone calls to Haiti. Juan Diaz, a U.S. citizen, owned a shell company used by the Miami-Dade County telecommunications companies to make payments to government officials in Haiti.

Business Location. Haiti.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Diaz kept $73,824 as commissions and paid $955,028 in bribes to two Haitian officials.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Shell company.
4. The foreign official. Then-Director of International Relations and then-Director General of Telecommunications D'Haiti, the state-owned telecommunications company.

Influence to be Obtained. Diaz and a co-conspirator, Antonio Perez, a former controller for one of the Miami-Dade County telecommunications companies, admitted they conspired with the Miami-Dade County companies to make "side payments" through a shell company, owned by Diaz, to the then-Director of International Relations and the then-Director General of Telecommunications D'Haiti from 2001 to 2003. In exchange, the foreign officials are alleged to have conferred business advantages on the Miami-Dade County companies, including issuing preferred telecommunications rates, reducing the number of minutes for which payment was owed, and giving a variety of credits to owed sums. Diaz helped conceal the payments by writing in nonexistent invoice numbers in the memo section of checks.

Enforcement. On April 22, 2009, the DOJ filed a one-count indictment against Diaz. On May 15, 2009, Diaz pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA's anti-bribery provision and to commit money laundering. On July 30, 2010, Diaz was sentenced to 57 months in prison and ordered to pay $73,824 in restitution. Diaz also forfeited his right, title, and interest in assets totaling $1,028,852.

On January 24, 2011, Diaz's co-conspirator, Antonio Perez, was sentenced to 24 months in prison and 2 years of supervised release. He was ordered to pay $36,375, representing the amount of the proceeds of the conspiracy traceable to Perez's personal account.

On December 4, 2009, three executives of the Miami-Dade County companies allegedly involved in the scheme and two Haitian officials were indicted on related charges. On July 13, 2011, a superseding indictment was filed against one of the companies allegedly involved, two of the company's executives, and an additional Haitian official. On January 19, 2012, a second superseding indictment was filed, naming one additional defendant (another executive of the company, who was the wife of the company's CEO). Two executives have been convicted so far, with one sentenced to 15 years in prison, the longest sentence ever imposed in a case involving violations of the FCPA. Both are appealing their convictions. One of the officials has pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to 12 months in prison. Another official was convicted on all counts, and he was sentenced to 108 months imprisonment and three years' supervised release. He is appealing his sentence.

85. United States v. Antonio Perez (S.D. Fla. 2009)¹⁰⁵

Nature of the Business. Three Miami-Dade County telecommunications companies executed a series of contracts with Telecommunications D’Haiti that allowed the companies’ customers to place telephone calls to Haiti. Antonio Perez, a U.S. citizen, was a controller for Telecom Consulting Services Corp., one of the Miami-Dade County telecommunications companies.

Business Location. Haiti.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. During the course of the conspiracy, Perez’s employer paid approximately $674,193 in bribes to former Haitian government officials; Perez personally assisted in making $36,375 in side payments.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Shell company.
4. The foreign official. Then-Director of International Relations of Telecommunications D’Haiti, the state-owned telecommunications company.

Influence to be Obtained. Perez and a co-conspirator, Juan Diaz, admitted they conspired with the three Miami-Dade County companies to make “side payments” through a shell company owned by Diaz to the then-Director of International Relations at Telecommunications D’Haiti from 2001 to 2003. In exchange, the foreign officials are alleged to have conferred business advantages on the Miami-Dade County companies, including issuing preferred telecommunications rates, reducing the number of minutes for which payment was owed, and giving a variety of credits to owed sums. Perez admitted that from November 2001 through January 2002, he offered to pay and assisted with the processing of the “side payments” to the then-Director of International Relations for Telecommunications D’Haiti and that he helped conceal the payments through the use of a shell company and by recording the payments as “consulting services.”

Enforcement. On April 22, 2009, the DOJ filed a one-count indictment against Perez. On April 27, 2009, Perez pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA’s anti-bribery provision and to commit money laundering. On January 24, 2011, Perez was sentenced to 24 months in prison and 2 years of supervised release. He also agreed to forfeit $36,375, which is the amount of the proceeds traceable to his personal conduct. The forfeiture will be satisfied if the United States collects from the other co-conspirators the full value of the proceeds derived from the conspiracy.

On May 15, 2009, Perez’s co-conspirator Diaz pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA’s anti-bribery provision and to commit money laundering. On July 30, 2010, Diaz was sentenced to 57 months in prison and ordered to pay $73,824 in restitution. Diaz also forfeited his right, title, and interest in assets totaling $1,028,852.

On December 4, 2009, three executives of the Miami-Dade County companies allegedly involved in the scheme and two Haitian officials were indicted on related charges. On July 13, 2011, a superseding indictment was filed against one of the companies allegedly involved, two of the company's executives, and an additional Haitian official. On January 19, 2012, a second superseding indictment was filed, naming one additional defendant (another executive of the company, who was the wife of the company's CEO). Two executives have been convicted so far, with one sentenced to 15 years in prison, the longest sentence ever imposed in a case involving violations of the FCPA. Both are appealing their convictions. One of the officials has pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to 12 months in prison. 84. United States v. Stuart Carson, Hong Carson, Paul Cosgrove, David Edmonds, Flavio Ricotti, and Han Yong Kim (C.D. Cal. 2009)¹⁰⁶

Nature of the Business. Stuart Carson and his five co-defendants are former executives of Control Components, Inc. (“CCI”), a California-based company that designs and manufactures severe service control valves used in the nuclear, oil and gas, and power generation industries. Stuart Carson was Chief Executive Officer. His wife, Hong Carson, a/k/a Rose Carson, was Director of Sales for China and Taiwan. Paul Cosgrove was Executive Vice President. David Edmonds was Vice President of Worldwide Customer Service. Flavio Ricotti was Vice President and Head of Sales for Europe, Africa, and the Middle East. CCI retained Han Yong Kim as a consultant to advise CCI operations in South Korea in 2005; from 1997 to 2005 he was President of CCI’s South Korea office. The Carsons, Cosgrove, and Edmonds are U.S. citizens. Ricotti is a citizen of Italy and Kim is a citizen of South Korea.

Business Location. China, South Korea, Malaysia, and the United Arab Emirates.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $4,900,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Consultants.
4. The foreign officials. Employees of various state-owned entities, including, but not limited to: Jiangsu Nuclear Power Corporation, Guohua Electric Power, China Petroleum Materials and Equipment Corporation, PetroChina, Dongfang Electric Corporation, and China National Offshore Oil Company (China); Korea Hydro Nuclear Power (South Korea); Petronas (Malaysia); and National Petroleum Construction Company (United Arab Emirates).

Influence to be Obtained. From 2003 through 2007, federal prosecutors allege that Carson and his co-defendants approved, and in some cases personally made, payments totaling approximately $4.9 million to officers and employees of numerous state-owned customers for the purpose of influencing the award of contracts and project technical specifications. From these payments, CCI derived approximately $31.7 million in net profits.

During the same period, prosecutors allege that the defendants made corrupt payments of approximately $1.95 million to employees of privately owned companies. In total, the defendants allegedly made approximately 236 corrupt payments in over 30 countries.

Carson is the alleged “prime architect” of CCI’s “friend-in-camp” sales model through which the defendants rewarded customers’ employees for the award of contracts to CCI with money, expensive gifts, tuition payments, and extravagant overseas holidays to destinations including Disneyland, Las Vegas, and Hawaii under the guise of training and inspection trips.

¹⁰⁶ U.S. v. Carson, et al., No. 09-00077 (C.D. Cal. 2009).

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

In 2004, Stuart Carson, Hong Carson, Edmonds, and Kim allegedly interfered and provided false and misleading information in connection with an internal audit of CCI commission payments carried out by CCI's parent company, IMI plc. According to the indictment, Edmonds created false invoices and spreadsheets to cover up illicit payments. In 2007, Hong Carson, Cosgrove, Edmonds, and Ricotti allegedly provided false and misleading information about CCI's commission payments to internal investigators. Also, during the 2007 internal investigation, Hong Carson allegedly flushed documents down a toilet to prevent their discovery.

Enforcement. On April 8, 2009, a federal grand jury indicted all six defendants for conspiracy to violate the FCPA and the Travel Act (through commercial bribery of employees of private companies in violation of California state law). Stuart Carson was also indicted on two counts of bribery under the FCPA. Hong Carson was indicted on five counts of bribery under the FCPA as well as one count for obstruction of justice for intentionally destroying records. Cosgrove was indicted on six counts of bribery under the FCPA and one count under the Travel Act. Edmonds was indicted on three counts of bribery under the FCPA and two counts under the Travel Act. Ricotti was indicted on one count of bribery under the FCPA and three counts under the Travel Act. Kim was indicted on two counts of bribery under the FCPA.

German authorities arrested Ricotti in Frankfurt, Germany in February 2010; he was extradited to the U.S. on July 2, 2010 and first made an appearance in the case on July 12, 2009. Kim made an appearance on March 4, 2011.

On May 18, 2011, the Court denied the defendants' motion to dismiss Counts 1-10 which argued that the definition of "foreign official" in the FCPA did not include the employees of state-owned enterprises. Kim is considered a fugitive after his failed motion for leave to file a special appearance, and U.S. officials continue to seek his extradition. He filed a renewed motion to file a special appearance in May 2013.

On April 16, 2012, Stuart and Hong Carson, each pleaded guilty to separate one-count superseding informations charging them with making a corrupt payment to a foreign government official in violation of the FCPA. Stuart Carson was sentenced to four months in prison and ordered to pay a fine of $20,000. Hong Carson was sentenced to three years' probation and ordered to pay a fine of $20,000.

Flavio Ricotti pleaded guilty on April 28, 2011, and was sentenced on March 18, 2013 to time served. Cosgrove pleaded guilty on May 29, 2012, and on September 14, 2012 was sentenced to 13 months' home confinement and a $20,000 fine. Edmonds pleaded guilty on June 15, 2012, and on December 17, 2012, was sentenced to 4 months in prison followed by 4 months' home confinement, with a $20,000 fine.

83. United States v. Latin Node, Inc. (S.D. Fla. 2009)¹⁰⁷

Nature of the Business. Interconnection agreements with state-owned telecommunications companies in Honduras and Yemen by Latin Node, Inc., (“Latin Node”), a privately held U.S. corporation acquired in 2007 by eLandia International Inc. (“eLandia”), a U.S. corporation. Latin Node provided telecommunications services using Internet protocol technology.

Business Location. Honduras, Yemen.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $2,250,543.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unspecified.
3. Intermediary. Third party consultant Servicios IP, S.A., a Guatemalan company created at the direction of Latin Node, that entered into sham agreements to facilitate payments to officials in Honduras and an unnamed third party consultant in Yemen.
4. The foreign official. Officials at Hondutel, the Honduran state-owned telecommunications company; officials at TeleYemen, the Yemeni state-owned telecommunications company; and officials from the Yemeni Ministry of Telecommunications.

Influence to be Obtained. From March 2004 through June 2007, Latin Node paid or caused to be paid approximately $1,099,889 to a third party consultant, Latin Node employees, and Honduran officials, knowing that some or all of these funds would be passed on as bribes to officials of Hondutel, the Honduran state-owned telecommunications company. Latin Node admitted it made these payments in exchange for obtaining an interconnection agreement with Hondutel as well as reducing the rate per minute under the interconnection agreement. From July 2005 to April 2006, Latin Node made payments totaling approximately $1,150,654 either directly to Yemeni officials or to a third party consultant knowing that some or all of the money would be passed on to Yemeni officials in exchange for favorable interconnection rates in Yemen. Payments were made from Latin Node’s Miami bank account and approved by senior executives of Latin Node.

In September 2007, eLandia disclosed that, after it acquired Latin Node, it discovered the improper payments in the course of reviewing Latin Node’s internal controls and procedures. eLandia conducted an internal investigation, terminated the improperly-obtained agreements, and voluntarily disclosed the unlawful conduct to the DOJ and the SEC. eLandia has written off its investment and sued Latin Node’s former CEO and parent company for misrepresentation.

¹⁰⁷ U.S. v. Latin Node, Inc., No. 1:09-cr-20239 (S.D. Fla. 2009).

Enforcement. On March 23, 2009, the DOJ filed charges against Latin Node. On April 3, 2009, Latin Node pleaded guilty to one count of violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA and agreed to pay a $2,000,000 fine. The DOJ cited eLandia's cooperation, internal investigation, and remedial action with approval.

82. United States v. Jeffery Tesler and Wojciech J. Chodan (S.D. Tex. 2009)¹⁰⁸

Nature of the Business. Engineering, procurement, and construction (“EPC”) contracts to build liquefied natural gas (“LNG”) facilities on Bonny Island, Nigeria as part of a four-company joint venture. During most of the time of the conduct, which occurred between 1994 and 2004, one of the joint venture partners, M.W. Kellogg Ltd., was a subsidiary of Halliburton Company and is now a wholly-owned subsidiary of KBR, Inc. Jeffrey Tesler, a U.K. solicitor with a Gibraltar-based company called Tri-Star, acted as an agent for the joint venture. Wojciech J. Chodan, a former employee of M.W. Kellogg who worked on the EPC contracts, is also a U.K. citizen.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $180 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $6 billion.
3. Intermediary. Agent.
4. The foreign official. Officials of Nigeria’s executive branch; employees of Nigerian National Petroleum Company, the government-owned company responsible for developing and regulating Nigeria’s oil and gas industry; and employees of Nigeria LNG Limited, a government-controlled company formed to develop the Bonny Island Project.

Influence to be Obtained. M.W. Kellogg, and later its successor company, Kellogg, Brown & Root Inc., was part of a four-company joint venture seeking to obtain contracts to build LNG facilities on Bonny Island, Nigeria. The joint venture ultimately obtained four contracts worth $6 billion.

From 1988 until June 16, 2004, Chodan was a sales vice president and then a consultant for M.W. Kellogg, which was 55% owned by KBR. Chodan reported to Albert “Jack” Stanley, the former CEO of KBR, and assisted KBR in winning four Bonny Island contracts. Beginning in 1999, Chodan served on the board of managers of a Portugal-based company owned by the joint venture partners (“Madeira Company 3”) that allegedly entered into contracts with consultants for the purpose of bribing Nigerian government officials.

The joint venture allegedly hired Tesler, a U.K. solicitor with a shell company (Tri-Star) located in Gibraltar and bank accounts in Switzerland and Monaco, to bribe Nigerian government officials to obtain contracts from the Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation. The consulting contract between Madeira Company 3 and Tri-Star allegedly indicated that Tri-Star would be paid for marketing and advisory services when in fact the primary purpose was to facilitate bribes. Between 1995 and 2004, the joint venture allegedly paid Tesler over $130 million for use in bribing Nigerian government officials.

¹⁰⁸ U.S. v. Tesler and Chodan, No. 4:09-00098 (S.D. Tex. 2009).

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

Through Madeira Company 3, the joint venture also allegedly hired a consulting company headquartered in Japan to assist it in obtaining business, including by offering and paying bribes to government officials. Between 1996 and 2004, the joint venture allegedly paid the company $50 million.

Enforcement. The DOJ filed an eleven-count indictment under seal against Tesler and Chodan on February 17, 2009. The indictment, which was unsealed on March 5, 2009, alleged one count of conspiring to violate the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA and ten substantive counts of violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA. The indictment also contained forfeiture allegations seeking $132 million from Tesler and Chodan if convicted of one or more of the counts. At the request of U.S. authorities, the British police arrested Tesler on March 5, 2009.

On December 6, 2010, Chodan pleaded guilty to the conspiracy charge. The plea agreement states that Chodan agrees to forfeit $726,885 to the United States and to cooperate fully with the DOJ. On February 22, 2012, Chodan was sentenced to one year of unsupervised probation and was ordered to pay a $20,000 penalty.

On March 11, 2011, Tesler also pleaded guilty to conspiracy to violate the FCPA and a substantive FCPA count following his extradition to the United States from the United Kingdom. Tesler additionally agreed to forfeit $148,964,568.67 – the largest FCPA-related forfeiture by an individual to date. On February 23, 2012, Tesler was sentenced to 21 months in prison followed by two years of supervised release and a $25,000 penalty.

In March 2009, a Nigerian paper reported that Nigerian authorities intended to prosecute Tesler and Chodan in the International Criminal Court; however, it does not appear that any charges were filed.

In September 2008, Stanley pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA, admitting that he participated in a scheme to bribe Nigerian government officials, and was sentenced on February 23, 2012. On February 11, 2009, KBR and Halliburton settled related DOJ and SEC actions.

81. United States v. Ousama M. Naaman (D.D.C. 2008)¹⁰⁹

Nature of the Business. Sale of gasoline additives used in the refining of leaded gasoline and some types of jet fuel. Ousama M. Naaman is a Lebanese/Canadian dual national, with principal business offices in Adu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates. In its SEC filings, Innospec Inc., a Delaware corporation based in the United Kingdom, identified Naaman as having acted as its agent in Iraq. In that role, Naaman negotiated contracts with the Iraqi Ministry of Oil for the provision of gasoline additives to oil refineries operating in Iraq.

Business Location. Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Over $5 million in kickbacks to the Iraqi government.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $40 million in profits.
3. Intermediary. Agent.
4. The foreign officials. Ministry of Oil and unspecified Iraqi government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

From March 2001 to February 2008, Naaman promised or paid kickback payments of over $8.5 million to Iraqi government officials in exchange for contracts with the Ministry of Oil to purchase a chemical additive from Innospec, a U.S. company. Between 2001 and 2003, Naaman negotiated five agreements under the OFFP, including a 10% increase in the price to cover the kickback, and routed a total of approximately $5,000,000 to Iraqi government accounts in the Middle East. In 2004 and 2008, Naaman also entered two long-term agreements with the Ministry of Oil under which bribes of $3,279,600 were promised and $167,000 was paid to officials. Naaman also paid an official in the Trade Bank of Iraq in exchange for a favorable exchange rate on letters of credit for purchases under the 2004 agreement. Naaman created false invoices for reimbursement of the illicit payments, causing Innospec to conceal the payments and falsify its consolidated books and records. During this time, Naaman also arranged or paid approximately $91,061 in travel, gifts, and entertainment expenses for Iraqi senior officials. Naaman told Innospec executives that he agreed to pay $150,000 in bribes to Ministry of Oil officials to ensure Innospec’s competitors’ product would fail field trial tests, but this money was retained by Naaman and never paid to Iraqi officials.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

Enforcement. Naaman was originally indicted on August 7, 2008. On July 30, 2009, Naaman was arrested in Frankfurt, Germany and extradited to the United States. On June 25, 2010, as part of a plea agreement with the DOJ, Naaman pleaded guilty to two-count superseding information filed June 24, 2001, charging him with one count of conspiracy to violate the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA, commit wire fraud, and falsify books and records of a U.S. issuer; and one count of violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA. The government expressly reserved all of its rights in connection with sentencing. On December 22, 2011, Naaman was sentenced to 30 months in prison and fined $250,000.

80. United States v. Kellogg Brown & Root LLC (S.D. Tex. 2009)¹¹⁰

Nature of the Business. Engineering, procurement, and construction (“EPC”) contracts for natural gas liquefaction facilities at Bonny Island in Nigeria (“Bonny Island Project”). During most of the time of the conduct, which occurred between 1994 and 2004, Kellogg Brown & Root LLC, a U.S. corporation, was a subsidiary of Halliburton Company (“Halliburton”). Kellogg Brown & Root LLC is now a wholly-owned subsidiary of KBR, Inc. (“KBR”). Halliburton and KBR are incorporated in Delaware and headquartered in Houston, Texas. The government’s charges identified the three foreign partners in the joint venture as “unindicted co-conspirators.”

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $180 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Over $6 billion.
3. Intermediary. Agents.
4. The foreign official. Officials in the executive branch of the Nigerian government; employees of Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation; and employees of Nigeria LNG Limited, controlled by the Nigerian government.

Influence to be Obtained. Kellogg Brown & Root LLC participated in a joint venture to obtain and perform EPC contracts to build and expand the Bonny Island Project for Nigeria LNG Limited, which is owned in part by the Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation. The joint venture was awarded four EPC contracts for the Bonny Island Project between 1995 and 2004. From August 1994 until June 2004, Kellogg Brown and Root LLC and its partners in the joint venture authorized, promised, and paid bribes to Nigerian government officials, including officials in the executive branch, employees of the government-owned Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation, and employees of government-controlled Nigeria LNG Limited, to win and retain the EPC contracts to build the Bonny Island Project. To conceal the bribes, the joint venture entered into sham consulting or services agreements with intermediaries. The joint venture hired one consultant to pay bribes to high-level Nigerian government officials. That consultant received over $130 million for use in bribing the officials. Another consultant, hired to bribe lower level Nigerian officials, received over $50 million to use for that purpose.

Enforcement. On February 11, 2009, Kellogg Brown & Root LLC pleaded guilty to one count of conspiring to violate the FCPA and four counts of violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA. Kellogg Brown & Root LLC and KBR, who is also a party to the February 11, 2009 plea agreement, agreed to pay a $402 million fine. Pursuant to the master separation agreement between Halliburton and KBR, Halliburton agreed to indemnify KBR for certain FCPA-related matters, and Halliburton will pay

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

$382 million of the fine. As part of the plea agreement, Kellogg Brown & Root LLC will retain an independent corporate monitor for a term of three years.

Halliburton and KBR also settled a related SEC action on February 11, 2009. Without admitting or denying the allegations in the complaint, Halliburton and KBR consented to the entry of final judgments permanently enjoining future violations, ordering disgorgement of $177 million, requiring Halliburton to retain an independent consultant to evaluate its FCPA-related policies and procedures and adopt any recommendations, and requiring KBR to obtain an independent corporate monitor for a term of three years.

In the criminal information against KBR, the DOJ alleged that the other members of the joint ventures, French, Italian, and Japanese companies, were “unindicted co-conspirators.” On June 28, 2010, the DOJ and SEC announced that it had settled its charges against Technip, one of the joint venture partners. The DOJ and SEC reported the company agreed to pay $98 million in disgorgement and prejudgment interest along with a payment of $240 million as a criminal penalty. Snamprogetti Netherlands B.V. and ENI S.p.A, other members of the joint venture, similarly settled pending DOJ and SEC charges with an agreement to disgorge $125 million.

Previously, in September 2008, Albert “Jack” Stanley, former CEO and chairman of Kellogg Brown & Root LLC, pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA, admitting that he participated in a scheme to bribe Nigerian government officials. Two of Stanley’s alleged co-conspirators, Wojciech Chodan and Jeffrey Tesler, were indicted on February 17, 2009. Chodan pleaded guilty to conspiracy on December 6, 2010. Tesler subsequently pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy and one count of violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA on March 11, 2011. Stanley, Chodan, and Tesler were sentenced in February 2012.

French, Nigerian, Swiss, and British authorities are continuing to investigate this matter. In an SEC filing on February 17, 2010, Halliburton reported it was seeking plea negotiations with the United Kingdom’s Serious Fraud Office. On February 16, 2011, KBR announced that its wholly-owned subsidiary, M.W. Kellogg Limited (“MWKL”), reached a civil settlement with the Serious Fraud Office, according to which MWKL paid approximately $11, 238,886 and agreed to improve its internal audit and compliance systems.

According to a February 17, 2011 SEC filing, Halliburton and KBR reached a settlement to resolve charges filed against the two corporations in Nigeria in December 2010. As a result, Halliburton agreed to pay $33 million to the Government of Nigeria and an additional $2 million for the Government of Nigeria’s attorneys’ fees.

Although it was not clear whether there is a separate Italian investigation of the Italian joint venture partner, the DOJ acknowledged the assistance of the Italian authorities.

79. United States v. Richard Morlok (E.D. Cal. 2009)¹¹¹

Nature of the Business. Richard Morlok, a U.S. citizen, was Finance Director for Control Components, Inc. (“CCI”), a California-based company that designs and manufactures severe service control valves used in the nuclear, oil and gas, and power generation industries.

Business Location. China, Korea, Romania, and Saudi Arabia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $628,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. At least $3.5 million.
3. Intermediary. Agents.
4. The foreign official. Officers and employees of state-owned enterprises including, but not limited to, China National Offshore Oil Company, Petrochina, Jiangsu Nuclear Power Corporation (China), Korea Hydro and Nuclear Power, Rovinari Power (Romania), and Safco (Saudi Arabia).

Influence to be Obtained. From 2003 to 2006, Morlok caused employees and agents of CCI to make payments totaling approximately $628,000 to officials employed by state-owned companies, in exchange for their assistance in obtaining sales contracts. These payments resulted in profits of approximately $3.5 million.

For example, in April 2004, Morlok approved a corrupt payment of $57,658 to an official of Korea Hydro and Nuclear Power (“KHNP”). Morlok caused CCI to wire the payment from its California bank account to an account with a Korean bank. In April and August 2004, Morlok provided false and misleading statements to auditors, engaged by CCI’s parent company, IMI plc, when he denied knowledge of and participation in improper payments.

Enforcement. On February 3, 2009, Morlok pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA’s anti-bribery provisions. Under the terms of his plea agreement, Morlok agreed to cooperate with the government in its continuing investigation and prosecution of six other former CCI employees, among which five have pleaded guilty and one is considered a fugitive.

On March 11, 2013, Morlok was sentenced to three years of probation, including three months in a home detention program. He was also ordered to pay a fine of $5,000.

Nature of the Business. Sale of power and electrical equipment and gas turbines to the Iraqi Ministries of Electricity and Oil under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program (Siemens Aktiengesellschaft, “Siemens AG”); development of a new national identity card (Siemens Argentina); creation of a nationwide digital cellular telephone network (Siemens Bangladesh); design and construction of mass transit systems (Siemens Venezuela).

Business Location. Argentina, Bangladesh, Germany, Iraq, and Venezuela.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Over $800 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. More than $1.4 billion.
3. Intermediary. Business consultants, agents, and other payment intermediaries.
4. The foreign official. 1) unspecified Argentine government officials; 2) the Minister and other officials of the Bangladesh Ministry of Posts and Telecommunications; 3) the Director of Procurement and other officials of the state-owned Bangladesh Telegraph & Telephone Board; and 4) unspecified Venezuelan government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. Siemens AG and several of its subsidiaries paid more than $1.7 million in kickbacks to the Iraqi government to procure 42 contracts worth more than $80 million under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program. Additionally, Siemens AG engaged in systematic efforts to falsify books and records and circumvent internal controls to permit this and other corrupt payments to occur. For example, Siemens AG used off-book accounts to make corrupt payments, entered into purported business consulting agreements with no basis, hired former Siemens employees as purported business consultants to make corrupt payments, used false invoices to justify payments to business consultants, mischaracterized corrupt payments as legitimate expenses, and limited the quality and scope of audits of payments to business consultants. Additionally, Siemens AG lacked sufficient anti-corruption compliance controls and its senior management failed to take action even after they were informed of significant control weaknesses.

Siemens Argentina paid approximately $105 million, directly or indirectly through a sham consultant and other intermediaries, to officials in the Argentine government in connection with the company’s bid for a project worth more than $1 billion involving the development of a national identification card in Argentina. Between 1997 and 2007, Siemens Argentina made or directed payments of more than $15 million to entities controlled by members of the government of Argentina. During this period, Siemens Argentina also made nearly $35 million in payments to a consultant that acted as a conduit for further payments to Argentine government officials responsible for the identity card project and paid almost $55 million to other third-parties in connection with the project.

Siemens Bangladesh made more than $5.3 million in corrupt payments between 2001 and 2006 to Bangladeshi government officials and senior employees of the state-owned Bangladesh Telegraph & Telephone Board (“BTTB”). Siemens Bangladesh made payments through business consultants that it retained pursuant to “sham agreements” that purportedly involved rendering services in connection with a mobile telephone contract worth approximately $40.9 million. In reality, Siemens Bangladesh used the business consultants to channel bribes to the son of the former Prime Minister of Bangladesh, the Minister of Posts & Telecommunications (“MoPT”), and the Director of Procurement at BTTB. Siemens Bangladesh also made direct payments to Bangladeshi government officials (or their relatives) with responsibility for awarding the BTTB project. Additionally, Siemens Bangladesh hired relatives of two other BTTB and MoPT officials, although Siemens Bangladesh did not need the relatives’ services for its business.

Siemens Venezuela paid almost $19 million in bribes to Venezuelan government officials in connection with mass transit systems in the Venezuelan cities of Valencia and Maracaibo. As with the FCPA violations by other Siemens entities, Siemens Venezuela admitted that it paid money to sham agents and business consultants, who had no substantive role on the projects, with the understanding that they would pass on some or all of the funds to relevant government officials. Siemens Venezuela’s underlying FCPA violations involved falsification of the company’s books, records, and accounts, as payments were labeled as involving nonexistent studies, sham supply contracts, and off-the-books or improperly recorded bank accounts, all of which Siemens Venezuela used to conceal corrupt payments to Venezuelan government officials.

Enforcement. On December 15, 2008, Siemens AG pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA’s internal controls and books and records provisions. Siemens Argentina pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA’s books and records provisions, and Siemens Bangladesh and Siemens Venezuela each pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA’s anti-bribery and books and records provisions. This is the first time that the DOJ has charged a company with a criminal violation of the FCPA’s internal controls or books and records provisions. Siemens AG and its subsidiaries agreed to pay criminal fines totaling $450 million.

In connection with a parallel enforcement action by the SEC, Siemens AG also agreed to disgorge more than $350 million in ill-gotten profits. On the same day, Siemens also entered into a settlement with German authorities, agreeing to pay penalties of €395 million in addition to the €201 million in penalties that it previously paid in an earlier settlement. Siemens AG also agreed to the imposition of an independent monitor for a period of up to four years. Theo Wiegler, a former German finance minister, will serve as the Monitor, and will be assisted by a U.S. law firm, marking the first time that a non-U.S. Monitor has been appointed in an FCPA case.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

In addition, the DOJ brought a forfeiture action against more than $3 million contained in several bank accounts held by or for the benefit of the son of the former Prime Minister of Bangladesh and two of the intermediaries involved in the bribery scheme involving Siemens Bangladesh. On April 7, 2010, the district court granted an unopposed motion for default judgment as to approximately $3 million, no party having challenged the forfeiture claim.

In July 2009, Siemens reached a settlement with the World Bank over bribery allegations. The Bank's investigation focused specifically on an urban-transport project the bank financed in Moscow, Russia. Siemens agreed to pay $100 million over 15 years to help anticorruption efforts and also agreed to forgo bidding on any of the Bank's projects for two years. The settlement means that Siemens and its subsidiaries will not face additional sanctions from the World Bank.

Separately, on August 12, 2009, Siemens AG stated that it would drop a case against Argentina's government in the World Bank's International Center for Settlement of Investment Disputes, which had demanded $200 million related to the cancellation of a contract to make identity cards. Proceedings were discontinued in September 2009. Siemens had been accused of paying bribes to win the contract. Siemens stated that it would continue to cooperate with investigations by Argentine authorities.

On December 6, 2009, Siemens AG reached a settlement with nine of the eleven former Supervisory Board members. On January 25, 2010, Siemens AG filed a lawsuit with the Munich District Court I against the two former board members who were not willing to settle.

77. United States v. Misao Hioki (S.D. Tex. 2008)¹¹⁶

Nature of the Business. Sale of industrial rubber products, including marine hose used to transfer oil between tankers and storage facilities. According to court documents, Hioki, a Japanese citizen, was the General Manager for the International Engineered Products (“IEP”) Department of a Japanese company. Press reports identify that company as Bridgestone Corporation.

Business Location. Argentina, Brazil, Ecuador, Mexico, and Venezuela.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. More than $1 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unspecified.
3. Intermediary. Agents.
4. The foreign official. Employees of state-owned businesses.

Influence to be Obtained. From approximately January 2004 until May 2007, Hioki served as the General Manager of Bridgestone Corporation’s IEP Department, which coordinated efforts between the corporation’s headquarters in Japan and its regional subsidiaries to sell IEP products throughout the world. To secure sales in Latin America, local sales agents, who developed relationships with employees in state-owned companies, forwarded information related to potential projects to their counterparts in the company’s regional subsidiaries, including the company’s U.S. subsidiary. The regional subsidiaries then forwarded the information provided by the local agents to the IEP employee in Japan responsible for the particular product. The local agents often agreed to pay officials within the state-owned customer a percentage of the total value of the proposed deal. If the regional subsidiary secured the project, it paid the local sales agent a commission, which included both the agent’s actual commission and the corrupt payments to be paid to the employees of the state-owned customer. The local sales agent then made the agreed-upon payments to the customer’s employees. The regional subsidiaries and the supervisors in Japan authorized, and took steps to conceal, these payments. Hioki personally authorized certain corrupt payments and also approved transactions which he knew included corrupt payments.

Enforcement. The DOJ filed a criminal information on December 8, 2008. On December 10, 2008, Hioki pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA’s anti-bribery provisions and conspiring to rig bids, fix prices, and allocate market shares of marine hose in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act. Hioki is the first individual to plead guilty in the FCPA conspiracy and the ninth individual to plead guilty in the marine hose antitrust conspiracy. Hioki was sentenced to 24 months in prison and ordered to pay a fine of $80,000.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

In a related action by the DOJ, Bridgestone pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to violate the Sherman Act and one count of conspiracy to violate the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA and agreed to pay a criminal fine of $28 million.

76. United States v. James K. Tillery and Paul G. Novak (S.D. Tex. 2008)¹¹⁷

Nature of the Business. Procurement of contracts for oil and gas pipeline construction projects by Willbros International Inc. (“Willbros International”), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Houston-based Willbros Group, Inc. (“Willbros Group”).

Business Location. Nigeria and Ecuador.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $4.2 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $390 million.
3. Intermediary. Consultants and employees.
4. The foreign official. Officials of Nigerian Petroleum Corporation and National Petroleum Investment Management Services; a senior Executive-branch Nigerian government official; officials of the dominant political party in Nigeria; PetroEcuador and PetroComercial officials.

Influence to be Obtained. James K. Tillery, a former U.S. citizen, was an officer and employee of Willbros International and another Willbros Group subsidiary. Paul G. Novak, a U.S. citizen, represented two consulting companies that allegedly acted as conduits for corrupt payments authorized by Willbros International employees to foreign officials in Nigeria. Tillery and others allegedly authorized Novak to enter into corrupt negotiations with, and make payments to, Nigerian officials who had influence over awarding government construction contracts to obtain and retain favorable treatment in oil and gas pipeline construction contract decisions for Willbros International and Willbros Group. By late 2004, more than $1 million in corrupt payments allegedly had been paid to Nigerian officials, with millions more to be paid under commitments made to Nigerian officials. From January to March 2005, Tillery and Novak’s co-conspirators raised approximately $1.85 million dollars to fulfill a portion of the remaining commitments. The money was then provided to consultants for delivery to Nigerian officials. Tillery and Novak’s co-conspirators included Jim Bob Brown and Jason Edward Steph, former Willbros International employees who separately have pleaded guilty to FCPA violations, a Nigerian national who performed purported consulting services for one or more of Willbros’s Nigerian subsidiaries, and Nigeria-based employees of a major German construction and engineering firm. Additionally, Tillery and Novak, along with several other individuals, allegedly agreed to make corrupt payments of at least $300,000 to Ecuadorian officials to obtain a contract for the rehabilitation of a gas pipeline for Willbros International. Novak, at the direction of Tillery, allegedly made a $150,000 corrupt payment by wire transfer to an Ecuadorian bank account.

Enforcement. On January 17, 2008, a grand jury indicted Tillery and Novak on one count of conspiracy to violate the FCPA and two substantive counts of violating the FCPA. The indictment also charged one count of conspiracy to commit money laundering. The indictment remained under seal until ¹¹⁷ U.S. v. Tillery and Novak, No. 4:08-cr-00022-1, (S.D. Tex. 2008).

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

December 19, 2008, when U.S. authorities arrested Novak at a Houston airport. He was returning to the U.S. from South Africa after his U.S. passport was revoked. On January 27, 2009, the court granted the return of Novak's passport. On November 12, 2009, Novak pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to violate the FCPA and one substantive count of violating the FCPA.

On May 3, 2013, Novak was sentenced to 15 months in prison by U.S. District Judge Simeon T. Lake III of the Southern District of Texas. In addition to the prison sentence, Novak was ordered to pay a $1 million fine and to serve two years of supervised release following his release from prison. A Nigerian court halted American authorities' attempts to extradite Tillery, an American who acquired Nigerian citizenship in 2009. Tillery remains a fugitive.

75. *United States v. Aibel Group Ltd. (S.D. Tex. 2008)*¹¹⁸

Nature of the Business. Provision of engineering and procurement services and subsea construction equipment for Nigeria's first deepwater oil drilling operation.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $2.1 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $10.5 million.
3. Intermediary. Major international freight forwarding and customs clearance company.
4. The foreign official. Nigerian customs officials.

Influence to be Obtained. From at least September 2002 to around April 2005, Aibel Group Ltd. ("Aibel") and its co-conspirators made payments on at least 61 occasions to Nigerian Customs Service officials through an agent to secure preferential treatment during the customs process.

Enforcement. On November 21, 2008, Aibel pleaded guilty to both counts of a superseding information charging one count of conspiracy to authorize corrupt payments to Nigerian customs officials and one count of violating the FCPA by authorizing the payment of an invoice, via a phone call from Norway to Houston, for the agent's earlier payment of approximately $45,454 to Nigerian customs officials.

In 2007, Vetco Gray Controls Inc., Vetco Gray Controls Ltd., and Vetco Gray U.K. Ltd., then fellow subsidiaries of Vetco International, pleaded guilty to violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA. At the same time, Aibel Group Ltd. entered into a deferred prosecution agreement relating to the same underlying conduct charged here, but based upon a statement of facts that included a single corrupt payment and did not allege a conspiracy.

On November 21, 2008, Aibel admitted that it was not in compliance with the 2007 deferred prosecution agreement and agreed to pay a $4.2 million fine. The government consented to the dismissal of the deferred prosecution agreement.

Nature of the Business. Sales of trucks and parts, agricultural and construction equipment, construction vehicles and spare parts, and other equipment to Iraq under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program.

Business Location. Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $4.4 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. €46.1 million.
3. Intermediary. A Lebanese company acting as an agent and distributor, a United Arab Emirates company acting as a conduit for payments, a Jordanian company acting as an agent and distributor, and a Lebanese company acting as a distributor.
4. The foreign official. None.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government solicited illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by approximately 10% of the contract value, though in this case sometimes as high as 15%.

Iveco S.p.A. (“Iveco”), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Fiat S.p.A. (“Fiat”), is an international manufacturer and supplier of commercial trucks, parts, and diesel engines. Between October 2000 and June 2001, Iveco, through an unnamed Lebanese company acting as an agent and distributor and an unnamed United Arab Emirates company acting as a conduit for payments to the Iraqi government, paid approximately $3.17 million in kickbacks to the Government of Iraq for sixteen contracts worth approximately €31.9 million to supply Iveco trucks and parts to the Republic of Iraq.

CNH Italia S.p.A. (“CNH Italia”), a wholly-owned subsidiary of CNH Global N.V. (“CNH Global”) and 90% owned by Fiat, is an international manufacturer of agricultural and construction equipment. From December 2000 through June 2002, CNH Italia, directly and through an unnamed Jordanian company acting as an agent and distributor paid approximately $1 million in kickbacks to the Government of Iraq to obtain four contracts worth approximately €12 million to supply agricultural equipment to the Ministry of Agriculture of the Republic of Iraq.

CNH France S.A. (“CNH France”) is a wholly-owned subsidiary of CNH Global and Fiat. From June 2001 through July 2001, CNH France, through an unnamed Lebanese company acting as a distributor paid approximately $188,000 in kickbacks to the Government of Iraq to obtain three contracts worth approximately €2.2 million with the Ministry of Oil to supply construction vehicles and spare parts.

Iveco and CNH Italia improperly characterized these kickback payments as service and commission fees. Their books and records, including those containing false characterizations, were incorporated into the books and records of Fiat.

The government did not allege bribery of any individual foreign governmental officials.

Enforcement. On December 22, 2008, Fiat, on behalf of itself and Iveco, CNH Italia, and CNH France, entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ. Pursuant to the agreement, the DOJ filed two one-count criminal informations against Iveco and CNH Italia, respectively alleging conspiracy to commit wire fraud and to violate the FCPA’s books and records provisions. The DOJ also filed a one-count criminal information against CNH France alleging conspiracy to commit wire fraud.

Under the agreement, Fiat also agreed to pay a $7 million penalty. On December 22, 2008, Fiat and CNH Global also entered into a consent agreement with the SEC for failure to maintain internal controls and for books and records violations. The agreement called for disgorgement of $5,309,632 in profits, prejudgment interest of $1,899,510, and a civil penalty of $3,600,000.

73. United States v. Mario Covino (E.D. Cal. 2008)¹²³

Nature of the Business. Mario Covino, an Italian national and U.S. resident was the Director of Worldwide Factory Sales for Control Components, Inc. (“CCI”), a California-based company that designs and manufactures severe service control valves used in the nuclear, oil, gas, and power generation industries.

Business Location. Brazil, China, India, Korea, Malaysia, and the United Arab Emirates.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $1 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. At least $5 million.
3. Intermediary. Agents.
4. The foreign official. Officers and employees of state-owned enterprises including, but not limited to, Petrobras (Brazil), Dingzhou Power (China), Datang Power (China), China Petroleum, China Resources Power, China National Offshore Oil Company, PetroChina, Maharashtra State Electricity Board (India), Korea Hydro and Nuclear Power (“KHNP”), Petronas (Malaysia), Dolphin Energy (UAE), and Abu Dhabi Company for Oil Operations (UAE).

Influence to be Obtained. From 2003 to 2007, Covino caused CCI employees and agents to make payments totaling approximately $1 million to officials employed by state-owned companies, for their assistance in obtaining sales contracts thereby earning profits of approximately $5 million.

For example, in March 2004, Covino approved a payment of $15,000 to an official of PetroChina, for assistance in awarding CCI PetroChina’s business. Covino caused CCI to wire the payment to the Bank of China. The following August, Covino provided false and misleading statements to auditors when he denied knowledge of improper payments. He obstructed the audit, initiated by CCI’s parent company, IMI plc, by deleting emails referencing the payments and instructing other employees to do the same.

Enforcement. On December 17, 2008, Covino entered an agreement with the DOJ under which he pleaded guilty on January 8, 2009 to conspiring to violate the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA. Under the terms of his plea agreement, Covino agreed to cooperate with the government in its continuing investigation and prosecution of six other former CCI employees, among which five have pleaded guilty and the remaining defendant is considered a fugitive.

On March 11, 2013, Covino was sentenced to three years of probation, including three months in a home detention program. He was also ordered to pay a fine of $7,500.

72. United States v. Shu Quan-Sheng (E.D. Va. 2008)¹²⁴

Nature of the Business. Contract for a hydrogen liquefier project on behalf of a French company. Shu Quan-Sheng (“Shu”), a U.S. citizen, was President, Secretary, and Treasurer of AMAC International (“AMAC”), a high-tech company located in Virginia with an office in China.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $189,300.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $4 million.
3. Intermediary. Agent.
4. The foreign official. Chinese government officials with the 101st Research Institute, a research institute of the China Academy of Launch Vehicle Technology.

Influence to be Obtained. In 2006, Shu offered bribes amounting to approximately $189,300 to Chinese government officials with the 101st Research Institute to induce the award of a hydrogen liquefier project to a French company that retained Shu as its representative in 2003. The representative agreement with the French company entitled Shu to a 10-15% success fee. From 2003 – 2007, Shu also improperly provided technical assistance and exported technical data to Chinese government entities involved in the design and manufacture of a space launch facility in China, in violation of the Arms Export Control Act.

Enforcement. The government filed a complaint against Shu on September 19, 2008, alleging one count of violating the FCPA and two counts of violating the Arms Control Export Act. Shu was arrested on September 24, 2008, and a detention hearing held on September 29, 2008 set his bond at $100,000. On November 12, 2008, Shu pleaded guilty to all three counts alleged in the government’s complaint. On December 18, 2008, the court ordered Shu to forfeit $386,740, the commission payments he received as the representative of the French company. On April 7, 2009, the court sentenced Shu to 51 months in prison, to be followed by a two year supervised release.

71. United States v. Nexus Technologies, Inc., Nam Quoc Nguyen, Joseph T. Lukas, Kim Anh Nguyen and An Quoc Nguyen (E.D. Pa. 2008)¹²⁵

Nature of the Business. Sale of third-party underwater mapping and bomb containment equipment, helicopter parts, chemical detectors, satellite communication parts, and air tracking systems to Vietnamese government agencies.

Business Location. Vietnam.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. At least $150,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. At least $500,000.
3. Intermediary. An unnamed company located in Hong Kong.
4. The foreign official. Officials from multiple Vietnamese government agencies, including Vietnam's Ministries of Transport, Industry, and Public Safety.

Influence to be Obtained. From 1999 through 2008, the defendants allegedly paid at least $150,000 to various Vietnamese government officials to secure supply contracts. These officials, typically described as "supporters," allegedly assisted Nexus Technologies Inc. ("Nexus"), a privately-held Delaware company, by providing confidential information and rigging bids in exchange for the bribes. According to the indictment, individual defendant Nam Nguyen negotiated contracts and bribes with Vietnamese government officials, while Lukas negotiated with vendors in the United States. Defendants Kim and An Nguyen allegedly arranged for the transfer of funds at Nam Nguyen's direction.

Enforcement. On September 4, 2008, Nexus and the individual defendants were indicted by a federal grand jury in Philadelphia on one count of conspiracy to violate the FCPA and four substantive counts of violating the FCPA. On October 8, 2008, Nam Quoc Nguyen, the founder and president of Nexus, pleaded not guilty on behalf of all of Nexus. On November 20, 2008, the Court issued an Order for a Complex Criminal Case Designation, waiving the time limitations required under the Speedy Trial Act due to the complexity of the case and the quantity of evidence, particularly electronic evidence such as U.S.B. drives and CPU towers, to be reviewed.

On June 29, 2009, one of the defendants, Joseph Lukas, pleaded guilty in connection with his participation in the conspiracy to bribe Vietnamese government officials. Lukas admitted that from 1999 to 2005, he and other employees of Nexus agreed to pay, and knowingly paid, bribes to Vietnamese government officials in exchange for contracts with the agencies for which the officials worked. The bribes were falsely described as "commissions" in the company's records.

On October 29, 2009, the government entered a superseding indictment against the remaining individual defendants and Nexus, adding charges of conspiracy to violate the Travel Act and to launder money, nine substantive counts of violating the Travel Act, nine substantive counts of money laundering, and five additional counts of violating the FCPA.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

On March 16, 2010, Nexus pleaded guilty to all charges filed against the company in the superseding indictment. In connection with the guilty plea, Nexus admitted that from 1999 to 2008, it agreed to pay, and knowingly paid, bribes in excess of $250,000 to Vietnamese government officials in exchange for contracts with the agencies and companies for which the bribe recipients worked. The bribes were falsely described as “commissions” in the company’s records. In pleading guilty, Nexus also acknowledged that, as a company, it operated primarily through criminal means and agreed to cease operations as a condition of the guilty plea.

On September 15, 2010, the Court issued an order approving the government’s motion for a downward departure at sentencing for Lukas for the assistance he provided to the government in their investigation of Nexus. The court cited Lukas’s cooperation as significant, finding that he gave the government valuable insight into the workings of Nexus, explained various documents and emails and provided the government with critical details regarding the bribery logistics and amounts, assisting with the evidentiary basis for the superseding indictment. On September 16, 2010, Lukas was sentenced to probation for a term of two years, ordered to pay a fine of $1000 and special assessment of $200.00, and perform 200 hours of community service.

On September 16, 2010, Nexus was sentenced to probation for a term of one year, ordered to cease all operations permanently, turn over all net assets to the Clerk of Court as a fine, and pay a special assessment of $11,200. On the same day, Nam Quoc Nguyen, founder of Nexus, was sentenced to sixteen months imprisonment for each count to be served concurrently with the other counts and two years of supervised release. Co-defendant, An Quoc Nguyen, was sentenced to nine months imprisonment and three years of supervised release for a term of three years. In consideration of her cooperation, the court found that co-defendant Kim Anh Nguyen was entitled to a downward departure and sentenced her to two years’ probation, a $20,000 fine, a special assessment of $300, and 200 hours of community service.

70. United States v. Albert Jackson Stanley (S.D. Tex. 2008)¹²⁶

Nature of the Business. Engineering, procurement, and construction (“EPC”) contracts to build liquefied natural gas (“LNG”) facilities on Bonny Island, Nigeria. Albert “Jack” Stanley (“Stanley”) is a U.S. citizen and a former officer and director of Kellogg, Brown & Root, Inc. (“KBR”), a global engineering and construction company based in Houston, Texas, that was during part of the relevant period a subsidiary of Halliburton.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $182 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $6 billion.
3. Intermediary. Two agents.
4. The foreign official. Officials of the Nigerian Government.

Influence to be Obtained. KBR participated in a joint-venture seeking EPC contracts to build LNG facilities on Bonny Island, Nigeria. Four EPC contracts were awarded to the joint venture by Nigeria LNG Ltd., the largest shareholder of the Nigerian government-owned Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation. Stanley was responsible for hiring two agents to pay bribes to Nigerian government officials. From 1995 to 2004, the joint venture paid the two agents a total of $182 million, to be used in part to bribe government officials. Stanley also received $10.8 million dollars in kickbacks from a consultant whom his former employer had hired at his direction.

Enforcement. On September 3, 2008, Stanley pleaded guilty to one count of conspiring to violate the FCPA as well as one count of conspiring to commit mail and wire fraud. On February 23, 2012, Stanley was sentenced to 30 months in prison followed by three years of supervised release. The sentencing also included a payment of $10.8 million in restitution set by the terms of Stanley’s plea agreement.

On February 11, 2009, KBR and Halliburton settled related actions with the DOJ and SEC. Two alleged co-conspirators, Wojciech Chodan and Jeffrey Tesler, were indicted on February 17, 2009. Chodan subsequently pleaded guilty to conspiracy on December 6, 2010. Tesler, having been extradited to the United States by the United Kingdom, pleaded guilty to conspiracy as well as one count of violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA on March 11, 2011. Both individuals were sentenced in 2012.

69. United States v. Faro Technologies Inc. (2008)¹²⁷

Nature of the Business. Procurement of contracts for the sale of portable computerized measurement devices and software for the manufacturing sector.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $533,163 paid or authorized.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $4.9 million.
3. Intermediary. Agent.
4. The foreign official. Employees of China state-owned or controlled entities.

Influence to be Obtained. Faro Technologies Inc. (“Faro”), a U.S. corporation, began direct sales in China in 2003 through a subsidiary, Faro Shanghai Co., Ltd. (“Faro China”). In 2004 and 2005, the head of Faro China’s office made corrupt payments totaling $444,492, authorized by Faro’s then regional sales manager for the Asia-Pacific region, directly to employees of Chinese state-owned or controlled entities on several occasions. An additional $88,671 was promised but not paid. The payments were made to secure contracts for Faro worth approximately $4,944,234.

In 2005, the then regional sales manager and the Faro China employee decided to route the corrupt payments through an intermediary to “avoid exposure,” according to internal e-mails. In January 2005 Faro China entered into a false services contract with an intermediary. The intermediary would pay the bribes and send regular invoices to Faro China for payment.

Faro falsely recorded at least $238,000 in improper payments in its books and records, describing the bribe payments as “referral fees.” Between approximately May 2003 and February 2006, Faro also failed to devise and maintain a system of internal controls to ensure compliance with the FCPA.

Enforcement. On June 4, 2008, Faro entered into a two-year non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ and agreed to pay a $1,100,000 criminal penalty and to retain an independent compliance monitor for a period of two years.

68. United States v. AGA Medical Corp. (D. Minn. 2008)¹²⁸

Nature of the Business. Sale of medical devices.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. At least $480,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $13.5 million.
3. Intermediary. Chinese distributor.
4. The foreign official. Physicians employed at state-owned hospitals; officials of China's State Intellectual Property Office.

Influence to be Obtained. AGA Medical Corporation ("AGA"), a U.S.-based corporation, manufactured and sold medical devices for the minimally invasive treatment of congenital heart defects. AGA marketed and sold its products in over 90 countries through a network of local distributors and direct sales. Between 1997 and 2005, AGA, a high-ranking officer of AGA, and other AGA employees agreed to make corrupt kickback payments to physicians employed at state-owned hospitals. The payments were made through AGA's Chinese distributor. In exchange for these payments, the physicians directed the hospitals to purchase AGA's products. In addition, between 2000 to 2002, AGA and a high-ranking officer of AGA agreed to make payments through the same distributor to officials of the State Intellectual Property Office to have patents for AGA products approved.

Enforcement. On June 2, 2008, AGA entered into a three-year deferred-prosecution agreement, admitting to the alleged conduct and agreeing to pay a $2 million penalty and to retain an independent compliance monitor for a period of three years.

67. United States v. Willbros Group, Inc., and Willbros Int'l, Inc. (S.D. Tex. 2008)¹²⁹

Nature of the Business. Procurement of contracts for oil and gas construction projects by Willbros International Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Willbros Group, Inc., both Panama corporations.

Business Location. Nigeria, Ecuador, Bolivia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $10.8 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $390 million.
3. Intermediary. Outside consultants; direct.
4. The foreign official. 1) Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation (“NNPC”) officials; 2) officials of NNPC’s wholly-owned subsidiary National Petroleum Investment Management Services (“NAPIMS”); 3) officials of NNPC’s majority-owned joint venture operator, Shell Petroleum Development Company of Nigeria (“SPDC”); 4) a senior official in the Nigerian federal government; 5) officials in the dominant political party in Nigeria; and 6) officials of PetroEcuador and PetroComercial in Ecuador.

Influence to be Obtained. The DOJ alleged that Willbros Group and Willbros International used contractual payments, fraudulent loans, and petty cash obtained by fraudulent invoices to funnel money to two “consultants” for the purposes of bribing foreign officials from Nigeria to pursue contracts associated with the Eastern Gas Gathering Systems (“EGGS”), a project building a natural gas pipeline system in the Niger Delta designed to relieve existing pipeline capacity constraints and contracts to repair offshore oil platforms along the Nigerian coast. In addition, from December 2003 through the first half of 2004, Willbros International pursued contracts to refurbish a pipeline in Ecuador with PetroComercial, a subsidiary of state-owned PetroEcuador. In addition, the DOJ alleged that Willbros International and Willbros Group violated the books and records provision by recording all of the above payments as contract costs. In addition, a subsidiary of Willbros International devised a scheme to buy false invoices through a consultant to fraudulently claim VAT tax credits to reduce tax liability in violation of books and records requirements.

Enforcement. On May 14, 2008, Willbros Group and Willbros International entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement, pursuant to which they agreed, jointly and severally, to a fine of $22 million payable in four installments. In addition, Willbros Group and Willbros International agreed to engage an independent corporate monitor for a period of three years.

66. United States v. Martin Eric Self (C.D. Cal. 2008)¹³⁰

Nature of the Business. Contracts with United Kingdom Ministry of Defense (“U.K.-MOD”) for military spare parts. Martin Self, a U.S. citizen, was the President of Pacific Consolidated Industries (“PCI”), a manufacturer of Air Separation Units (“ASU”) and other equipment for defense departments around the world. PCI is headquartered in Santa Ana, California.

Business Location. United Kingdom.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $70,350.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not specified.
3. Intermediary. Relative of government official.
4. The foreign official. United Kingdom Ministry of Defense official.

Influence to be Obtained. In October 1999, Self and Leo Winston Smith, the Executive Vice President of Sales and Marketing at PCI, entered into a marketing agreement with a relative of a U.K.-MOD official. Under this agreement, the relative was not obligated to provide any services, but payments would be made by PCI to the relative. The actual purpose of these payments was to obtain contracts with the U.K.-MOD for ASU spare parts. Beginning in 1999 and continuing until May 2002, Smith wired approximately $70,350 to the relative of the U.K.-MOD official. As President of PCI, Self failed to investigate the marketing agreement and the purpose of the payments made to the relative and deliberately avoided learning the true facts.

Enforcement. On May 2, 2008, the DOJ filed a two-count information alleging violations of the FCPA’s anti-bribery provisions. On May 7, 2008, Self pleaded guilty to both counts. On November 10, 2008, the government moved to have the court impose a sentence at the low end of the applicable advisory guideline range, which was 8 to 14 months, given Self’s limited involvement in the bribery scheme. On November 17, 2008, Self was fined $20,000 and sentenced to 2 years’ probation. Smith was separately indicted. In a plea hearing on September 3, 2009, Smith pleaded guilty to causing bribes to be paid to the U.K.-MOD official, including via a spurious marketing agreement at a rate of $5,000 for two quarters, and endeavoring to instruct and impede the due administration of the Internal Revenue laws. On December 2, 2010, Smith was sentenced to 6 months in prison to be followed by 6 months of home confinement and fines and a special assessment totaling $7,700.

United States v. Volvo Construction Equipment AB \(D.D.C. 2008\)¹³²
United States v. Renault Trucks SAS \(D.D.C. 2008\)¹³³

Nature of the Business. Sales of heavy commercial construction equipment and vehicles and other equipment to Iraq under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program.

Business Location. Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $6.1 million in kickbacks to the Iraqi government.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $13.8 million and €61 million.
3. Intermediary. Distributors and “bodybuilder.”
4. The foreign official. None.

Volvo Construction Equipment (formerly Volvo Construction Equipment International, AB or “Volvo Construction”) is an international seller of heavy commercial construction equipment. Between December 2000 and January 2003, Volvo Construction paid approximately $1.3 million in kickbacks to the Iraqi government, improperly labeled as “commission” payments in its books and records. These kickbacks were included in various contract prices submitted by Volvo Construction and its distributors and ensured that Volvo Construction was awarded a total of approximately $13.8 million worth of contracts to supply construction vehicles to the Iraqi government.

From November 2000 through April 2003, Renault Trucks SAS (“Renault”) entered into 17 contracts with various Iraqi ministries, including the 10% kickback payment. In performing the contracts, Renault used a Swiss bodybuilder to tailor the requested vehicles to the Iraqi ministry’s specifications. Renault provided extra payments to that company and was aware that these extra payments were being passed onto the Iraqi government to ensure that they were awarded additional contracts. Overall, the Iraqi government received $4.8 million in kickbacks from Renault. In return for these kickbacks, Renault Trucks SAS obtained contracts to supply vehicles and other equipment approximately worth €61 million.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

The government did not allege bribery of any individual foreign governmental officials.

Enforcement. On March 20, 2008, AB Volvo (the parent company of Volvo Construction and Renault Trucks SAS) entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ. Pursuant to the agreement, the DOJ filed two criminal informations against VCE and Renault respectively alleging conspiracy to commit wire fraud and to violate the FCPA's books and records provisions. Under the agreement, AB Volvo agreed to pay a fine totaling $7 million. In June 2011, the Court granted the DOJ's motion to dismiss the information against AB Volvo because it had complied with the terms of the DPA. In addition, AB Volvo settled related charges with the SEC.

In March 2009, three unnamed executives at Volvo Construction were criminally charged by Swedish prosecutors for their involvement in the bribery scandal. They could face jail sentences if convicted.

Nature of the Business. Sale of pumps and other oil refinery equipment to Iraq under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program.

Business Location. Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $778,409 in paid or authorized kickbacks to the Iraqi government.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. €7,435,381.
3. Intermediary. Jordanian agent.
4. The foreign official. None.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

Flowserve Corporation (“Flowserve”), an American corporation, was involved in the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program through two of its foreign subsidiaries including Flowserve Pompes SAS, a French subsidiary. Between 2001 and 2003 Flowserve Pompes entered into nineteen contracts in connection to which kickback payments to the Iraqi government were either made or authorized. Flowserve Pompes offered to pay a total of $778,409 in payments, of which approximately $604,651 was in fact paid to the Iraqi government through a Jordanian agent pursuant to side agreements for nonexistent after-sales services.

The government did not allege bribery of any individual foreign governmental officials.

Enforcement. On February 21, 2008, Flowserve entered into a three-year deferred-prosecution agreement with the DOJ under which Flowserve acknowledged responsibility for its subsidiary Flowserve Pompes SAS’s actions. Flowserve agreed to pay a penalty of $4,000,000.

Influence to be Obtained. From 2001 to 2005, Pioneer Friction Limited (“Pioneer”), an Indian subsidiary of Westinghouse Air Brake Technologies Corporation (“Wabtec”), a U.S. corporation, and its employees and agents made various payments to officials of the Indian Railway Board (“IRB”), a government agency which is part of India’s Ministry of Railroads, to assist Pioneer in obtaining and retaining business with the IRB, scheduling pre-shipping product inspections, obtaining issuance of product delivery certificates, and curbing what Pioneer considered to be excessive tax audits.

Enforcement. In February 2008, Wabtec entered into a three-year non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ, admitting to the alleged conduct and agreeing to pay a $300,000 penalty, to implement rigorous internal controls, and to cooperate fully with the DOJ.

Nature of the Business. Purchase of Iraqi oil by El Paso Corporation (“El Paso”), a U.S. corporation. The Coastal Corporation (“Coastal”) was the predecessor-in-interest to El Paso CGP Company, which now operates as a wholly-owned subsidiary of El Paso.

Business Location. Iraq.

4. The foreign official. None.

Influence to be Obtained. From June 2001 through May 2002, El Paso purchased Iraqi oil from third parties, who had paid approximately $5.48 million in illegal surcharges to the former government of Iraq.

Enforcement. On February 7, 2007 the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York and El Paso entered into a non-prosecution agreement, under which El Paso agreed to forfeit the sum of $5,482,363, equal to the sum of illegal surcharges paid to the former Iraqi government. The Office of Foreign Assets Control (“OFAC”) agreed not to pursue civil penalties against El Paso for any violations of OFAC sanctions programs related to El Paso’s participation in the former Iraqi government’s scheme. El Paso also settled a related complaint filed by the SEC, consenting to a civil penalty of $2.25 million.

United States v. Juthamas Siriwan and Jittisopa Siriwan \(C.D. Cal. 2009\)¹³⁹

Nature of the Business. Procurement of contracts for the annual Bangkok International Film Festival (“Film Festival”) through the Tourism Authority of Thailand (“TAT”) and for other programs managed by a TAT-controlled entity, the Thailand Privilege Card Co. Ltd. (“Card Co.”).

Business Location. Thailand.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. At least $1,800,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. At least $14 million.
3. Intermediary. Daughter and friend of the Thai government official with TAT.
4. The foreign official. Thai government official with TAT.

Influence to be Obtained. The superseding indictment alleges that the Greens owned or operated several incorporated and unincorporated businesses in the U.S. to obtain and manage contracts with the TAT and Card Co. TAT, a government agency, administered the funds for the Film Festival. The indictment alleges that, between 2002 and 2007, the Greens paid at least $1,800,000 in bribes to the senior government officer at TAT to secure contracts with the Film Festival and with Card Co. for other tourism-related projects. The indictment alleges that the Greens inflated the value of their contracts with the TAT and Card Co. and with third-party contractors with whom they subcontracted to include corrupt payments of 10-20% of the contract value, that would be passed on to the official. The payments were allegedly made indirectly to bank accounts of the daughter and a friend of the government official in Singapore, the United Kingdom, and the Isle of Jersey, and were recorded improperly in the books and records of the Greens’ companies as “sales commissions.” The indictment also alleges that the Greens took unlawful tax deductions for those payments, accounting for them as commissions in the costs of goods sold. According to a second superseding indictment, Gerald Green altered and falsified film production budgets to make them appear as though they were created in 2006 to disguise bribe payments as bona fide expenses.

Enforcement. The Greens were charged by criminal complaint filed on December 7, 2007 and were arrested on December 18, 2007. On October 1, 2008, a superseding indictment was filed alleging additional facts, adding money laundering and tax counts, and seeking criminal forfeiture. The tax counts, however, were brought only against Patricia Green. The Greens pleaded not guilty. A restraining order was issued preventing the Greens from disposing of their assets until after trial. On March 11, 2009, a second superseding indictment was filed, which added a count of obstruction of justice against Gerald Green.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

On September 11, 2009, after a two-and-a-half week trial, a jury found the Greens both guilty of conspiracy to violate the FCPA and money laundering laws along with substantive violations of those laws. The jury also found Patricia Green guilty of falsely subscribing U.S. income tax returns in connection with their bribery scheme. Prosecutors dismissed a substantive money laundering count prior to the case going to the jury. The jury was unable to reach a verdict on the obstruction of justice count against Gerald Green. On August 13, 2010, the Court entered a general order of forfeiture against the Greens. The court entered a personal forfeiture judgment against the defendants jointly and severally in the amount of $1,049,465 plus the amount of each defendant's share of the Artis Design Corporation's Benefits Plan, representing the amount of defendants obtained as proceeds of the offenses. On September 10, 2010, the court sentenced the defendants to six months in prison and three years of supervised release. The court waived other fines but ordered Gerald Green to pay a special assessment of $1,700 and Patricia Green to pay a special assessment of $1,900. The court also ordered that defendants jointly and severally pay restitution in the amount of $250,000. The Government appealed the sentence to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals on October 22, 2010, but subsequently withdrew the appeal on August 23, 2011. The defendants then appealed the restitution order, claiming that the court could not order restitution without a jury's finding of an identifiable victim who suffered a pecuniary loss. However, on July 11, 2013, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the district court's ruling.

Related Case. U.S. v. Siriwan (C.D. Cal. 2009)

On January 28, 2009, the senior government official with TAT, Juthamas Siriwan, and her daughter, Jittisopa Siriwan, both Thai citizens, were indicted in the U.S. District Court for the Central District of California. They are charged with transporting funds to promote unlawful activity, namely bribery of a foreign official in violation of the FCPA, conspiring to do so, and aiding and abetting. The Greens are identified in the indictment as co-conspirators. On August 19, 2011, the Siriwans moved to dismiss the indictments on the ground that the government's charges rely on an expansive interpretation of "promotion of money laundering" under the Money Laundering Control Act to circumvent the fact that the FCPA does not criminalize a foreign public official's receipt of a bribe. During a hearing on March 2013, the prosecution set forth its theory of money laundering, whereby an "offense against a foreign nation" is the purported specified unlawful activity. Subsequently, the court issued a stay of the case to wait for the Thai court to decide whether the defendant had violated Thai law, thus constituting an "offense against a foreign nation." A status conference is scheduled for March 20, 2014.

Business Location. Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $280,000 in kickbacks to the Iraqi government.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $1,446,626.92 in profits.
3. Intermediary. Agents.
4. The foreign official. None.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

Between 2000 and 2002, two Akzo Nobel subsidiaries authorized and made approximately $280,000 in kickback payments to the Iraqi government in connection with their sales of humanitarian goods. The kickback payments were improperly recorded in the company’s books and records as commission payments in violation of the books and records provisions of the FCPA.

The government did not allege bribery of any individual foreign governmental officials.

Enforcement. On December 20, 2007, Akzo Nobel entered into a non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ, which required the company to reach a resolution with the Dutch Public Prosecutor under which it would pay a criminal fine of no less than €381,602 in the Netherlands. According to the agreement, if Akzo Nobel fails to reach a resolution with the Dutch Public Prosecutor within 180 days, Akzo Nobel will pay $800,000 to the U.S. Treasury. Further, if the criminal fine paid in the Netherlands is less than €381,602, then Akzo Nobel shall pay the U.S. Treasury the difference between the amount of the fine paid and U.S. $800,000. In a related SEC litigation, the company consented to the entry of a final judgment permanently enjoining it from future violations and ordering disgorgement of $1,647,363 in profits, plus $584,150 in prejudgment interest, and a civil penalty of $750,000.

In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

From April 2001 through May 2002, Chevron purchased Iraqi oil from third-party intermediaries and allocation holders who had paid surcharge payments to the Iraqi government in exchange for the right to buy the oil, in violation of sanctions and the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program rules and the books and records provisions of the FCPA. The government did not allege bribery of any individual foreign governmental officials.

Enforcement. On November 8, 2007, Chevron entered into a two-year non-prosecution agreement with the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the Southern District of New York and the District Attorney of New York County, New York. Chevron accepted responsibility and agreed to continue cooperating with state and federal authorities and to pay a total of $27 million, consisting of $20 million to the U.S. Attorney’s Office intended for the Development Fund of Iraq, $5 million to the New York County District Attorney’s Office, and $2 million to the United States Office of Foreign Asset Control. In a related SEC settlement, the company also separately agreed to pay an additional monetary penalty of $3 million and to disgorge $25 million, which was to be satisfied by its payments to the U.S. Attorney’s Office and the New York County District Attorney’s Office.

58. United States v. Lucent Technologies Inc. (2007)¹⁴²

Nature of the Business. Procurement of contracts for communications networks systems. Lucent Technologies Inc. (“Lucent”), a U.S. corporation, merged with Alcatel SA in 2006, forming a new entity, Alcatel-Lucent, incorporated in France.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $7.4 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. At least $2 billion.
3. Intermediary. None specified.
4. The foreign official. Senior level officials of the Chinese government, including heads of state-owned telecommunications companies and provincial subsidiaries.

Influence to be Obtained. From at least 2000 to 2003, Lucent paid all of the expenses, and often per diems, for approximately 315 trips to the United States by numerous Chinese government officials as well as providing various educational expenses for additional government officials. The trips were primarily, and sometimes wholly, for sightseeing and leisure rather than business purposes and were booked improperly in Lucent’s books and records, for example as “factory inspections” in locations where no factory existed. The educational expenses, which included graduate school tuition and expenses for an employee of a Chinese government ministry, were improperly recorded as “marketing expenses.” These trips and educational expenses were intended to procure contracts for the provision of communications networks systems worth at least $2 billion.

Enforcement. Lucent entered into a two-year non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ in December 2007, admitting to the alleged conduct and agreeing to pay a $1 million penalty and to adopt new, or to modify existing, internal controls. Lucent also consented to a final judgment with the SEC requiring it to cease and desist from further violations of the FCPA, to implement an FCPA compliance protocol, and to pay a civil penalty of $1.5 million.

United States v. Thermo King Ireland Ltd. \(D.D.C. 2007\)¹⁴⁵

Nature of the Business. Procurement of humanitarian contracts to provide road construction equipment, air compressors and parts, and refrigerated trucks to Iraqi ministries by including kickbacks in contracts under the United Nations Oil-for-Food Program. Ingersoll-Rand Co. Ltd. (“Ingersoll-Rand”) is a Bermuda corporation.

Business Location. Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $850,000 in kickbacks to the Iraqi government.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $2.27 million in profits.
3. Intermediary. Agent/Distributor.
4. The foreign official. Unspecified Iraqi officials.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

From October 2000 to August 2003, Ingersoll-Rand’s Italian and Irish wholly-owned subsidiaries (Ingersoll-Rand Italiana, SpA, and Thermo King Ireland Limited) paid kickbacks to the Iraqi government, and the Italian subsidiary paid for travel, entertainment, and “pocket money” for eight Iraqi government officials, to obtain humanitarian contracts with Iraqi ministries to provide road construction equipment, air compressors and parts, and refrigerated trucks.

Enforcement. On October 31, 2007, the DOJ filed a criminal information in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia charging Thermo King Ireland Limited with conspiracy to commit wire fraud. The information alleges that the Irish subsidiary secured contracts as described above with the Iraqi government by offering to pay kickbacks of 10%. The DOJ filed another criminal information in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia charging Ingersoll-Rand Italiana, SpA, with conspiracy to commit wire fraud and to violate the books and records provisions of the FCPA. The information alleges a similar kickback scheme as well as the facilitation of travel for Iraqi officials for the same purpose.

Ingersoll-Rand entered into a 3-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ on October 31, 2007, on behalf of itself and these subsidiaries. Ingersoll-Rand agreed to pay a monetary penalty of $2.5 million, accept responsibility for the alleged misconduct, continue to cooperate with the DOJ, adopt an FCPA compliance program as well as a set of internal controls designed to prevent future violations, and retain an independent compliance expert for a period of three years. Ingersoll-Rand also consented to the entry of a final judgment with the SEC, agreeing to a cease and desist order and to pay disgorgement of profits of $1,710,034 plus prejudgment interest of $560,953, and a further civil penalty of $1,950,000, and to retain a compliance monitor.

Procurement of contracts to supply air compressors, air conditioners, air-cooled package units and spare parts to governmental entities in Iraq, the United Arab Emirates, and several other countries by York International Corp. (“York International”), a U.S. corporation, which is a major global supplier of heating, ventilation, air conditioning and refrigeration products. York International is now owned by U.S.-based Johnson Controls. York International maintained subsidiary entities around the world, including York Air Conditioning and Refrigeration FZE (“York FZE”) in Dubai and York Air Conditioning and Refrigeration, Inc. (“York Inc.”), a Delaware corporation.

Business Location. Iraq, Bahrain, Egypt, India, Turkey and the United Arab Emirates.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $647,000 in connection with the Iraqi U.N. Oil-for-Food Program; approximately $550,000 in connection with a project in the UAE; an undisclosed amount comprising several hundred bribes and kickbacks relating to an unspecified number of projects in the other countries.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Over $6 million in contracts in connection with the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program; $3.7 million in contracts in connection with a project in the UAE; approximately $42 million relating to other projects in the UAE and projects in the other countries mentioned above.
3. Intermediary. A Jordanian company as a sales agent for some contracts in connection with the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program; a York Inc. employee and an unspecified intermediary in connection with the UAE project; unnamed contractors for other projects in Bahrain, Egypt, India, Turkey, and the UAE.
4. The foreign official. Various Bahraini, Egyptian, Indian, Turkish, and UAE government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

From November 2000 to March 2003, York FZE used a Jordanian company as an intermediary to make a series of indirect kickback payments to the Iraqi government in exchange for receiving contracts to supply its products to various Iraqi ministries and governmental departments. In 2003–04, York Inc. used one of its employees, a Syrian sales manager, to make payments to an intermediary, which is suspected of passing along the payments to governmental appointees responsible for managing the construction of a luxury hotel and convention complex. From September 1999 through December 2005, York Inc. and York FZE used contractors and false invoices to extract cash from the companies that was, in turn, used to make hundreds of kickback or bribe payments.

Enforcement. On October 1, 2007, York International entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement (“DPA”) with the DOJ. The criminal information attached to the agreement charges York International with wire fraud and violation of the books and records provisions of the FCPA, as well as conspiracy to commit such offenses. York International agreed to pay a $10 million fine and to submit to the appointment of an independent monitor for its compliance program. On October 1, 2010, the DOJ dismissed the criminal information on the basis that York International had fully complied with all of its obligations under the DPA, including (i) payment of the $10 million penalty; (ii) full cooperation with the government; and (iii) improvement of its compliance policies and procedures to ensure compliance with the FCPA and other applicable anti-corruption laws, as certified by the independent monitor. In a related SEC litigation, the company also separately consented to the entry of final judgment enjoining it from further violations and to pay over $10 million in disgorgement and interest, as well a $2 million civil penalty.

55. United States v. Paradigm B.V. (2007)¹⁴⁷

Nature of the Business. Paradigm, a Dutch company previously located in Israel and now headquartered in Houston, Texas, is a provider of enterprise software solutions to the oil and gas exploration and production industry. Paradigm's software is used to create dynamic digital models of the Earth's subsurface by analyzing and interpreting large quantities of data.

Business Location. China, Indonesia, Kazakhstan, Mexico and Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $22,500 in Kazakhstan. Although the pleadings did not list the total amount of payments elsewhere, they noted payments of $100-200 per official in China, commission payments of several hundred thousand in Mexico, and an agreement to make corrupt payments of between $100,000 and 200,000 through an agent in Nigeria, in addition to extensive improper entertainment and travel.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Total is not stated; $249,290 in Kazakhstan; first contract in Mexico was $1.48 million.
3. Intermediary. Frontera Holding, a British West Indies "consultant" (for Kazakhstan); Tangshan Haitai Oil Technology Consulting Co. Ltd. in China; unnamed agents for Nigeria, Indonesia.
4. The foreign official. KazMunaiGas official; employees of Chinese national oil companies; Nigerian politicians; official of Pemex, the Mexican national oil company; officials of Pertamina, the Indonesian national oil company.

Influence to be Obtained. Paradigm's current management first learned of the improper payments while conducting due diligence in preparation for listing its shares on U.S. stock exchanges. It thereafter retained counsel to conduct an internal investigation, implemented a new compliance program, and made a voluntary disclosure to the DOJ.

According to the pleadings, Paradigm made the following payments for the following purposes:

- Kazakhstan: Paradigm made a payment into the Latvian bank account of a British West Indies company recommended as a consultant by a KazMunaiGas official to secure a tender in Kazakhstan for geological software.
- China: Paradigm's subsidiary used an agent in China to make commission payments to representatives of Zhonghai Petroleum (China) Co., Ltd., a subsidiary of the China National Offshore Oil Company ("CNOOC"), in connection with the sale of software. In addition, the company directly retained Chinese national oil and gas companies' employees as "internal consultants" to evaluate Paradigm's software, to influence procurement decisions, and to inspect and accept delivered software. These "internal consultants” were paid in cash. Finally, the company paid for travel, including sightseeing trips, for the “internal consultants” and other employees of the Chinese national oil & gas companies.

- Nigeria: Paradigm agreed to make payments through an agent to politicians to obtain a services contract with Integrated Data Services Limited, a subsidiary of the Nigerian National Petroleum Corp. (“NNPC”), but did not get the contract.
- Mexico: Paradigm used an agent in connection with a subcontract with the Mexican Bureau of Geophysical Contracting (“BGP”), without a written agency agreement. The agent requested his commission payments be paid through five different entities. Paradigm Mexico also took a decision-maker of Pemex, Mexico’s national oil company, accompanied by the agent in the BGP deal, on a birthday trip to Napa Valley, California, in connection with another contract, and also spent large sums entertaining the same person at other times. Paradigm Mexico hired this official’s brother as a driver. The official then awarded a third contract with another branch of Pemex to Paradigm.
- Indonesia: Paradigm used an agent who was involved in making payments “for the purpose of obtaining or retaining business” from Pertamina, the national oil company.

Enforcement. Paradigm agreed to pay a $1 million penalty, implement internal controls, and cooperate fully. In a departure from previous practice the DOJ permitted the company to retain its existing external counsel as a “compliance counsel” with unspecified reporting requirements for a period of 18 months. The government agreed not to prosecute Paradigm or its subsidiaries if all conditions are met within 18 months.

54. United States v. Jason Edward Steph (S.D. Tex. 2007)¹⁴⁸

Nature of the Business. Procurement of contracts for a gas pipeline construction project in Nigeria for Willbros International Inc. (“Willbros International”), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Willbros Group, Inc. (“Willbros Group”). Willbros is a Panamanian corporation listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Jason Edward Steph was formerly the general manager of on-shore operations for Willbros International Inc.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $6 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $387,500,000.
3. Intermediary. Outside consultants.
4. The foreign official. Officials of the Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation and the National Petroleum Investment Management Services, a senior executive branch official of the Nigerian government, a political party, and Shell Petroleum Development Corporation, operator of a joint venture majority-owned by Nigerian government.

Influence to be Obtained. Steph, a U.S. citizen, conspired to make payments to certain Nigerian government officials, with the assistance of consultants, employees of a major German construction and engineering firm, and other third-parties to secure gas pipeline construction business in Nigeria. Despite an ongoing internal investigation at Willbros, Steph conspired to secure cash for payment of prior commitments to Nigerian officials using the petty cash accounts of the company’s Nigerian subsidiary and loans from third-parties, including a German construction and engineering firm that was a consortium partner with Willbros.

Enforcement. On July 19, 2007, the DOJ filed an indictment against Steph charging one count of conspiracy to violate the FCPA and for three money laundering counts. In November 2007, Steph pleaded guilty, admitting to conspiring to pay approximately $1.8 million to Nigerian officials. Under the plea agreement, Steph agreed to plead guilty to conspiracy, to file accurate amended tax returns, and to cooperate with the DOJ in its ongoing investigation into the Willbros matter. The Government dismissed the money laundering charges and did not oppose Steph’s request for a two-level downward adjustment under the sentencing guidelines for acceptance of responsibility. On January 28, 2010, the court sentenced Steph to 15 months of imprisonment, 2 years of supervised release, a criminal fine of $2,000 and an assessment of $100.

Oil-for-Food Program by three of Rhode-Island-based Textron, Inc.'s David Brown French subsidiaries between 2001 and 2003. The investigation into the Iraq payments yielded several dozen more corrupt payments in other countries to secure 36 contracts in those places between 2000 and 2005.

Business Location. Iraq, UAE, Bangladesh, Indonesia, Egypt, and India.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $600,000 in Iraq; $114,995.20 in the other countries.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Profits of $1,936,926 from Iraq, and $328,939 from the other countries.
3. Intermediary. Two “consultants” for the Iraq payments, one in Lebanon and one in Jordan.
4. The foreign official. Officials of GASCO, ZADCO, and ADCO (subsidiaries of state-owned Abu Dhabi National Oil Company), Pertamina (Indonesian state-owned oil company), and unidentified government-owned companies in Bangladesh, India, and Egypt.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

Textron’s French subsidiaries used consultants to make kickback payments to the government of Iraq to secure sales of industrial pumps and gear. In addition, the Textron subsidiaries paid bribes to officials of state-owned companies in the UAE, Indonesia, Bangladesh, India, and Egypt to obtain contracts.

Enforcement. On August 21, 2007, the government and Textron entered into a non-prosecution agreement, in which Textron acknowledged that its subsidiaries were responsible for the illegal conduct alleged and agreed to pay a fine of $1.15 million, not to commit further crimes, and to waive the statute of limitations indefinitely as to the crimes covered by the agreement. The government in turn agreed not to prosecute Textron for any crimes related to the payments to the Iraqi government (except for criminal tax violations), or for the other improper payments discovered and disclosed through Textron’s own investigation.

51. United States v. Si Chan Wooh (D. Or. 2007)¹⁵²

Nature of the Business. Sale of scrap metal to Chinese government instrumentalities by SSI International, Inc. (“SSI”), which was until 2006 a wholly-owned U.S. subsidiary of Schnitzer Steel Industries, Inc. (“Schnitzer Steel”), a U.S. corporation.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $204, 537.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Gross revenue of $96,396,740 and profits of $6,259,104 from government entities.
3. Intermediary. None.
4. The foreign official. Managers of government customers.

Influence to be Obtained. From 1995 to August 2004, Wooh, a former Executive Vice President and head of SSI, conspired with Schnitzer Steel, SSI, and SSI International Far East, Ltd. (a South Korea-based wholly-owned subsidiary of Schnitzer managed by SSI) to make payments to officers and employees of government-owned customers in China to induce them to purchase scrap metal. The payments were made to foreign officials primarily in the form of commissions, refunds, and gratuities via off-book foreign bank accounts.

Enforcement. Wooh pleaded guilty to violating the FCPA on June 29, 2007. On that same day, he also settled related charges brought by the SEC. Without admitting or denying the allegations of the SEC’s complaint, he agreed to pay approximately $40,000 in disgorgement, interest, and civil penalties.

On October 14, 2011, before a sentence was imposed, the DOJ moved to dismiss the criminal information against Wooh, citing “prosecutorial discretion in the interests of justice and the efficient use of government resources.” That motion was granted on October 17, 2011.

50. United States v. William J. Jefferson (E.D. Va. 2007)¹⁵³

Nature of the Business. Provision of telecommunications services by a joint venture in which William J. Jefferson, a now-former Representative of the United States House of Representatives, held a financial interest. Jefferson represented Louisiana's 2nd Congressional District from 1991 to 2009.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $500,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unspecified.
3. Intermediary. None.
4. The foreign official. High-ranking Nigerian executive government official.

Influence to be Obtained. From around April 2005 through August 2005, Jefferson offered $500,000 in cash and a share of the future profits of a Nigerian joint venture in which he held a financial interest to a high-ranking Nigerian government official, for the purpose of securing necessary approvals for that joint venture from NITEL, the Nigerian public telecommunications company, which offer the Nigerian official accepted. Jefferson also used a Nigerian businessman to offer bribes to lower ranking Nigerian officials. For statutory purposes, the government alleged that Jefferson was a citizen and a "domestic concern," as well as an "agent of a domestic concern," as an owner of a U.S. company involved in the bribery allegations.

According to the indictment, Jefferson allegedly drove his car with $100,000 in cash from Arlington, VA to Washington, DC to prepare to deliver the money to the Nigerian official, as the first installment in the payment of $500,000. $90,000 of that alleged $100,000 bribe payment was later found in Jefferson's freezer.

In addition to allegations he violated the FCPA, the government charged Jefferson with soliciting bribes, money laundering, obstruction of justice and RICO. These included allegations that he provided assistance in the form of various official acts for companies, such as Kentucky-based iGate, Incorporated, to help those companies secure business in Nigeria, Ghana, Cameroon, Equatorial Guinea, and Sao Tome and Principe, in exchange for monetary payments and other financial consideration. The government alleged that Jefferson used Congressional staff members and family members to form companies in which he held undisclosed financial interests to receive his bribe payments. Two individuals, including the owner of iGate Inc., pleaded guilty to bribing Rep. Jefferson in separate proceedings.

Enforcement. On June 8, 2007, Rep. Jefferson pleaded not guilty to all charges and was released on $100,000 bail. The U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia ordered the restraint of approximately $950,000 of Jefferson's assets as well as certain shares owned by Jefferson.

¹⁵³ U.S. v. Jefferson, No: 1:07-cr-00209 (E.D. Va. 2007).

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

Jefferson moved to dismiss several non-FCPA bribery charges on September 7, 2007. The district court denied the motion on February 6, 2008, and the Fourth Circuit affirmed the denial on November 12, 2008. On February 19, 2009, Jefferson filed a petition to the Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari appealing the Fourth Circuit's decision. On May 18, 2009, the Supreme Court declined to hear Jefferson's appeal.

On August 5, 2009, after a trial in the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, a federal jury found Jefferson guilty of 11 of the 16 charges against him including solicitation of bribes, wire fraud, and money laundering. Jefferson was acquitted of the substantive FCPA charge. However, he was convicted of the count of the indictment charging him with conspiracy to solicit bribes, deprive citizens of honest services by wire fraud, and violate the FCPA. The verdict form did not require the jury to indicate whether it found that the government proved each object of the conspiracy charge.

The jury set Jefferson's forfeiture of assets obtained from criminal activity at $470,653. Jefferson was sentenced to 60 months in prison on the conspiracy count. He also received concurrent sentences for the substantive offenses, the longest of which is 156 months plus 3 years supervised release for the substantive crimes of soliciting bribes and wire fraud and for a RICO count. On November 23, 2009, Jefferson filed a notice of appeal. His conviction was affirmed on March 26, 2012.

49. *United States v. Leo Winston Smith (C.D. Cal. 2007)*¹⁵⁴

Nature of the Business. Military spare parts. Leo Winston Smith a U.S. citizen, was the Executive Vice President of Sales and Marketing of Pacific Consolidated Industries (“PCI”), a manufacturer of Air Separation Units (“ASU”) and other equipment for defense departments around the world.

Business Location. United Kingdom.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. More than $70,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Relative of government official.
4. The foreign official. United Kingdom Ministry of Defense official.

Influence to be Obtained. In 1999, the President of PCI and Smith created a sham marketing agreement between PCI and a relative of a United Kingdom Ministry of Defense (U.K.-MOD) project manager for consulting/marketing services in Europe at a rate of $5,000 for two quarters. In this way, Smith and the executive caused bribe payments to be made to a U.K.-MOD project manager who assisted Smith and the executive in obtaining lucrative contracts. In addition, Smith under-reported income on his 2003 tax return and failed to file a 2003 tax return for his Nevada corporation.

Enforcement. A grand jury in the Central District of California indicted Smith on April 25, 2007 on 11 counts including violations of the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA. He was arrested on June 18, 2007. Prosecutors in the United Kingdom have already prosecuted and convicted the U.K.-MOD official. Smith first pleaded guilty on August 28, 2009. In a plea hearing on September 3, 2009, Smith changed his plea to a plea of guilty to the first superseding information, filed September 1, 2009. The first superseding information alleged two counts: (1) conspiracy to violate the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA and (2) obstruction of the due administration of the internal revenue laws. An evidentiary hearing took place on September 28, 2010. On December 2, 2010, Smith was sentenced to 6 months in prison to be followed by 6 months of home confinement and fines and a special assessment totaling $7,700.

48. United States v. Baker Hughes Services Int'l, Inc. \(S.D. Tex. 2007\)¹⁵⁵
United States v. Baker Hughes Inc.¹⁵⁶

Nature of the Business. Procurement of a contract for oilfield development by Baker Hughes Services International, Inc. (“Baker Hughes Services”), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Baker Hughes Incorporated (“Baker Hughes”). Baker Hughes is a U.S. oilfield services company.

Business Location. Kazakhstan.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $4.1 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $205 million.
3. Intermediary. An unidentified Isle of Man-based consulting firm.
4. The foreign official. Officials of Kazakhoil, a state-owned entity.

Influence to be Obtained. In February 2000, Baker Hughes Services submitted a bid for a services contract relating to the development of Karachaganak, a large gas and oil field in northwestern Kazakhstan. In September 2000, the company received unofficial notification that it would win the contract. However, later that month Kazakhoil officials demanded that Baker Hughes Services retain an unidentified consulting firm to secure approval of the Karachaganak contract and pay the firm a commission based on Baker Hughes Services’s revenues from the contract. Shortly thereafter Baker Hughes Services entered into a contract with the consulting firm, and in October 2003 Baker Hughes Services was formally notified that it had been awarded the Karachaganak contract. Then, on an approximately monthly basis from May 2001 to November 2003, Baker Hughes and Baker Hughes Services made commission payments totaling approximately $4.1 million to the consultant as a reward for securing the contract. Employees of Baker Hughes Services understood that all or part of these commissions would be transferred to officials of Kazakhoil as bribes.

Enforcement. Baker Hughes Services pleaded guilty to violations of the anti-bribery and books and records provisions of the FCPA and agreed to an $11 million criminal fine. Baker Hughes entered into a deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ and accepted responsibility for the conduct of its employees and Baker Hughes Services. Under the terms of the agreement, Baker Hughes must hire an independent monitor that will oversee the implementation of a robust compliance program and make a series of reports to the company and the DOJ.

United States v. Aibel Group Ltd. \(S.D. Tex. 2007\)¹⁵⁸

Nature of the Business. Provision of upstream oil and gas products and services by Vetco Gray Controls Inc., Vetco Gray Controls Ltd., Vetco Gray U.K. Ltd., and Aibel Group Ltd., which are all wholly-owned subsidiaries of Vetco International Ltd., a U.K. corporation. Of the four subsidiaries, only Vetco Gray Controls Inc. is a U.S. corporation.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $2.1 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. None specified.
3. Intermediary. Major international freight forwarding and customs clearance company.
4. The foreign official. Nigerian customs officials.

Influence to be Obtained. From at least September 2002 to at least April 2005, the Vetco International Subsidiaries made at least 378 payments through an agent to officials of the Nigerian Customs Service to secure preferential treatment during the customs process.

Enforcement. Vetco Gray Controls Inc., Vetco Gray Controls Ltd., and Vetco Gray U.K. Ltd. pleaded guilty to violations of the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA and agreed to a collective fine of $26 million, paying $6 million, $8 million and $12 million respectively. They also agreed to hire an independent monitor to oversee the implementation of a robust compliance program, to undertake an investigation of the company's operations as required under FCPA Opinion Release 04-02, and to agree that any potential buyer of the company would be bound to those monitoring and investigation conditions. Aibel Group Ltd. entered a deferred prosecution agreement relating to the same underlying conduct. Vetco Gray Controls Inc. and Vetco Gray U.K. Ltd. had previously pleaded guilty under the FCPA in 2004 in connection with their sale by ABB and the DOJ had required the implementation of compliance measures at that time. The previous guilty pleas and the failure of such compliance measures, evidenced by the continuation of corrupt activity, were taken into account by the DOJ in assessing the fines.

In November 2008, Aibel Group Ltd. pleaded guilty to a superseding information relating to the same conduct, which charged conspiracy to violate the FCPA and a violation of the FCPA. Pursuant to the plea agreement, the court dismissed the 2007 deferred prosecution agreement, which Aibel admitted having violated. Aibel agreed to pay a $4.2 million fine.

46. United States v. Christian Sapsizian and Edgar Valverde Acosta (S.D. Fla. 2006)¹⁵⁹

Nature of the Business. Procurement of telecommunications business by Christian Sapsizian, an executive of Alcatel S.A. (“Alcatel”), a French corporation with registered shares traded in the United States. Sapsizian held a number of positions in Alcatel including Vice President of Latin America for one of Alcatel’s subsidiaries. Edgar Valverde Acosta was a Costa Rican national who managed the day-to-day affairs of Alcatel’s Costa Rican subsidiary and held the title of Senior Country Officer.

Business Location. Costa Rica.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. At least $2.56 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. At least $250 million.
3. Intermediary. Consulting firm in Costa Rica.
4. The foreign official. Board member of state telecommunications authority.

Influence to be Obtained. From around February 2000 through September 2004, Sapsizian and Acosta, on behalf of Alcatel, a French company, allegedly directly made payments to an official of the state-owned telecommunications company, intending for that official to share the payments with another senior official. During this period, Sapsizian and Acosta also employed an agent consulting firm as a conduit for bribe payments to the two officials and the wife of one of the officials.

Enforcement. On March 20, 2007, a superseding indictment was filed against Sapsizian and Acosta. On June 7, 2007, the DOJ announced that Sapsizian pleaded guilty to two counts of conspiracy and violating the FCPA. The terms of his plea agreement provide for an immediate forfeiture of $261,500, as well as Sapsizian’s continued cooperation with U.S. and foreign law enforcement officials in the ongoing investigation concerning Alcatel CIT. On September 23, 2008, Sapsizian was sentenced to 30 months in prison and three years of supervised release. Separately, on June 14, 2007, the court transferred Acosta to fugitive status.

45. United States v. Jim Bob Brown (S.D. Tex. 2006)¹⁶⁰

Nature of the Business. Procurement of contracts for oil and gas pipeline construction projects by Willbros International Inc. (“Willbros International”), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Willbros Group, Inc. (“Willbros Group”). Willbros is a Panamanian corporation listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Jim Bob Brown (“Brown”), a former employee of Willbros International, was a managing director of Nigerian and South American subsidiary operations of Willbros International from 2000 until his termination in 2005.

Business Location. Nigeria and Ecuador.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $6.6 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Revenue of $390,500,000.
3. Intermediary. Outside consultants.
4. The foreign official. Officials of Nigerian Petroleum Corporation, Nigerian tax officials, Nigerian court officials, officials of PetroEcuador.

Influence to be Obtained. Payments were made by Willbros International consultants to foreign officials at the Nigerian and Ecuadorian government-owned oil companies to obtain oil and gas pipeline construction business. The payments in Nigeria were part of a larger multi-million dollar bribery scheme involving a former senior Willbros executive, a U.S. national acting as a purported “consultant,” and Nigeria-based employees of a major German construction and engineering firm. Payments dating back to 1996 were also made to influence tax and court officials in Nigeria for favorable treatment for tax assessments and litigation.

Enforcement. Pursuant to a Plea Agreement executed September 14, 2006, Brown pleaded guilty to the one-count information charging conspiracy to violate the FCPA by bribing Nigerian and Ecuadorian officials. Under the terms of his plea, Brown agreed to cooperate with the government in its ongoing investigation connected to Willbros. On January 28, 2010, the court sentenced Brown to 12 months and 1 day of imprisonment, supervised release of 2 years, a criminal fine of $17,500, and an assessment of $100.

The payments were made to foreign officials primarily in the form of commissions, refunds and gratuities via off-book foreign bank accounts.

Enforcement. SSI Korea agreed to plead guilty to violating the anti-bribery and accounting provisions of the FCPA and pay a $7.5 million penalty. 43. United States v. Statoil ASA (S.D.N.Y. 2006)¹⁶³

Nature of the Business. Procurement of oil and gas business in Iran by Statoil, Norway's largest oil and gas company, which is a foreign issuer listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Business Location. Iran.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $5.2 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Undetermined.
3. Intermediary. Offshore intermediary company consultant.
4. The foreign official. Head of a subsidiary organization of the national oil company.

Influence to be Obtained. From 2000, Statoil sought to expand its international operations with a focus on Iran. In 2001, high-level Statoil officials met with the head of the Iranian Fuel Consumption Optimizing Organization, a subsidiary of the National Iranian Oil Company. The Iranian official, the son of a former President of Iran, was determined to be highly influential in the award of oil and gas business in Iran. In 2002, Statoil entered into a $15.2 million contract with Horton Investments, Ltd. ("Horton"), a small consulting firm in Turks & Caicos and owned by a third-party in London, England, to provide payments to the Iranian official, of which $200,000 was paid in June 2002. The Iranian official used his influence to secure a contract for Statoil in October 2002 to develop the South Pars oil and gas field (one of the largest in the world), a contract which would yield "millions of dollars in profit." In December 2002, Statoil paid an additional $5 million to the official.

In 2004, Statoil's internal audit department uncovered and reported the existence of the consulting contract and the $5.2 million payments to the company's CFO, who ordered an investigation. Statoil's security group and internal audit group prepared a report concluding that the company may have violated U.S. and Norwegian bribery laws and recommended that the contract be terminated immediately. Nevertheless, Statoil's CEO and the Chairman of its Board took no corrective action.

Three senior executives at Statoil have resigned: its chairman Leif Terje Loeddesoel, chief executive officer Olav Fjell, and executive vice president Richard Hubbard.

Enforcement. Statoil entered a three-year deferred prosecution agreement and has admitted to having violated the anti-bribery and accounting provisions of the FCPA. It has also agreed to pay a $10.5 million penalty. In the SEC proceeding, it has agreed to pay $10.5 million in disgorgement and retain a monitor. Statoil has already paid a NOK 20 million ($3.045 million USD) fine to the Norway National Authority for Investigation and Prosecution of Economic Crime, without admitting or denying any liability, which will be deducted from the U.S. fines. Statoil satisfactorily completed its period of supervision under the

42. United States v. Steven Lynwood Head (S.D. Cal. 2006)¹⁶⁴

Nature of the Business. Development and operation of a wireless telephone system in Benin. In 1999 the Titan Corporation (“Titan”), a U.S. defense contractor (later acquired by L-3 Communications in July 2005), acquired the rights to develop and operate this network. Steven Lynwood Head was employed by Titan as program manager of business activities in Benin, and later as CEO of Titan Africa, Inc. Although separately incorporated, Titan Africa, Inc. shared employees, officers, and personnel with Titan.

Business Location. Benin.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $2 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Undetermined.
3. Intermediary. The business advisor of the President of Benin.
4. The foreign official. President of Benin.

Influence to be Obtained. As part of its contract to develop and operate the wireless telephone system, Titan was required to pay part of its profits as subsidies to the Benin government for development of certain economic sectors (“social payments”). In or about December 2000, the business advisor solicited money from Titan under the guise of “advanced social payments.” Although Head believed that at least part of the payments would be used to support the Benin President’s reelection effort, he nonetheless caused the requested payments to be made through a false invoice for consulting services allegedly performed. Head also used the scheduling and payment of the monies as leverage to increase Titan’s management fee under the contract.

Enforcement. Steven Lynwood Head pleaded guilty to a one-count information charging falsification of the books, records and accounts of an issuer under the federal securities laws. Pursuant to the plea agreement, Head will cooperate with the government’s ongoing investigation of individuals formerly associated with Titan. In September 2007, Head was sentenced to six months imprisonment, supervised release for a term of three years, and a $5,000 fine.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Between $30,000 and $70,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $2,345,326 in fraudulent products.
3. Intermediary. None specified.
4. The foreign official. Two embassy officials of Liberia, Director of National Commission of Higher Education of Liberia, and Director General of Higher Education of Liberia.

Influence to be Obtained. False accreditation for the universities from the government of Liberia and to induce officials to provide positive responses, including official documents, to inquiries about the universities and their legitimacy.

Enforcement. On March 20, 2006, Novak pleaded guilty to one count of violating the FCPA and an additional count of wire fraud and mail fraud. On September 30, 2008, Novak was sentenced to 3 years’ probation, and 300 hours of community service. Additional defendants involved in the scheme have either pleaded guilty or are currently being prosecuted on various non-FCPA charges.

United States v. Thomas Farrell \(S.D.N.Y. 2003\)¹⁷¹

Nature of the Business. In connection with attempts to privatize the oil industry of the Republic of Azerbaijan in the late 1990s, a group of corporations and investors (the “Investment Consortium”) attempted to acquire controlling interests in SOCAR, the Azeri national oil company. The Investment Consortium was comprised of Viktor Kozeny (“Kozeny”), Frederic Bourke Jr. (“Bourke”), David Pinkerton (“Pinkerton”), Oily Rock Group Ltd. (“Oily Rock”), Minaret Group Ltd. (“Minaret”), Oily Rock’s shareholders, and co-investors. Kozeny was president and chairman of Oily Rock and Minaret, two corporations engaged in activities relating to the acquisition of Azeri government vouchers and options in SOCAR. Omega Advisors, Inc. (“Omega”) and Pharos Capital Management, L.P. (“Pharos”) both entered into co-investment agreements with Oily Rock and Minaret. Clayton Lewis and Thomas Farrell, identified as unnamed co-conspirators in this indictment, were engaged in activities relating to Omega and Pharos. American International Group, Inc. (“AIG”), through its subsidiary called Marlwood Commercial Inc., entered into an investment agreement with Pharos and a co-investment agreement with Oily Rock and Minaret. Pinkerton, then Managing Director of AIG Global Investment Corporation and in charge of AIG’s private equity group, was responsible for initiating and supervising AIG’s investment into the Azeri government privatization scheme. Bourke invested approximately $8,000,000 in Oily Rock shares through Blueport International Ltd.

Hans Bodmer, also an unnamed co-conspirator, acted as legal counsel to Kozeny, Omega, and various other investors. Hyposwiss Bank maintained operative and escrow accounts for receipt and transfer of money from investing members of the consortium to Azerbaijan.

Business Location. The Republic of Azerbaijan.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Millions of dollars in payments in the form of: 1) cash and wire transfers to Azeri officials and family members; 2) promises of two-thirds of profits realized in the privatization of SOCAR; 3) transfer of Investment Consortium vouchers and options; 4) issuance of approximately $300,000,000 worth of Oily Rock shares; 5) jewelry and luxury items in excess of $600,000; and 6) medical, travel, and gift expenses to Azeri officials.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unspecified.
3. Intermediary. Unspecified.
4. The foreign official. Senior official of the government of Azerbaijan, a senior official of SOCAR, and two senior officials of the Azerbaijan's State Property Committee.

Influence to be Obtained. To induce Azeri government officials to allow the Investment Consortium's continued participation in Azeri privatization, to privatize SOCAR, and to permit the Investment Consortium to acquire a controlling interest in SOCAR.

Enforcement. On October 6, 2005, Kozeny, Bourke, and Pinkerton were charged in a 27-count indictment in U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York. The indictment sought $174,000,000 in fines and forfeiture. Kozeny, an Irish citizen and resident of the Bahamas, has challenged the right of the United States to seek his extradition given that he is neither a U.S. citizen, nor a resident, and was not in violation of an offense under Bahamian law. On September 28, 2006, a court in the Bahamas ordered Kozeny to be extradited, although Kozeny's lawyers announced that they intended to appeal the order. The Bahamas press reports that, on October 24, 2007, the Bahamas Supreme Court denied the extradition of Kozeny on the grounds that the FCPA charges against Kozeny were not extraditable offenses. On February 13, 2009, the Southern District of New York ordered a freeze of Kozeny's U.S. assets subject to forfeiture, including proceeds from the sale of a Colorado residence amounting to approximately $23 million. On March 28, 2012, the U.K. Privy Council ruled that Kozeny cannot be extradited from the Bahamas to the U.S. to face the FCPA charges because Kozeny's alleged bribery did not break any laws in the Bahamas.

On June 21, 2007, the District Court for the Southern District of New York granted the motions to dismiss of Bourke and Pinkerton as to all FCPA counts. The court found that the indictment was time-barred because the government did not move to suspend the running of the statute of limitations to allow it to collect foreign evidence until after the statute of limitations had expired. The court found that filing such an application must be done before the running of the ordinary statute of limitations. The court found, in dicta, that the allegations were otherwise sufficient to withstand a motion to dismiss. Certain false statements counts against the defendants survived the motion to dismiss.

On July 5, 2007, the government moved for reconsideration of the court's June 21, 2007 decision, arguing that three of the counts of the indictment (including conspiracy to violate the FCPA and the Travel Act and a substantive FCPA violation) should not have been dismissed as time-barred. The court agreed with the government and on July 16, 2007, granted the government's motion for reconsideration and reinstated these three counts. The government appealed the balance of the court's June 21, 2007 order to the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit and, on August 29, 2008, the Second Circuit affirmed the district court's dismissal of the remaining counts.

On September 17, 2008, Bourke filed a motion for the issuance of a Letter Rogatory to the appropriate judicial authority of the Principality of Liechtenstein, requesting international judicial assistance to inspect and obtain evidence to be used at trial. Bourke's motion was granted on October 17, 2008.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

On October 21, 2008, the court issued an order denying Bourke's motion seeking a jury instruction on the FCPA affirmative defense of lawfulness under written law. Bourke argued that the alleged payments were legal under the written law of Azerbaijan, which provided that a "person who has given a bribe shall be free from criminal responsibility" if the bribe was the product of extortion or was subsequently disclosed. Bourke argued that he was extorted and that he disclosed the payment to the President of Azerbaijan.

The court held that for purposes of the FCPA affirmative defense, the payment must be legal under the written law. The court read the Azeri provision to relieve the bribe payer of criminal responsibility in certain circumstances but that the payment itself remained illegal. The court wrote that "[a]n individual may be prosecuted under the FCPA for a payment that violates foreign law even if the individual is relieved of criminal responsibility for his actions by a provision of foreign law." The court explained that the payment did not become lawful despite the payer being relieved of criminal liability.

The court also appears to have rejected an argument that economic extortion could be a defense to the statute. Instead, it stated that it would agree to give the jury an instruction on extortion only if the defendant laid a sufficient evidentiary foundation of "true extortion." In doing so, the district court distinguished between "true extortion" involving threats of injury, death or destruction versus mere demands made in exchange for business from which the defendant could have "walked away."

Bourke filed a motion for reconsideration, which was denied by the court on December 15, 2008. The court found, first, that Bourke was attempting to raise a proposed instruction not found in his initial motion. Moreover, the court concluded that it need not rule on Bourke's proposed instruction, which provided the circumstances under which a "mere offer" would not be illegal under Azeri law, because he had not been charged with making a "mere offer." The court also refused to consider Bourke's argument that the FCPA has a broader intent element than the "direct intent" required under Azeri law.

Bourke argued that, by being a whistleblower, he interfered in the strategic relationship between the United States and Azerbaijan and, consequently, was the target of a vindictive prosecution. At a hearing on November 17, 2008, Bourke thus requested that the court review internal prosecution documents prepared prior to his charge. Following a motion by Bourke to compel discovery in connection with these allegations, the court ordered that the government disclose to Bourke the grand jury testimony of Clayton Lewis and John Pulley. In addition, the government voluntarily disclosed affidavits and plea agreements from Lewis and Pulley.

On July 1, 2008, the court entered an order of nolle prosequi disposing of the case as to Pinkerton. The government stated that based upon its review of the evidence acquired since the filing of the indictment, further prosecution of Pinkerton would not be in the interest of justice.

On July 10, 2009, after a five week trial, a federal jury found Bourke guilty of conspiracy to violate the FCPA and the Travel Act, as well as of making false statements to the FBI. Bourke was acquitted on a charge of money laundering conspiracy. At trial, the government alleged that Bourke was expressly informed about the bribes, but it also advanced a theory that Bourke consciously avoided information about the bribes so he could deny knowledge.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

In support of the theory that Bourke had direct knowledge of the bribes, Hans Bodmer and Thomas Farrell, Bourke's co-conspirators, testified against him, saying he asked them whether Kozeny was offering enough in bribes.

In support of the theory that Bourke consciously avoided information and was willfully blind, the government introduced a recorded conversation between Bourke, another investor, and their respective attorneys where Bourke asked his attorney what he should do if he became aware that Kozeny was bribing officials. The government also pointed to Bourke's knowledge of the involvement of government officials in Azerbaijan, a Fortune article referring to Kozeny as the "Pirate of Prague" with respect to a similar scheme, and his dismissal of warnings about corruption in Azerbaijan. The government introduced, over Bourke's objection, background evidence of the prevalence of corruption in Azerbaijan. In denying Bourke's motion to preclude this evidence, the court found the evidence made it probable that Bourke was aware Azeri officials were being bribed and was thus relevant and admissible. The court instructed the jury that "knowledge may be established if a person is aware of a high probability of its existence and consciously and intentionally avoided confirming that fact."

On November 12, 2009, the court sentenced Bourke to one year and one day in prison, followed by three years of supervised release. He also received a fine of $1,000,000 and a special assessment of $200. The court released Bourke on bail pending his appeal to the Second Circuit. Bourke based his appeal primarily on his arguments that 1) the conscious avoidance charge lacked a factual predicate; and 2) the government should not have been allowed to proceed on both an actual knowledge theory and a conscious avoidance theory. On December 14, 2011, the Second Circuit affirmed the jury verdict against Bourke, finding that, while the government's primary theory at trial was that he had actual knowledge of the bribery scheme, there was ample evidence to support a conviction even based on the alternate theory of conscious avoidance. The Second Circuit also held that the district court correctly permitted the government to proceed on both actual knowledge and conscious avoidance theories. Bourke petitioned for a writ of certiorari with the Supreme Court on October 25, 2012. His petition was denied on April 15, 2013.

Meanwhile, on March 9, 2011 Bourke moved for a new trial based on newly discovered evidence, claiming that statements made by the prosecution at oral argument in the Second Circuit demonstrated that the prosecution knew that Bodmer lied at Bourke's original trial. On December 15, 2011, the trial court denied Bourke's motion for a new trial, rejecting Bourke's contention that the government knowingly permitted the introduction of false testimony. On December 17, 2011, Bourke filed an appeal with the Second Circuit from the trial court's order denying his motion for a new trial based on newly discovered evidence. On November 28, 2012, the Second Circuit denied Bourke's request for a new trial. On May 7, 2013, the Second Circuit denied Bourke's request to rehear the appeal.

In light of the Supreme Court's denial of his petition for certiorari, the trial court ordered Bourke to report to prison by May 10, 2013. The federal bureau of prisons shows Bourke's release date as March 22, 2014.

Related Case. U.S. v. Hans Bodmer (S.D.N.Y 2003)

Hans Bodmer is a Swiss citizen and was the lawyer who acted on behalf of the Investment Consortium. Bodmer was indicted by a federal grand jury on August 5, 2003 in the Southern District of New York for one count of conspiracy to violate the FCPA and one count of conspiracy to launder money. The indictment sought $150 million in restitution. In January 2004, Bodmer consented to his extradition to the United States from South Korea. The District Court set Bodmer's bail at $1.5 million and Bodmer filed a motion to dismiss the indictment. On July 23, 2004, the District Court granted Bodmer's motion to dismiss the count charging him with conspiring to violate the FCPA. His only charge for conspiring to launder money was upheld. The District Court held that prior to the 1998 amendments to the FCPA, foreign nationals who served as agents of domestic concerns and who were not residents of the United States, could not be criminally prosecuted under the FCPA because they were outside the jurisdiction of the United States. In a lengthy opinion analyzing both the legislative history of the FCPA as well as relevant judicial interpretation, the District Court found that the phrase "otherwise subject to the jurisdiction of the United States" found in the pre-1998 FCPA was not so broad as to include foreign nationals acting merely as agents of domestic concerns. In early October 2004, Bodmer withdrew his previously entered plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty to conspiracy to launder money. On May 19, 2009, the District Court accepted Bodmer's guilty plea. Shortly thereafter, Bodmer testified against Bourke. In March 2014, Bodmer was sentenced to time served and ordered to pay a $500,000 fine for his role in the scheme. Bodmer was also ordered to forfeit $131,906.

Related Cases. U.S. v. Omega Advisors, Inc., U.S. v. Clayton Lewis, and U.S. v. Thomas Farrell

Hedge fund Omega had invested in the privatization program in Azerbaijan. Omega has acknowledged that one of its employees, Clayton Lewis, who pleaded guilty in 2004, learned prior to the investment that Kozeny had entered into arrangements with Azeri government officials that gave those officials a financial interest in the privatization of certain industries. In April 2013, Lewis was sentenced to time served. In June 2007, Omega entered a non-prosecution agreement that provides that Omega will not be prosecuted for any crimes (except for criminal tax violations). Omega will civilly forfeit $500,000 and will continue to cooperate with the government. In January 2009, Omega settled a fraud suit against Kozeny. Thomas Farrell, who directed one of Kozeny's companies in the scheme, pleaded guilty to FCPA and conspiracy charges in 2003. In June 2009, Farrell testified against Bourke, and in April 2013, Farrell was sentenced to time served.

38. *United States v. DPC (Tianjin) Co. Ltd. (C.D. Cal. 2005)*¹⁷²

Nature of the Business. Provision of medical products and hospital services by DPC Co. Ltd., formerly Tianjin Depu Biotechnological and Medical Products Inc. (“Tianjin”), a Chinese subsidiary of Diagnostics Products Corporation (“DPC”). DPC, a U.S. corporation, is a worldwide provider of immunodiagnostic systems and reagents.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $1.6 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unspecified.
3. Intermediary. Unknown.
4. The foreign official. Foreign official’s physicians and laboratory workers at government-owned hospitals.

Influence to be Obtained. Payments were made, disguised as commissions, by senior employees of Tianjin in exchange for agreements that hospitals would retain Tianjin’s products and services.

Enforcement. In a company filing dated August 2005, DPC disclosed that it had agreed to pay approximately $4.8 million as part of a settlement with the SEC and DOJ, consisting of $2.0 million in fines and approximately $2.8 million in disgorgement of profits and interest. In addition, Tianjin pled guilty to violations of the FCPA, was issued a cease-and-desist order, and agreed to take certain actions, including engaging an independent monitor for its FCPA activities in China, to avert future violations.

37. United States v. Yaw Osei Amoako (D.N.J. 2005)¹⁷³

Nature of the Business. Procurement of business and individual telecommunication services contracts by Yaw Osei Amoako (“Amoako”), the former regional director for Africa for ITXC Corp. (“ITXC”), a U.S.-based provider of global telecommunications services. In 2004, ITXC merged with Teleglobe International Holdings, Ltd. (“Teleglobe”), a U.S.-based provider of international voice, data, Internet, and mobile roaming services.

Business Location. Nigeria, Rwanda, Senegal.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $267,468.95.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $11,509,733.
3. Intermediary. none specified.
4. The foreign official. Senior officials of government-owned telephone companies.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the criminal and SEC complaints in this action and the SEC complaint in separate actions against his co-conspirators, Amoako helped arranged several payments to officials at government-owned telephone companies, Nitel, Rwandatel, and Sonatel. In exchange for the payments, Amoako sought the award of lucrative telephone contracts to provide individual and business telecommunication services in those countries.

Enforcement. After identifying the potential improper payments, Teleglobe notified the SEC and DOJ and conducted its own internal investigation. After conducting their own investigations, the SEC and DOJ in June 2005 brought separate cases against Amoako for violations of the FCPA. On September 6, 2006, the DOJ reported that Amoako had pled guilty to one count of conspiring to violate the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA. On August 1, 2007 Amoako was sentenced to 18 months imprisonment, including 6 months in a halfway house, 2 years of supervised release with special conditions, a fine of $7,500 and a special assessment of $100. On April 18, 2008, Amoako entered into a settlement agreement with the SEC as well.

36. United States v. Monsanto Co.¹⁷⁴

Nature of the Business. Cultivation of genetically modified crops in Indonesia by Monsanto Co. (“Monsanto”), a U.S. corporation.

Business Location. Indonesia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $50,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unknown.
3. Intermediary. An Indonesian consultant.
4. The foreign official. A local Indonesian government official.

Influence to be Obtained. In November 2002, after a routine internal audit, Monsanto notified the SEC and DOJ of various financial irregularities at its Indonesian affiliate companies. The inquiry revealed that a Monsanto officer authorized the payment of a $50,000 bribe to a local Indonesian government official to induce the official to repeal a government decree. The decree required an environmental impact assessment study prior to cultivation of certain agricultural products, and would have prevented Monsanto from cultivating certain of its genetically modified crops in Indonesia. Interestingly, the bribe itself was unrelated to any specific contract sought by Monsanto, or that Monsanto would be unable to pass an environmental impact study. It appears, rather, that the purpose of the bribe was to avoid the regulatory and administrative burden associated with undertaking the environmental study.

Enforcement. On January 6, 2005, Monsanto entered into a non-prosecution agreement with DOJ and a settlement agreement with the SEC. As part of the settlement, Monsanto agreed to, among other things, pay a fine of $1.5 million and to appoint independent consultants to review its business practices over a three-year period, when the criminal charges against it would be dropped permanently by DOJ. Several Monsanto employees in Indonesia were fired.

Upon receipt and review of a motion to dismiss filed by the DOJ, on March 5, 2008, the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia entered an agreed order dismissing the proceeding against Monsanto with prejudice. The action by the court ends the Deferred Prosecution Agreement. The independent consultants have submitted the final report to the government for review.

35. United States v. InVision Technologies, Inc.¹⁷⁵

Nature of the Business. Sales of explosives detection products by InVision Technologies, Inc. (“InVision”), a U.S. corporation.

Business Location. Thailand, China, and the Philippines.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $203,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $41,300,000.
3. Intermediary. Third party distributors of InVision’s products and InVision’s own sales agents.
4. The foreign official. Unknown.

Influence to be Obtained. Between 1996 and 2002, InVision’s sales agents and distributors made payments to foreign officials to induce them to purchase InVision’s baggage screening machines to be used at airports in the Philippines, China, and Thailand. The DOJ found that there was a “high probability” that senior employees at InVision were aware of the payments, but took no action to determine their legality.

Enforcement. InVision disclosed that it was the subject of DOJ and SEC investigations in August 2004. In December 2004, DOJ and InVision entered into a non-prosecution agreement whereby InVision agreed to certain conditions in exchange for a promise from the government that InVision will not be prosecuted for these violations. If InVision fails to comply with any of the terms of the agreement for a period of two years, the government will be free to prosecute the company for these violations. Among other things, InVision agreed to pay a fine of $800,000, accept responsibility for the misconduct, continue to cooperate with DOJ, and adopt an FCPA compliance program as well as a set of internal controls designed to prevent future violations. Without admitting or denying the claims brought against it by the SEC, on February 14, 2005, InVision settled those claims and agreed to turn over $589,000 of ill-gotten profits, and pay a fine of $500,000. This case represents one of the few FCPA inquiries that involve distributors, rather than traditional FCPA investigations that focus on sales representatives or consultants to the company. Sales representatives and consultants are typically considered intermediaries of the company that is the subject of an investigation and the company is therefore deemed to be fully liable for their actions. In contrast, distributors purchase goods from manufacturers, take possession and title, and then offer the product for re-sale in their own name and at their own price. Accordingly, companies often do not view distributors as agents of the company for purposes of regulatory compliance.

34. United States v. Micrus Corp.¹⁷⁶

Nature of the Business. Development and sale of medical devices known as embolic coils by the Micrus Corporation (“Micrus”), a privately-held U.S. company.

Business Location. France, Turkey, Spain, and Germany.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. More than $105,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unknown.
3. Intermediary. None.
4. The foreign official. Physicians at state-run hospitals.

Influence to be Obtained. After conducting investigations, Micrus and DOJ determined that certain officers, employees, agents and salespeople paid more than $105,000 disguised in Micrus’s books as stock options, honorariums, and commissions, to doctors at state-run hospitals in France, Turkey, Spain and Germany. In exchange for these payments, the hospitals purchased Micrus’s products. An additional $250,000 was comprised of payments for which Micrus did not obtain the necessary prior administrative or legal approval as required under the laws of the relevant foreign jurisdiction.

Enforcement. DOJ and Micrus entered into a non-prosecution agreement on March 2, 2005 whereby Micrus agrees to certain conditions in exchange for a promise from the government that Micrus will not be prosecuted for these violations. If Micrus fails to comply with any of the terms of the agreement for a period of two years, the government will be free to prosecute Micrus for these violations. Among other things, Micrus agreed to pay a fine of $450,000, accept responsibility for the misconduct, continue to cooperate with DOJ, adopt an FCPA compliance program as well as a set of internal controls designed to prevent future violations, and retain an independent compliance expert for a period of three years.

According to an August 2008 SEC filing, the monitor filed his final report with the DOJ in May 2008, and in July 2008, the DOJ confirmed that the monitorship had concluded. The company has reaffirmed its commitment to take all reasonable steps to ensure that it remains in compliance with the FCPA.

33. United States v. Titan Corp. (S.D. Cal. 2005)¹⁷⁷

Nature of the Business. Provision of wireless telecommunications projects in Benin by subsidiaries of Titan Corporation (“Titan”), a U.S. company, which is a leading military and intelligence contractor with $2 billion in annual sales derived primarily from contracts with U.S. military, intelligence and homeland security agencies. Titan’s subsidiaries include Titan Wireless, Inc., Titan Africa, Inc., and Titan Africa, S.A.

Business Location. Benin.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. More than $3.5 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $98 million.
3. Intermediary. The business advisor of the President of Benin.
4. The foreign official. President of Benin.

Influence to be Obtained. At the direction of at least one former senior Titan official based in the United States, Titan made payments to the re-election campaign of Benin’s incumbent president to assist his re-election and thereby enable the company to develop a telecommunications project in Benin. The SEC alleged that Titan’s internal controls were virtually nonexistent, and that Titan had falsified documents filed with the United States government and underreported commission payments in its business dealings in France, Japan, Nepal, Bangladesh, and Sri Lanka.

Enforcement. Titan pleaded guilty on March 1, 2005 to three felony counts of violating the FCPA and agreed to pay a criminal fine of $13 million, along with a civil penalty and disgorgement to the SEC in the amount of approximately $15.5 million. Titan also agreed to retain an independent consultant to review and further implement its FCPA compliance procedures.

32. United States v. Robert E. Thompson and James C. Reilly (N.D. Al. 2005)¹⁷⁸

Nature of the Business. Provision of hospital staffing and management services by HealthSouth, a U.S. corporation. Robert Thompson is the former president and COO of HealthSouth Corporation's In-Patient Division. James Reilly is the former HealthSouth Group's vice president of legal services.

Business Location. Saudi Arabia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $2.5 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $50 million.
3. Intermediary. HealthSouth affiliate in Australia.
4. The foreign official. The Director General of a Saudi Arabian foundation.

Influence to be Obtained. This action related to HealthSouth's (successful) efforts to secure a contract for staffing and management services for a 450-bed hospital in Saudi Arabia. The DOJ alleged that the Director General of a Saudi Arabian foundation responsible for the hospital solicited a $1 million "finder's fee" from HealthSouth, and that HealthSouth, against the advice of counsel, agreed to pay the Director General $500,000 per year for five years. The payments were made via a consulting contract between the Director General and an Australian HealthSouth affiliate.

Enforcement. The DOJ first filed non-FCPA charges against two other HealthSouth employees in connection with these allegations: former Vice President Vincent Nico and former Executive Vice President Thomas Carman. Nico pled guilty to wire fraud on April 22, 2004, and agreed to forfeit $1,005,602 of ill-gotten gains relating to this scheme. On April 27, 2004, Carman admitted to making a false statement to the FBI. Both then began to cooperate with the DOJ's investigation.

Messrs. Thompson and Reilly were indicted under the Travel Act and the books and records provisions of the FCPA on July 1, 2004. After trial, the jury found both Thompson and Reilly not guilty on May 20, 2005.

31. *United States v. ABB Vetco Gray, Inc. and ABB Vetco Gray U.K. Ltd. (S.D. Tex. 2004)*¹⁷⁹

Nature of the Business. Provision of power and automation technologies, including oil and gas projects by ABB, Ltd. (“ABB”), a Swiss corporation, which has a number of direct and indirect subsidiaries that do business in the United States and in 100 foreign countries. Among its subsidiaries is ABB Vetco Gray, Inc., a Texas corporation, and ABB Vetco Gray U.K., Ltd., a British corporation (the “Subsidiaries”).

Business Location. Nigeria, Angola, and Kazakhstan.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Over $1.1 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. At least $5,501,157 in profits.
3. Intermediary. See below.
4. The foreign official. See below.

Influence to be Obtained. To assist the Subsidiaries in obtaining and retaining business in Nigeria, Angola, and Kazakhstan. From 1998 through 2003, the Subsidiaries did business in Nigeria, Angola, and Kazakhstan, and offered and made illicit payments totaling over $1.1 million to government officials in those countries. In Nigeria, the Subsidiaries made improper payments (directly and through an intermediary) to officials of the National Petroleum Investment Management Service, the state-owned agency that oversees investment in petroleum, to secure oil and gas projects in Nigeria. In Angola, the Subsidiaries made improper payments in the form of three training trips to Sonangol (state-owned oil company) engineers to secure contracts. Finally, in Kazakhstan, one of the Subsidiaries made payments to companies owned by a former employee of the subsidiary who was a government official to secure Kazakhstan government business for that subsidiary.

Enforcement. The Subsidiaries pleaded guilty to two felony counts of violating the FCPA and agreed to pay a $10.5 million fine. In the SEC proceeding, in July 2004, without admitting or denying the allegations in the SEC’s complaint, ABB agreed to pay a $5.9 million in disgorgement and prejudgment interest, $10.5 million civil penalty (which was deemed to be satisfied by the SEC as a result of two of the Subsidiaries’ payments of criminal fines totaling the same amount in a parallel DOJ proceeding), and to retain an outside FCPA compliance consultant.

United States v. J. Bryan Williams \(S.D.N.Y. 2003\)¹⁸¹
United States v. The Mercator Corp. \(S.D.N.Y. 2010\)¹⁸²

Nature of the Business. Exploration and production of vast reserves of crude oil by Exxon-Mobil located in the Republic of Kazakhstan. Giffen, a merchant banker, was chairman of Mercator, a New York-based merchant bank that represented Kazakhstan in connection with the sale of interests in Kazakh oil fields and pipelines. Williams, an attorney in Virginia, was at the time a former executive at Mobil Oil Corporation (now Exxon-Mobil) and a personal friend of Giffen. Williams was responsible for Mobil's trading operations in the former Soviet Union, including Kazakhstan, and he negotiated a transaction by which Mobil would acquire an interest in the Tengiz oil field and in return received a $2 million kickback from Giffen.

Business Location. Kazakhstan.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $78 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Millions of dollars.
3. Intermediary. Payments made through the accounts of foreign "shell" organizations, masked as fees to Giffen's bank, which in turn were paid to Kazakh government officials.
4. The foreign official. Senior Kazakh government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. Assist Exxon-Mobil in securing rights to oil fields in Kazakhstan.

Enforcement. After a lengthy investigation, Giffen was indicted on March 28, 2003 for violating the FCPA. In addition, on March 15, 2004, federal prosecutors in New York charged Giffen with filing false tax returns by omitting $2 million in income related to his relationship with Mercator.

On September 18, 2003, Williams pled guilty to conspiracy and tax evasion and was sentenced to 46 months in prison. Williams was also ordered to pay a $25,000 fine, restitution in the amount of $3,512,000, and taxes on the $2 million kickback he received.

Giffen challenged subpoenas issued by the United States seeking certain foreign bank records in the possession of Giffen's attorneys based upon the attorney work product doctrine. The United States District Court rejected the claim of privilege and ordered that the records be produced. Giffen appealed, and, on January 28, 2003, the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit affirmed the lower court's decision. In November 2004, the District Court granted Giffen's request to access CIA documents to determine whether he had a viable public authority defense based on his claim that he was essentially a CIA asset when he made the payments in question. In October 2005, the District Court denied the government's motion in limine to preclude Giffen from advancing a public authority defense and using classified documents to support that defense. The government filed an interlocutory appeal of this denial, and, in December 2006, the Second Circuit refused to hear the appeal on the ground that it was prematurely filed although it severely criticized in dicta the District Court's interpretation of the public authority defense. Giffen's trial had been scheduled for February 2007, but remained mired in discovery-related issues.

On August 6, 2010, the government filed a superseding information, dropping all charges against Giffen except for one count of filing a false tax return based on Giffen's failure to disclose an interest in certain Swiss bank accounts. Giffen pleaded guilty to the tax-related misdemeanor charge pursuant to an agreement with the DOJ and was ordered to pay a penalty of $25. Under the plea agreement, Giffen relinquished any claims to funds in or taken from certain Swiss bank accounts, including the one funding charitable projects in Kazakhstan and nine other accounts in the names of various corporate entities.

Separately, on May 3, 2007, the government filed a civil forfeiture action against approximately $84 million, plus interest, on deposit in a Swiss bank account belonging to the government of Kazakhstan, alleging that the money in the account included the approximately $51.7 million in proceeds of the FCPA violations and wire frauds charged against Giffen.¹⁸³ On May 31, 2009 the Court granted the U.S. government's application for a Stipulation and Order, which set forth its agreement with Kazakhstan to use the money to fund three programs to benefit Kazakhstan: one for programs to benefit poor children; the second to improve public financial management; and the third to implement a comprehensive strategy for transparency in the oil, gas, and mining industries there.

Related Investigation. There are press reports that in or around September 2003, the DOJ subpoenaed ChevronTexaco Corporation, BP Amoco, and Exxon Mobil in connection with its investigation of bribery schemes in oil deals in Kazakhstan.

Related Case. *U.S. v. The Mercator Corporation*¹⁸⁴

The Mercator Corporation ("Mercator"), a merchant bank chaired by James Giffen, is headquartered and incorporated in New York. On August 6, 2010, Mercator pleaded guilty to violating the anti-bribery provision of the FCPA. Mercator entered into an agreement with the Kazakh Ministry of Oil and Gas Industries to assist the Ministry in developing a strategy for foreign investment in the oil and gas sector and coordinating the negotiation of numerous oil and gas transactions with foreign partners. Under the agreement, Mercator stood to receive "success fees" that would be paid only if the transactions successfully closed. Between 1995 and 2000, Kazakhstan paid Mercator approximately $67 million in success fees for its work. Out of the success fees, James Giffen, on behalf of Mercator, directly and through intermediaries made unlawful payments to three senior officials of the Kazakh Government. The information notes specifically that two snowmobiles were given to a Kazakh official and it broadly alleges improper payments and luxury gifts to the three Kazakh officials. The unlawful payments ensured that Mercator and Giffen obtained and retained business with Kazakhstan, and they remained in a position from which they could divert large sums from oil transactions into accounts for the benefit of senior Kazakh officials and Giffen personally. Because senior Kazakh officials had the authority to hire Mercator and to pay Mercator substantial success fees if the transactions closed, Mercator was dependent upon the goodwill of these officials to maintain its position as a consultant to the Kazakh government. The scheme defrauded the Kazakh government of funds from oil transactions to which it was entitled.

On November 19, 2010, the court imposed a criminal fine of $32,000 on Mercator and a $400 special assessment. Through a plea agreement, Mercator also relinquished any claims to funds in or taken from certain Swiss bank accounts, including the one funding charitable projects in Kazakhstan and nine other accounts in the names of various corporate entities.

29. United States v. Richard G. Pitchford (D.D.C. 2002)¹⁸⁵

Nature of the Business. Former vice-president of a special fund created by U.S. Congress for the development of the private sector in Central Asia received illegal kickbacks in several different schemes. One scheme provided Pitchford a payment for assisting a British company to acquire a contract to do business in Turkmenistan. In exchange for cash, Pitchford provided a British government official confidential bid information on a contract in Turkmenistan that enabled the British company to underbid its competitors. In another scheme, Pitchford and a co-conspirator, Patrick Dickey, at the Central Asia American Enterprise Fund (“Enterprise Fund”) arranged for the investment by the Enterprise Fund in clothing companies in Turkmenistan. Pitchford and his co-conspirator then arranged for a Pakistani individual to purchase goods from those companies at an inflated price. The excess funds were transferred back to Pitchford and his co-conspirator.

Business Location. Turkmenistan.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $400,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $6 million.
3. Intermediary. A Pakistani citizen (in two schemes).
4. The foreign official. A British government official (in one scheme).

27. United States v. Gautam Sengupta \(D.D.C. 2002\)¹⁸⁷
United States v. Ramendra Basu \(D.D.C. 2002\)¹⁸⁸

Nature of the Business. Securing World Bank financing for projects in Africa.

Business Location. Kenya.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $127,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Three contracts for World Bank development projects.
3. Intermediary. Swedish consultant.
4. The foreign official. Kenyan government official.

Influence to be Obtained. Gautam Sengupta and Ramendra Basu (the “Defendants”) worked at the World Bank as task managers. Their role was to select consultants who would conduct feasibility studies on proposed World Bank projects. A World Bank trust fund manager introduced the idea that all parties could benefit by awarding contracts to the Swedish consultant. The Defendants consequently caused three contracts to be awarded to the consultant, including one for an urban transport program in Kenya. A Kenyan government official heading this World Bank project contacted the Defendants requesting a bribe. Under the Defendant’s direction, the money was transferred to an account in Kenya for the benefit of the official from an account controlled by the Swedish consultant.

Enforcement. In 2002, the Defendants pleaded guilty to a two-count information including conspiracy to commit wire fraud and a violation of the FCPA. Basu and Sengupta agreed to restitution in the amount of $127,000. In May 2006, Basu filed a motion to withdraw the plea of guilty. The motion was denied on January 23, 2008, on the grounds that the plea was entered voluntarily, and that Basu’s claim of innocence lacked evidentiary support. On April 25, 2008, Basu was sentenced to 15 months in prison, two years supervised release, and 50 hours of community service. In February 2006, Sengupta was sentenced to 2 months imprisonment and a fine of $6,000.

26. United States v. David Kay and Douglas Murphy (S.D. Tex. 2002)¹⁸⁹

Nature of the Business. American Rice, Inc. (“ARI”) has a Haitian subsidiary, Rice Corporation of Haiti (“RCH”), engaged in the import of rice to Haiti. ARI is a Texas corporation and a U.S. issuer. Douglas A. Murphy is the former president of American Rice, and David Kay is the former vice president. Lawrence H. Theriot is a former consultant to American Rice.

Business Location. Haiti.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. The alleged bribes ranged from $25,000 to $72,000 and totaled more than $528,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. The alleged bribes saved the company more than $1.5 million dollars in Haitian import tax.
3. Intermediary. None.
4. The foreign official. Haitian customs and tax officials.

Influence to be Obtained. False shipping documents reducing the amount of customs duties and sales taxes due to Haitian authorities.

Enforcement. As vice president of marketing for ARI, David Kay was responsible for supervising sales and marketing in Haiti. Kay was charged with twelve counts of violating the FCPA. Douglas Murphy, as president of ARI, was also charged with twelve counts of violating the FCPA. In May of 2002, U.S. District Judge David Hittner dismissed the indictments against Murphy and Kay.

On February 11, 2004, the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit overturned the district court decision and ruled that: 1) the FCPA is sufficiently broad to include violations of the FCPA designed to obtain a tax benefit; and 2) since the business nexus¹⁹⁰ element of the FCPA does not go to the core of criminality under the statute, the fact that the indictment only tracks the language of the statute does not render it facially insufficient.

However, since the indictment in the instant matter only paraphrased the language in the statute with regard to the element of intent, the court suggested that on remand, the defendants may wish to submit a motion to the district court seeking to compel the government to allege more specific details demonstrating: 1) what business was sought to be obtained or retained; and 2) how the intended quid pro quo was meant to assist in obtaining or retaining such business. Upon such a motion, the district court would then have to determine: 1) whether merely quoting or paraphrasing the statute as to that element is sufficient; or 2) whether the government must allege such additional facts.

¹⁹⁰ As defined by the Court, the “business nexus” element of the FCPA refers to exactly how a payment of a bribe would assist (or is meant to assist) in obtaining or retaining business.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

On July 15, 2004, the Government filed a superseding indictment which, in addition to adding charges of conspiracy and obstruction of justice, amended the original indictment to include the following: “The defendants believed that if American Rice Inc. and Rice Corporation of Haiti were required to pay the full amount of duties and taxes that should have been paid on the imported rice they would not have been able to sell the rice at a competitive price, would have lost sales to competitors and would not have realized an operating profit, thus putting at risk American Rice Inc.’s and Rice Corporation of Haiti’s business operations in Haiti.”

A jury trial was held in September/October 2004 and the jury found Kay and Murphy guilty on all counts. Both defendants subsequently filed motions for new trials, which were denied. On June 19, 2005, Kay was sentenced to 37 months incarceration, to be followed by a two-year term of supervised release. Kay must also pay a fine of $1,300. Murphy was sentenced to 63 months incarceration and ordered to pay $1,400 in penalties. Both defendants appealed their convictions on several grounds, and in October 2007, the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit upheld the convictions.

Defendants argued on appeal that the FCPA was void for vagueness due to its alleged ambiguity in not expressly stating that payments to lower taxes are related to “obtaining or retaining business.” The Fifth Circuit disagreed, holding that “[a]ll [elements of the FCPA] are phrased in terms that are reasonably clear so as to allow the common interpreter to understand their meaning. Defendants have, rather than showing vagueness, raised a technical interpretive question as to the exact meaning of ‘obtaining or retaining’ business. Whether ‘obtaining or retaining’ business covers the general activities that an entity undertakes to ensure continued success of a business or Defendants’ more limited definition of contractual business is an ambiguity but not one that rises to the level of vagueness and unfair notice.”

The court further noted that although the company did not make the corrupt payments to guarantee the success of one particular contract, “ARI ensured, through bribery, that it could continue to sell its rice without having to pay the full tax and customs duties demanded of it. Trial testimony indicates that ARI believed these payments were necessary to compete with other companies that paid lower or no taxes on similar imports – in other words, to retain business in Haiti, the company took measures to keep up with competitors. The fact that other companies were guilty of similar bribery during the 1990’s does not excuse ARI’s actions; multiple violations of a law do not make those violations legal or create vagueness in the law.”

Defendants also argued that the government had failed to satisfy the interstate commerce element of the FCPA as the cash bribes occurred in Haiti, using local bank accounts, and the statute requires the use of interstate commerce in the furtherance of the bribe itself. The Fifth Circuit disagreed and read the statute more broadly as including activities that support the bribe, in this case, the sending of false shipping documents through interstate commerce.

Defendants also argued that the district court’s jury instructions on the intent element of the statute were insufficient. The Fifth Circuit held that the intent element of the FCPA did not require a showing that the defendants specifically knew that they were violating the FCPA, but only that the defendants “acted corruptly, with an ‘unlawful end or result,’ and committed ‘intentional’ and ‘knowing’ acts with a bad motive.” Defendants filed a petition with the Fifth Circuit for Rehearing en Banc on this issue and the court denied the petition on January 8, 2008, holding that the district court’s instructions – which, “as a whole and considered in the context of a trial required a finding that Defendants knew their conduct was unlawful” – were satisfactory.

On April 9, 2008, Kay and Murphy filed a Writ of Certiorari to the U.S. Supreme Court which was denied on October 6, 2008.

Related Cases. SEC v. Douglas A. Murphy, David G. Kay and Lawrence H. Theriot.

On July 30, 2002, the SEC, with assistance from the DOJ, filed a civil injunctive action in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Texas against Murphy, Kay and Theriot. The SEC suit makes essentially the same allegations as the Justice Department lawsuit. On December 30, 2005, the court entered a final judgment against Theriot ordering him to pay the full $11,000 civil penalty the SEC sought. The actions against Kay and Murphy, in which the SEC asks that each pay $187,000 in civil penalties, are still pending.

12. United States v. Young & Rubicam, Inc., Arthur R. Klein, Thomas Spangenberg, Arnold Foote, Jr., Eric Anthony Abrahams, Steven M. McKenna (D. Conn. 1990)²¹¹

3. Other crimes charged. RICO violations and perjury. The various activities and payments made by Y&R and the others in the conspiracy constituted a total of 33 alleged racketeering acts.

Issues Decided.

1. A company is liable for an FCPA violation even if the bribe money is never actually paid to the foreign official as intended, but is instead kept by the intermediaries.
2. Although a violation of the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA was not at the time a predicate act under RICO, 18 U.S.C. § 1961 et seq., a violation of the bribery provisions of the FCPA can be used to allege a violation of the Travel Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1952, which is a predicate act under RICO.

B. Foreign Bribery Criminal Prosecution under the FCPA

3. Even a single bribe of a foreign official can satisfy the RICO requirement of a “pattern of racketeering activity” if the defendant commits a number of acts (e.g., travel, use of mails, installment payments) in furtherance of the FCPA violation.
4. To have standing to bring a private cause of action under RICO, a plaintiff must have been a target of defendant’s FCPA violation. Targets include the foreign government whose officials were bribed and commercial rivals directly injured by the bribery.

See Parallel Litigation Digest, Commercial Case Number H-C6.

Nature of the Business. Archer Daniels Midland Company (“ADM”), a Delaware corporation headquartered in Illinois, manufactures, processes, and sells agricultural commodities.

Business Location. Ukraine.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $22 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $100 million.
3. Intermediary. Insurance company, third party vendor.
4. The foreign official. Ukrainian government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the SEC’s Complaint, ADM’s subsidiaries in the Ukraine engaged in multiple fraudulent schemes to pay Ukrainian officials to release VAT refunds that were being delayed or refused by the Ukrainian government. ACTI Ukraine and ACTI Hamburg entered into fraudulent agreements with a shipping company and an insurance company to raise the funds and funnel the payments, and misrepresented the bribes as charitable donations or “depreciations” required by the Ukrainian government.

Enforcement. On December 20, 2013, the SEC filed a complaint against ADM, alleging violations of the books and records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. ADM admitted the allegations and agreed to the entry of a final judgment permanently enjoining the company from violating the FCPA, and agreed to pay $36,467,366 in disgorgement and prejudgment interest.

In a parallel criminal action, ADM entered into a non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ and its Ukrainian subsidiary pleaded guilty to one count of conspiring to violate the FCPA. ADM and its subsidiary paid a total of approximately $17.8 million in criminal penalties.

123. SEC v. Weatherford International Ltd. (S.D. Tex. 2013)²³⁷

Nature of the Business. Weatherford International Ltd, a Switzerland corporation, provides equipment and services to the oil industry in over 100 countries. During the relevant period, Weatherford was incorporated in Bermuda and headquartered in Texas. It maintains a class of securities trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Business Location. Angola, Algeria, Albania, Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $14.2 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Profits of approximately $59.3 million.
3. Intermediary. Subsidiary companies; third-party distributors; third-party agents; joint ventures.
4. The foreign official. Government officials in Angola; employees at a state-owned oil company in an unnamed country in the Middle East; Iraqi Ministry of Oil; employees at Sonatrach, an Algerian state-owned oil company; employees at Albania's National Petroleum Agency; Albanian tax director.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the SEC's complaint, between 2002 and 2011, Weatherford and its subsidiaries made improper payments to government officials in Angola, Algeria, Albania, and Iraq to win lucrative oil services contracts and to gain significant market share.

In Angola, between 2006 and 2007, Weatherford Oil Tool Middle East Limited ("WOTME"), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Weatherford, retained a Swiss freight-forwarding and logistics services company (the "Swiss agent") to pay bribes to an Angolan official. WOTME paid these bribes for the approval of an oil services contract renewal. Although the contract was with a privately-owned corporation, Angolan law requires Sonangol, the Angolan state-owned oil company, to approve the award or renewal of any oil services contract in Angola. To facilitate these bribes, WOTME entered into a consultancy agreement with the Swiss agent, pursuant to which WOTME produced sham work orders and the Swiss agent generated sham invoices. Weatherford also paid the Angolan official's travel expenses, which included a week-long vacation to Italy and Portugal.

Also in Angola, in 2004, another subsidiary of Weatherford was told that if they formed a joint venture with Sonangol chosen companies they would obtain 100 percent of the well screens market in Angola. Shortly thereafter, the subsidiary formed the joint venture with a company controlled by Sonangol officials and a company controlled by a relative of an Angolan minister. As a result of this joint venture, Sonangol officials awarded all well screens contracts to Weatherford.

In the Middle East, between 2005 and 2011, WOTME awarded improper volume discounts to a company that supplied Weatherford products to a state-owned and -controlled national oil company. The volume discounts were used to create a slush fund for bribe payments to decision makers at the national oil company. WOTME recorded the volume discounts on its contra revenue account entitled "Volume ²³⁷ SEC v. Weatherford Int'l Ltd., No. 4:13-cv-03500 (S.D. Tex. 2013).

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

Discount Account,” despite the absence of an official volume discount contractual provision in the contracts between WOTME and the distributor.

In Algeria, Weatherford provided improper travel and entertainment to officials of Sonatrach, an Algerian state-owned company. The travel included trips to the FIFA World Cup soccer tournament, the honeymoon trip for the daughter of a Sonatrach official, and a religious trip by a Sonatrach official. Additionally, when Sonatrach officials visited Houston, Weatherford paid Sonatrach officials cash sums with no apparently legitimate business purpose.

In Albania, from 2001 to 2006, Weatherford’s Italian subsidiary “WEMESPA” made $41,000 in payments to Albanian tax auditors to close out the audit or to speed up the certification process. WEMESPA also provided laptop computers to the Albanian tax director and two members of Albania’s National Petroleum Agency.

In Iraq, WOTME paid illegal kickbacks to the Iraqi government as part of the United Nations Oil for Food Program. In order to conceal the payments, WOTME inflated the price of the contracts before submitting them to the UN for approval. The payments were then recorded as cost of goods sold on the company’s books and records. WOTME also paid improper inland transportation fees to the Iraqi government for the transportation of items that did not actually require delivery.

Enforcement. On November 26, 2013, the SEC filed a complaint against Weatherford, alleging violations of the anti-bribery, books-and-records, and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. Weatherford agreed to pay disgorgement and prejudgment interest of $95,384,267, and a civil penalty of $1.85 million. The disgorgement amount was offset by a $31,646,907 fine Weatherford paid pursuant to a deferred prosecution agreement with the U.S. Attorney’s Office relating to violations of sanctions and export control laws.

Weatherford entered into a separate deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ relating to violations of the FCPA. Under the DOJ agreement, Weatherford agreed to pay a monetary penalty of approximately $87.2 million. Deducted from this amount was a separate $420,000 penalty imposed on Weatherford subsidiary Weatherford Services Ltd. pursuant to a plea agreement.

122. In the Matter of Stryker Corporation (2013)²³⁸

Nature of the Business. Stryker Corporation, a Michigan corporation with its principal offices in Michigan, manufactures and distributes medical devices and products worldwide.

Business Location. Argentina, Greece, Mexico, Poland, Romania.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $2.2 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $7.5 million.
3. Intermediary. Mexican law firm.
4. The foreign official. Employees at Mexican social security agency; directors of public hospitals in Poland and Greece; physicians employed by public hospitals in Romania and Argentina.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the findings in the SEC's order (which Stryker did not admit or deny), between August 2003 and February 2008, Stryker subsidiaries in Argentina, Greece, Mexico, Poland, and Romania made illicit payments to public health care officials, including doctors and health administrators at various state-owned hospitals, universities, and health agencies. According to the order, Stryker routinely mischaracterized the payments on its corporate books and records as legitimate consulting services and contracts, travel expenses, charitable donations, or commissions.

In Argentina, Stryker regularly paid commission or "honoraria" to physicians of state-owned hospitals in exchange for their willingness to promote Stryker products. In Greece, the relevant Stryker subsidiary made a $197,055 donation to a public university to curry favor with an influential professor. In Poland and Romania, Stryker made approximately $960,000 in illicit payments to state health administrators, often in the form of travel and entertainment benefits.

In Mexico, Stryker paid state health officials a total of $76,000 to obtain or maintain the right to sell its products at certain public hospitals. On at least one occasion, the relevant Mexican government agency threatened to withdraw its contracts with the company unless Stryker made a payment to a Mexican official. Stryker made the payments through its Mexican counsel: the Mexican law firm billed Stryker for the bribe amounts, which Stryker recorded as legal services on its books and records, although no legal services had been provided.

Enforcement. On October 24, 2013, the SEC filed a cease-and-desist order under which Stryker agreed to pay disgorgement and prejudgment interest of $9,783,523, as well as a $3,500,000 civil penalty.

121. SEC v. Diebold, Inc. (D.D.C. 2013)²³⁹

Nature of the Business. Diebold, Inc., an Ohio company, is a global provider of automated teller machines and bank security systems.

Business Location. China, Indonesia, Russia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $1.747 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $281 million.
3. Intermediary. Third parties designated by state-owned banks, distributors.
4. The foreign official. Employees and officials of state-owned banks in China and Indonesia (also employees of private banks in Russia).

Influence to be Obtained. According to the SEC's Complaint, Diebold repeatedly provided payments, gifts, and non-business travel for employees of state-owned and -controlled banks in China and Indonesia to secure and retain business with those banks. Diebold attempted to disguise the payments and benefits through various means, including by making payments through third parties designated by the banks and by inaccurately recording leisure trips for bank employees as "training."

Diebold also created and entered into false contracts with a distributor in Russia for services that the distributor was not performing. The distributor, in turn, used the funds to pay bribes to employees of Diebold's privately-owned bank customers in Russia, to obtain and retain contracts with those customers.

Enforcement. On October 22, 2013, Diebold consented to the entry of final judgment enjoining it from committing further FCPA violations. Diebold agreed to pay $22,972,942 in disgorgement and prejudgment interest and to appoint an independent compliance monitor.

In a parallel criminal proceeding, Diebold entered into a deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ, under which it agreed to pay a $25.2 million fine.

120. *In the Matter of Total, S.A. (2013)*²⁴⁰

Nature of the Business. Total, S.A. is a French corporation that explores for and develops oil and gas resources worldwide. Its American Depositary Shares are registered with the SEC and listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Business Location. Iran.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $60 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $150 million.
3. Intermediary. Unnamed third parties designated by the foreign official.
4. The foreign official. Official for a subsidiary of the National Iranian Oil Company and for an engineering company majority-owned and controlled by the Iranian government.

Influence to be Obtained. Beginning in 1995, to secure a contract to develop oil fields in southern Iran, Total met with an Iranian government official who headed a subsidiary of NIOC. In the course of negotiations, Total entered into a purported consulting agreement with an intermediary designated by the Iranian official. As described by the SEC, the consulting agreement included no specific payment terms, but instead stated that the intermediary would provide “economic and marketing research and support” upon a “Consulting Service Request.” The SEC alleges that the agreement was a pretext for bribe payments to the Iranian official made in exchange for his influence over the development contracts.

In 1997, Total began negotiating with NIOC to acquire the rights to develop a gas field in the Persian Gulf. Total then entered into another agreement to assign the consulting agreement to a second intermediary, who was also designated by the Iranian official. Following the assignment, Total was awarded a 40% interest in the development of the gas field and Total made at least 12 payments to the second intermediary between 1997 and 2004.

Enforcement. On May 29, 2013, the SEC filed a cease and desist order against Total for violations of the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. As a result of the order, Total disgorged $153 million in profits netted from the bribery scheme.

In a parallel criminal proceeding, Total entered into a deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ, under which it agreed to pay a $245.2 million penalty and engage an independent compliance monitor.

119. SEC v. Tomas Alberto Clarke Bethancourt, Jose Alejandro Hurtado, Haydee Leticia Pabon, Iuri Rodolfo Bethancourt, and Ernesto Lujan (S.D.N.Y. 2013)²⁴¹

Nature of the Business. U.S. employees of Direct Access Partners LLC (“DAP”), a New York broker-dealer, were charged with paying bribes to a senior government official in Venezuela’s state-owned economic development bank, Banco de Desarrollo Económico y Social de Venezuela (“BANDES”) to obtain business for DAP. The SEC, however, did not bring FCPA charges in its civil action, most likely because the alleged scheme involved broker-dealers rather than issuers.

Tomas Alberto Clarke Bethancourt (“Clarke”) is a U.S. citizen and, beginning in or around 2008, was the Senior Vice President in the Global Markets Group of DAP. Clarke was listed as the account opening salesman for the BANDES account. Jose Alejandro Hurtado, a U.S. citizen, was an employee of DAP. Haydee Leticia Pabon, a resident of Miami, Florida, was the Director for International Sales in Eastern Europe, the Middle East and Russia for a Miami-based distributor of Venezuelan cable television network programs. Iuri Rodolfo Bethancourt, a resident of Panama, is apparently related to co-defendant Clarke. Ernesto Lujan, a U.S. citizen, was the Managing Partner of the Global Markets Group of DAP and ran its Miami office beginning in approximately 2008.

Business Location. Venezuela.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $9 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $66 million.
3. Intermediary. Shell entity.
4. The foreign official. Maria de los Angeles Gonzalez de Hernandez (“Gonzalez”), a senior official at BANDES.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the SEC’s complaint, DAP’s Global Markets Group generated more than $66 million in revenue for DAP from October 2008 to June 2010 from transaction fees on riskless principal trade executions in Venezuelan sovereign or state-sponsored bonds for BANDES. The SEC alleges that the revenue was the result of a multi-faceted kickback scheme orchestrated by the defendants, in which a portion of the revenue was illicitly paid to BANDES official Gonzalez, who authorized the fraudulent trades, and to Clarke, Hurtado, and Pabon. The Complaint also stated that after payments were made to those individuals and other expenses covered, 60 percent of DAP Global’s net profits were shared by Lujan, Clarke, and an unnamed executive. The SEC also alleges that Lujan, Clarke, and Hurtado falsified the size of DAP’s markups to BANDES and Gonzalez, which enabled them to retain a greater share of the fraudulent profits.

According to the SEC, the kickback scheme operated as follows: First, when BANDES wanted to purchase Venezuelan bonds through DAP, Clarke gathered information on market bid-ask spreads for the bonds and requested “offer” prices from one or more third-party dealers. Clarke then provided to BANDES, sometimes through Hurtado, a price on the bonds to BANDES that would include a significant markup for DAP. Second, the DAP Global team arranged for DAP to pay approximately half of this markup revenue to facilitate improper kickbacks to Gonzalez, Hurtado, and others. Third, a portion of the payments DAP made to Pabon, Hurtado, and Bethancourt were remitted to Gonzalez. Some of the kickbacks to Gonzalez were allegedly paid through Cartagena International, a Panama corporation that was purportedly co-owned by Gonzalez.

²⁴¹ SEC v. Clarke, et al., No. 13-cv-3074 (S.D.N.Y. 2013).

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

Enforcement. On May 7, 2013, the SEC filed a complaint against Clark, Hurtado, Pabon, and Bethancourt, which was subsequently amended on June 12, 2013 to add Lujan as a defendant. On August 1, 2013, the DOJ moved to stay the civil proceedings in the SEC case until the parallel criminal cases were resolved. The stay has not been lifted as of December 31, 2013.

Parallel criminal charges were brought against Clarke, Hurtado, Gonzalez, and Lujan. All four defendants have pleaded guilty and are due to be sentenced in 2014.

118. SEC v. Ralph Lauren Corporation (2013)²⁴²

Nature of the Business. Ralph Lauren Corporation (“RLC”), a Delaware corporation headquartered in New York, is in the business of design, marketing, and distribution of apparel, accessories, and other consumer products around the world.

Business Location. Argentina.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $538,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Customs broker.
4. The foreign official. Argentine customs officials and other government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the statement of facts attached to the SEC’s non-prosecution agreement with RLC (which RLC neither admits nor denies), the Argentine subsidiary of RLC allegedly paid bribes and gifts from 2006 to 2009 to Argentine customs officials to assist in improperly obtaining paperwork necessary for its products to clear customs, permit clearance of items without the necessary paperwork, permit clearance of prohibited goods, and avoid inspection of products by Argentine customs officials. The payments were made through a customs broker, who passed the bribes on to customs officials. The gifts, which were given directly to Argentine government officials to secure the importation of RLC’s goods into Argentina, included perfume, dresses, and handbags valued at between $400 and $14,000 each.

Enforcement. On April 18, 2013, RLC entered into a non-prosecution agreement with the SEC under which it paid a $734,845 civil penalty. RLC has since ceased its operations in Argentina.

In a press release, the SEC explained that it granted its first-ever FCPA-related non-prosecution agreement due to RLC’s “prompt reporting of the violations . . . completeness of the information it provided, and its extensive, thorough, and real-time cooperation with the SEC’s investigation.”

In a related criminal action, RLC entered into a non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ, under which the company agreed to pay a monetary penalty of $882,000.

117. SEC v. Parker Drilling Company (E.D. Va. 2013)²⁴³

Nature of the Business. Parker Drilling Company is a publicly-listed drilling-services company headquartered in Houston, Texas, with subsidiaries operating throughout the world, including Parker Drilling (Nigeria) Limited, a wholly-owned subsidiary incorporated in the Cayman Islands.

Business Location. Nigeria, Mexico.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $1.25 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Saved $3.05 million in fines.
3. Intermediary. Nigerian agent, U.S. law firm.
4. The foreign official. Officials and employees of the Nigerian Minister of Finance, Nigeria State Security Service, Nigeria Customs Service; Nigerian President-appointed “Panel of Inquiry for the Investigation of All Cases of Temporary Import Permits.”

Influence to be Obtained. According to the complaint filed by the SEC, in 2001 and 2002 Parker Drilling failed to pay certain tariffs and duties associated with Nigeria’s Customs & Excise Management Act of 1958. When the Nigerian government formed a panel to investigate companies’ compliance to the Act, it found that Parker Drilling had violated Nigeria’s laws and assessed a fine of $3.8 million against the company. During these proceedings, Parker Drilling allegedly retained a Nigerian agent to help resolve the customs issues. Parker Drilling authorized payments to this Nigerian agent totaling $1.25 million, most of which were paid through Parker Drilling’s U.S. law firm. The Nigerian agent used those funds, in part, to entertain Nigerian government officials involved with the customs issues. Subsequently, Parker Drilling’s fine was reduced to $750,000—a reduction of $3.05 million, or approximately 80 percent.

Enforcement. On April 16, 2013, the SEC filed a complaint against Parker Drilling, alleging violations of the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. Parker Drilling consented to a final judgment permanently enjoining the company from future violations of the FCPA and agreed to pay $4,090,818 in disgorgement and prejudgment interest.

In a related criminal action, Parker Drilling entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ under which the company agreed to pay a monetary penalty of $11.76 million.

116. In the Matter of Koninklijke Philips Electronics N.V. (2013)²⁴⁴

Nature of the Business. Koninklijke Philips Electronics N.V. is a Netherlands-based parent of numerous companies that manufacture and supply goods and services in the healthcare, consumer lifestyle, and lighting sectors. Since 1999, Philips has participated in public tenders to sell medical equipment to Polish healthcare facilities through its Polish subsidiary, Philips Polska sp. z o.o. (“Philips Poland”).

Business Location. Poland.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Not stated (usually between three to eight percent of the value of the contracts awarded to Philips for the purchase of medical equipment).
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Third party agent.
4. The foreign official. Public officials of Polish healthcare facilities.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the findings in the cease-and-desist order issued by the SEC (which Philips did not admit or deny), employees of Philips Poland allegedly made improper payments from 1999 through 2007 to public officials of Polish healthcare facilities, including hospital directors, to increase the likelihood that Philips would be awarded tenders for the purchase of medical equipment. Philips would submit the technical specifications of its medical equipment to officials drafting the tenders, who would incorporate these specifications into the contracts, greatly increasing Philips’ chances of winning. Certain officials involved in these arrangements also made the actual decision of to whom to award the tenders and received the improper payments when Philips won the tenders. The payments were falsely characterized and accounted for as legitimate expenses and were at times supported by false documentation created by employees or third parties.

Enforcement. In December 2009, after the Prosecutor’s Office in Poznan, Poland, indicted three former employees for allegedly violating laws related to public tenders for the purchase of medical equipment, Philips conducted an internal investigation and self-reported its findings to the SEC and DOJ in 2010.

On April 5, 2013, the SEC filed a cease-and-desist order against Philips, pursuant to which Philips agreed to pay $3,120,597 in disgorgement and $1,394,581 in prejudgment interest relating to the violations in Poland. The SEC did not impose a civil penalty, based upon Philips’ cooperation in the SEC investigation and related enforcement action.

See Ongoing Investigation Number F-52.

115. SEC v. Eli Lilly and Company (D.D.C. 2012)²⁴⁵

Nature of the Business. Eli Lilly and Company, an Indiana corporation, is a pharmaceutical manufacturer that markets products in over 143 countries.

Business Location. China, Brazil, Poland, Russia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Not stated.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Subsidiary companies; third-party distributors.
4. The foreign official. Director of Polish government health authority; government-employed healthcare providers and other government officials in China; government officials in Brazil; member of Russia's Parliament and other government officials in Russia.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the SEC's complaint, between 1994 and 2009, Eli Lilly's subsidiaries made improper payments to government officials in China, Brazil, Poland, and Russia, to win sales contracts and gain other business advantages.

In China, employees at Eli Lilly's Chinese subsidiary ("Lilly-China") allegedly submitted false expense reports to purchase gifts and entertainment for government-employed physicians to encourage physicians to look favorably upon Lilly and prescribe Lilly products.

In Brazil, Eli Lilly's Brazilian subsidiary ("Lilly-Brazil") distributed drugs through third-party distributors, granting them a discount depending on the distributor's anticipated sale. In 2007, Lilly-Brazil allegedly granted an unusually large discount for two of the distributor's purchases of a Lilly drug, which the distributor then sold to the government of one of the Brazilian states. The distributor used a portion of the purchase price to bribe government officials from the Brazilian state so that the state would purchase the product. The Lilly-Brazil employees that authorized the discount allegedly knew of this arrangement.

In Poland, Eli Lilly's Polish subsidiary made payments to a small charitable foundation that was founded and administered by the head of one of the regional government health authorities at the same time that the subsidiary was seeking the official's support for placing Lilly drugs on the government reimbursement list.

In Russia, Eli Lilly's Russian subsidiary ("Lilly-Russia") made payments to offshore entities for alleged "marketing services" to induce pharmaceutical distributors and government entities to purchase Lilly's drugs. At least one of the offshore entities was owned by a government official, and another was owned by a person closely associated with an important member of Russia's parliament.

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

Enforcement. On December 20, 2012, the SEC filed a complaint against Eli Lilly, alleging violations of the anti-bribery, books-and-records, and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. Eli Lilly agreed to pay disgorgement and prejudgment interest of approximately $20.7 million, and a penalty of $8.7 million. Without admitting or denying the allegations, Lilly consented to the entry of a final judgment permanently enjoining the company from violating the FCPA. Lilly also agreed to comply with certain undertakings, including the retention of an independent consultant to review and make recommendations about its foreign corruption policies and procedures.

114. SEC v. Allianz (2012)²⁴⁶

Nature of the Business. Allianz SE, a German company, engages in insurance and other asset management businesses across approximately 70 different countries. PT Asuransi Allianz Utama (“Utama”) is a subsidiary in Indonesia selling general insurance products to individuals and corporate clients. Allianz’s American Depository Shares and bonds were registered with the SEC during the relevant period.

Business Location. Indonesia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $650,626.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Profits of approximately $5.3 million.
3. Intermediary. Subsidiary company.
4. The foreign official. Various Indonesian government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the SEC’s cease-and-desist order, from 2001 to 2008, managers from Utama used a special purpose account, previously used for legitimate business, to make payments to government officials to secure lucrative insurance contracts associated with large Indonesian government projects. Allianz initially began its operations in Indonesia in 1981 where it opened a special purpose bank account with a local Indonesian broker. This account was used to pay legitimate commissions owed to the local agents that generated business for Utama. Beginning in February 2001, Utama managers used the special purpose account to make the alleged bribes. Despite being alerted to potential misconduct by Utama officials in 2005 and subsequently performing an internal investigation, Allianz made no specific changes to its record keeping procedures and internal controls. While Allianz directed Utama to close the special purpose account, Utama managers continued to make improper payments between 2005 and 2008. Officials at Utama who condoned the conduct utilized multiple methods to avoid Allianz’s internal recordkeeping.

Following a 2009 whistleblower complaint, Allianz once again conducted an internal investigation but did not report its findings to the SEC. Instead, by April 2010 the SEC initiated its own investigation into Allianz and Utama, revealing the various illicit payments.

Enforcement. On December 17, 2012, the SEC filed a cease-and-desist order against Allianz. Allianz subsequently agreed to pay disgorgement and prejudgment interest of approximately $7.1 million, and a civil money penalty of approximately $5.3 million.

113. SEC v. Tyco International Ltd. (D.D.C. 2012)²⁴⁷

Nature of the Business. Tyco International, Ltd. (“Tyco”), a Swiss company, manufactures and sells products related to security, fire protection, and energy.

Business Location. China, Congo, Croatia, India, Indonesia, Iran, Laos, Libya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mauritania, Niger, Saudi Arabia, Serbia, Syria, Thailand, Turkey, United Arab Emirates, Poland, Viet Nam, Georgia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $5 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $ 10.6 million.
3. Intermediary. Joint ventures; subsidiary companies; agents.
4. The foreign official. Employees of government customers in China, Croatia, India, Libya, Saudi Arabia, Serbia, Syria, Turkey, Malaysia, and the UAE; One security officer at a government-owned mining company in Mauritania; Government officials (including those at state-owned “design institutes”) and public healthcare officials and publicly employed doctors in China; Representatives of a company majority-owned by the Egyptian government; Doctors and officials of hospitals owned or controlled by the Saudi Arabian government; Healthcare professionals in Poland.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the SEC’s complaint, Tyco’s subsidiaries perpetuated schemes that typically involved payments of fake “commissions” or the use of third party agents to funnel money improperly to obtain lucrative contracts. To conceal the true nature of the payments, they were recorded in Tyco’s books and records as “commissions,” “business introduction services,” “promotional expenses,” and “sales development expenses.”

In Germany, Tyco agents allegedly paid third parties to secure contracts or avoid penalties or fines in several countries. Tyco’s subsidiary in China allegedly paid the “site project team” of a state-owned corporation to sign a contract with the Chinese Ministry of Public Security. Tyco’s subsidiary in France allegedly made payments to a security officer at a government-owned mining company in Mauritania and paid sham “commissions” to intermediaries in four different countries.

In several other countries, Tyco’s subsidiaries made payments to various government officials and “consultants,” falsely recording the payments as “commissions.”

Enforcement. On September 24, 2012, the SEC filed a complaint charging Tyco with anti-bribery, books-and-records, and internal controls violations of the FCPA. On September 25, 2012, Tyco consented to a final judgment, under which it acknowledged as true and accurate the Statement of Facts entered into in connection with its non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ in a related criminal matter. Tyco was required to pay disgorgement and prejudgment interest of approximately $13.13 million and was

112. SEC v. Oracle Corporation (N.D. Cal. 2012)²⁴⁸

Nature of the Business. Oracle Corporation is a publicly-traded computer technology corporation registered in Delaware and headquartered in California. Oracle develops enterprise software and provides computer hardware products and services to its customers.

Business Location. India.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $2.2 million in Oracle India revenues were set aside as a “side fund” from which to pay bribes to Indian government officials.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Subsidiary company, local distributors.
4. The foreign official. Not stated.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the SEC complaint, employees at Oracle’s wholly-owned subsidiary, Oracle India Private Limited, secreted proceeds from its sales to the Indian government for potential future use as bribe money or for embezzlement. A $2.2 million “side fund” was allegedly a source of money from which Oracle India intended to make unauthorized payments to third parties. At the direction of the Oracle India employees, the distributors then made payments out of the withheld funds to third parties, purportedly for marketing and development expenses. The SEC further alleged that the Oracle India’s employees concealed the $2.2 million from Oracle, and, therefore, that Oracle failed to properly report the $2.2 million as prepaid marketing expense, an asset item in its books and records.

Finally, the SEC alleged that Oracle lacked the proper controls to prevent its employees at Oracle India from creating and misusing the withheld funds. According the complaint, Oracle failed to audit the distributor’s margin against the end user price to ensure excess margins were not being built into the pricing structure. According to the SEC, Oracle also failed to seek transparency in or audit third party payments made by distributors on Oracle India’s behalf.

Enforcement. On August 16, 2012, Oracle consented to a final judgment without admitting or denying the SEC’s allegations, under which it was ordered to pay a civil penalty of $2 million and was permanently restrained and enjoined from violating the FCPA.

111. SEC v. Pfizer Inc. (D.D.C. 2012)²⁴⁹

Nature of the Business. Pfizer Inc. is a global pharmaceutical, animal health, and consumer products company incorporated in Delaware. Pfizer H.C.P. Corporation is an indirect wholly-owned subsidiary of Pfizer Inc.

Business Location. Bulgaria, Croatia, China, Czech Republic, Italy, Kazakhstan, Russia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Not stated.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Subsidiary company; third-party agents.
4. The foreign official. Officials and publicly employed doctors in Bulgaria, Croatia, Kazakhstan, and Russia.

Influence to be Obtained. According to court documents, from 2001 to 2007, employees at Pfizer HCP and Pfizer Inc.'s other subsidiaries made and authorized payments of cash and other things of value to government officials (including doctors and employed by state-owned hospitals) for the purpose of improperly influencing their decisions regarding regulatory and formulary approvals, purchase decisions, prescription decisions, and customs clearance.

In Bulgaria, Pfizer HCP employees and agents paid for domestic and international travel and provided equipment to government-employed doctors. Employees also organized "Incentive Trips" for the healthcare providers, and Pfizer HCP sales representatives were instructed to reach agreements with the doctors on the specific quantities of Pfizer pharmaceuticals they would prescribe in return for participation in these events.

In China, Pfizer's Chinese subsidiary provided cash, hospitality, gifts, and support for international travel to doctors who were employed by Chinese government healthcare institutions. The payments were intended to influence these officials to prescribe Pfizer products, provide hospital formulary listings, and otherwise use their influence to grant Pfizer China an unfair business advantage.

In Croatia, Pfizer HCP employees made monthly payments to a doctor who served as a member of several Croatian government committees that oversaw the registration and reimbursement of pharmaceutical products. During the period in which Pfizer HCP made payments, the committees on which the doctor served approved three Pfizer products.

In the Czech Republic, Pfizer's Czech subsidiary provided support for international travel and recreational opportunities to doctors employed by the Czech government with the intent to influence the government officials to prescribe Pfizer products.

²⁴⁹ SEC v. Pfizer Inc., No. 1:12-cv-01303 (D.D.C. 2012).

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

In Italy, Pfizer's Italian subsidiary provided cash payments, gifts (such as television, mobile phones, photocopiers, printers), support for domestic and international travel, and other benefits to doctors employed by Italian government healthcare institutions. The payment of cash and other things of value were intended to influence those government officials to prescribe Pfizer products.

In Kazakhstan, Pfizer HCP entered into an exclusive distribution contract for a Pfizer product with a Kazakh company, believing that all or part of the value of the contract would be provided to a high-level Kazakh government official, to corruptly obtain approval for the registration of a Pfizer product in Kazakhstan.

In Russia, Pfizer Russia employees used conference attendance and travel as a corrupt inducement for healthcare providers to prescribe or purchase Pfizer products. Pfizer Russia employees also used purported sales initiatives to make corrupt payments. The sales initiative, known as the "Hospital Program," appeared to be a mechanism for Pfizer Russia to provide the equivalent of indirect price discounts or in-kind benefits to government hospitals in connection with their purchases of Pfizer products. In practice, however, the Hospital Program was used to make cash payments to individual healthcare professionals to corruptly influence purchases and prescriptions.

Funds for these payments were often generated by Pfizer employees through the use of collusive vendors to create fraudulent invoices. The payments were falsely recorded in Pfizer's books and records, as "Travel and Entertainment," "Convention and Trade Meetings and Conference," "Distribution Freight," "Clinical Grants/Clinical Trials," "Gifts," and "Professional Services - Non Consultant."

Enforcement. On August 7, 2012, the SEC filed a complaint against Pfizer Inc., alleging violations of the books-and-records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. On August 28, 2012, Pfizer Inc. consented to a final judgment, under which it was permanently restrained and enjoined from violating the FCPA and ordered to pay disgorgement and prejudgment interest of $26,339,944.84. Pfizer was also ordered to periodically report to the SEC regarding its remediation and implementation of compliance measures.

In a related criminal action, the DOJ entered into a deferred prosecution agreement with Pfizer Inc.'s subsidiary, Pfizer HCP.

110. SEC v. Wyeth LLC (D.D.C. 2012)²⁵⁰

Nature of the Business. Wyeth LLC is a pharmaceutical company headquartered in New Jersey and incorporated in Delaware. Before its acquisition by Pfizer, Wyeth's securities were registered with the SEC and its common stock traded on the New York Stock Exchange. As part of its global pharmaceutical business, Wyeth allegedly made improper payments and gifts to physicians and other employees at state-owned hospitals and to a Saudi Arabian customs official.

In 2009, during Wyeth's alleged misconduct, the company was acquired by Pfizer, Inc. and became a wholly-owned subsidiary of Pfizer. The DOJ's action against Pfizer H.C.P. (and the related SEC action against Pfizer Inc.) is wholly unrelated to the conduct alleged by the SEC in this action.

Business Location. China, Indonesia, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Not stated.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $17,217,831.
3. Intermediary. Distributor; subsidiary company.
4. The foreign official. Employees (including doctors) at state-owned hospitals in China, Indonesia, and Pakistan; Saudi Arabian customs official.

Influence to be Obtained. According to a complaint filed by the SEC, Wyeth subsidiaries in China, Indonesia, Pakistan, and Saudi Arabia allegedly made improper payments to foreign officials (including employees of state-owned hospitals) to procure business, which resulted in inaccurate books and records. The improper payments were falsely recorded as promotional expenses, "Miscellaneous Selling Expenses," "Trade Allowances," "Entertainment," and "Give Aways and Gifts."

In China, Wyeth's indirect majority-owned subsidiary, Shanghai Wyeth Nutritional Co., Ltd., provided cash payments to Chinese state-owned hospitals and healthcare providers employed by the Chinese government. The payments were made to influence the healthcare providers' recommendations of Wyeth nutritional products to patients, to ensure that Wyeth products were made available to new mothers at the hospitals, and to obtain information on new births that could be used for marketing purposes. The payments were funded with the help of collusive travel agencies, and by submitting falsified expense reimbursement requests, which were either inflated or related to events that did not occur.

In Indonesia, Wyeth's indirect majority-owned subsidiary, PT Wyeth Indonesia (including Wyeth Indonesia's Ethical Nutritional Division), provided cash payments, nutritional products, cell phones, and phone card credits to employees of Indonesian government-owned hospitals. The payments were made to influence the doctors' recommendation of Wyeth nutritional products to their patients to ensure that

Wyeth products would be made available to new mothers at hospitals, and to obtain information about new births that could be used for marketing purposes.

To conceal the gift inducements, Wyeth Indonesia instructed distributors to generate invoices and deliver the products, but then to charge back the value of the goods to Wyeth Indonesia so the institutions received the products without charge. Wyeth's International Corporate Compliance Office ordered this practice to be stopped; however, Wyeth Indonesia employees continued with the practice and concealed the reimbursement by instructing other vendors to pay the distributors and then obtain reimbursement from Wyeth Indonesia by submitting false invoices.

In Pakistan, Wyeth's indirect majority-owned subsidiary, Wyeth Pakistan Limited provided cash payments, travel, office equipment, and renovations to doctors who were employed by state-owned healthcare institutions, to influence doctors to recommend Wyeth products to new mothers. The improper benefits were initially funded by fictitious expense reimbursement requests, but after Wyeth's external auditor identified questionable reimbursement submissions, Wyeth Pakistan employees began generating funds with the help of collusive vendors.

In Saudi Arabia, Wyeth operated through COCI Corporation's representative office. Wyeth products were marketed and sold through a Saudi Arabian distributor. The distributor made a payment to a Saudi Arabian customs official to secure the release of Wyeth promotional items, which had been held because Wyeth Saudi Arabia had failed to secure a Certificate of Conformity. Wyeth Saudi Arabia reimbursed the distributor for his cash payment and recorded it as a "facilitation expense."

Enforcement. On August 7, 2012, the SEC filed a complaint against Wyeth, alleging violations of the books-and-records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. Wyeth consented to entry of a final judgment on August 29, 2012, under which Wyeth was ordered to pay disgorgement and prejudgment interest of $18,88 million.

Nature of the Business. Orthofix International, N.V. is a multinational corporation involved in the design, development, manufacture, marketing, and distribution of medical devices. Although incorporated in Curaçao, the company is based in Lewisville, Texas, and operates in multiple countries around the world including the United States, the United Kingdom, Italy, and Mexico. Orthofix is publicly traded on the NASDAQ stock exchange

Business Location. Mexico.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $300,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Gross revenues of $8.7 million and net profits of approximately $4.9 million.
3. Intermediary. Subsidiary company.
4. The foreign official. Employees of state-owned hospitals; officials from the Mexican state social-services agency, the Instituto Mexicano del Seguro Social (“IMSS”).

Influence to be Obtained. Between 2003 and 2010, Orthofix and its Mexican subsidiary Promeca, S.A de C.V. allegedly sought to secure agreements from Mexican officials employed by state-owned hospitals as well as the IMSS that guaranteed the sale of Orthofix products. In return for the agreements, the Mexican officials would receive a percentage of the collected revenue generated as a result of the sales in addition to various other gifts which Orthofix officials commonly referred to as “chocolates.” Promeca allegedly falsely recorded the bribes as cash advances and falsified invoices to disguise these payments.

Enforcement. On July 10, 2012, the SEC filed a complaint against Orthofix, alleging violations of the books-and-records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. On September 4, 2012, a final judgment was entered against Orthofix, under which Orthofix was ordered to pay disgorgement and prejudgment interest of approximately $5.2 million.

In a related criminal action, Orthofix entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ, under which it agreed to pay a $2.22 million penalty.

108. SEC v. Garth Peterson (E.D.N.Y. 2012)²⁵²

Nature of the Business. Garth Peterson was a managing director in charge of Morgan Stanley's Real Estate Group's ("MSRE") Shanghai office. Morgan Stanley is a global financial services firm listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Morgan Stanley, through MSRE, created and managed real estate funds for institutional investors and high-net-worth investors.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $2.8 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Shell entity.
4. The foreign official. Executive at Shanghai Yongye Enterprise (Group) Co. Ltd. ("Yongye"), a state-owned, limited liability corporation incorporated by the Luwan District government, to operate as the Luwan District government's real estate development arm.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the SEC's complaint, from at least 2004 to 2007, Peterson secretly acquired millions of dollars' worth of real estate investments from Morgan Stanley's funds for himself and for the former Chairman of Yongye (the "Chinese Official"). Yongye was a state-owned entity with influence over the success of Morgan Stanley's real estate business in China, Peterson had a pre-existing business and personal relationship with the Chinese Official. Peterson also arranged to have paid to himself and the Chinese Official at least $1.8 million in what he misrepresented were finders' fees Morgan Stanley's funds owed to third parties. In exchange for offers and payments from Peterson, the Chinese Official helped Peterson and Morgan Stanley to obtain business while personally benefitting from some of these same investments.

In 2004, MSRE was negotiating to purchase a tower a Shanghai building. To do so, MSRE required the approval of the Chinese Official. The Chinese Official approved of MSRE's purchase, but secretly, Peterson, the Chinese Official, and a Canadian attorney conspired to purchase a real estate interest in the tower. The three co-conspirators set up an offshore shell entity and misrepresented to Morgan Stanley that Yongye sought to purchase an interest through an offshore subsidiary, which was actually a shell entity collectively owned by the three conspirators. Morgan Stanley ultimately sold the interest to the shell entity at a discount, which further enriched Peterson and his co-conspirators.

Enforcement. Peterson settled with the SEC, and the court entered a final judgment against Peterson, ordering him to disgorge approximately $3.82 million (comprised of his shares in the investment vehicle, worth $3.4 million, $241,589 in cash, and prejudgment interest). Peterson also consented to an administrative order by the SEC that permanently bars him from associating with investment advisors,

107. SEC v. Biomet, Inc. (D.D.C. 2012)²⁵³

Nature of the Business. Biomet, Inc. is a manufacturer of orthopedic medical devices. Biomet is an issuer in the United States, is incorporated in Indiana and has its principal place of business in Warsaw, Indiana.

Business Location. Argentina, Brazil, China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $1.536 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Subsidiary companies, third party distributors.
4. The foreign official. Health care providers employed by publicly owned and operated hospitals in Argentina, Brazil, and China.

Influence to be Obtained. The SEC alleges that Biomet and its four wholly-owned subsidiaries (Biomet Argentina SA, Biomet International Corporation, Biomet China and Scandimed AB) paid bribes to doctors employed at public hospitals in Argentina, Brazil, and China. Between 2000 and August 2008, bribes were allegedly paid directly by Biomet subsidiaries or through the distributors who sold Biomet's products. Even though Biomet's compliance and internal audit functions were made aware of the payments as early as 2000, they failed to take any action to stop the payments.

According to the SEC complaint, employees of Biomet Argentina SA paid kickbacks ranging from 15 to 20 percent of each sale to doctors in Argentina. Invoices were created used to justify the payments, which were recorded as "consulting fees" or "commissions" in Biomet's books and records.

The SEC alleges that Biomet's subsidiary Biomet International used a distributor to bribe doctors in Brazil by paying them between 10 and 20 percent of the value of their medical device purchases. The distributor, Biomet International employees, and Biomet's executives and internal auditors in the United States openly discussed the payments in communications.

The SEC also alleges that two other subsidiaries, Biomet China and Scandimed AB, acting through a Chinese distributor, provided doctors with money and travel in exchange for their purchases of Biomet products. These allegations include payments of "consulting fees" of between 10 and 15 percent of sales, providing a cash payment of 25 percent to one surgeon upon completion of a surgery, and providing a dinner for another doctor followed by a possible trip to Switzerland to visit his daughter. Additionally, Biomet organized a trip for 20 surgeons to Spain for training, where a substantial portion of the trip was devoted to sightseeing and entertainment at Biomet's expense.

The SEC alleged that the payments were improperly recorded in Biomet's books and records and that Biomet failed to maintain adequate internal controls.

On March 27, 2012, Biomet consented to the entry of a court order permanently enjoining it from any future FCPA violations and agreed to pay approximately $5.57 million in disgorgement and prejudgment interest. The SEC ordered Biomet to retain an independent corporate compliance monitor for a period of 18 months.

In a related criminal proceeding, Biomet entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ, under which Biomet agreed to pay a monetary penalty of $17.28 million and to retain an independent corporate compliance monitor for a minimum period of 18 months and self-monitoring and reporting for the remainder of the DPA period.

Defendant Mark A. Jackson was Noble's CFO from September 2000 to February 2006. By the time he retired from Noble in 2007, Jackson had also served as CEO, President, and COO of Noble. Defendant James J. Ruehlen is the current Director and Division Manager of Noble Nigeria and is responsible for all of Noble-Nigeria's operations. He reported directly to Jackson from May 2005 to 2007. Defendant Thomas O'Rourke was Noble's former Director of Internal Audit and controller.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Not stated.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Subsidiary company; customs agent.
4. The foreign official. Nigerian customs officials.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the SEC complaint filed against Jackson and Ruehlen, from 2003-2007, Jackson and Ruehlen allegedly bribed Nigeria Customs Service ("NCS") officials with hundreds of thousands of dollars to (1) favorably process false paperwork, (2) grant temporary import permits ("TIPs") for oil rigs based on that false paperwork, and (3) abuse their discretion in granting extensions to these illicit TIPs. The complaint also alleges that Jackson approved the bribe payments and concealed the payments from Noble's audit committee by misleading the auditors while Ruehlen processed and paid the bribes.

According to the O'Rourke Complaint, O'Rourke allegedly assisted officials at Noble's Nigerian subsidiary in bribing Nigeria Customs Service officials to grant and extend temporary import permits for oil rigs based on false paperwork, facilitated the approval of these charges, and hid the true nature of the charges from the company's audit committee.

Between 2003 and 2007, Noble-Nigeria operated oil rigs offshore in Nigeria pursuant to one-year TIPs granted by NCS. At the expiration of the TIPs and TIP extensions, the rigs were required to be exported and re-imported under a new TIP or be permanently imported with the payment of sizable duties. Then, ²⁵⁵ SEC v. O'Rourke, No. 4:12-cv-00564 (S.D. Tex. 2012).

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

according to the SEC, Ruehlen, with Jackson's approval, and Noble's customs agent created false documents showing that the rigs moved out of and back into Nigerian waters and bribed NSC officials to process these documents. The alleged scheme thus spared Noble Corporation the operational costs associated with exporting and re-importing rigs from Nigeria to qualify for new TIPS and allowed Noble to retain business under lucrative drilling contracts.

Enforcement. On May 8, 2012, Jackson and Ruehlen filed motions to dismiss the complaint, arguing that the complaint failed to plead adequately 1) the involvement of a foreign official, 2) that the payments were not facilitation payments, and 3) that the defendants acted corruptly. On December 11, 2012, the Southern District for Texas granted in part and denied in part the motion to dismiss, largely based on deficient pleadings regarding the statute of limitations. Judge Keith Ellison held that 1) the SEC did not need to plead the identity of the foreign official with specificity (acknowledging his disagreement with fellow S.D. Texas Judge Lynn Hughes, who stated differently in the DOJ's case against John O'Shea), 2) the SEC pleaded sufficient facts to support the conclusion that the payments made to obtain new TIPS were made corruptly and were not facilitation payments, but 3) the SEC did not plausibly allege facts that support the allegation that granting the TIPS extensions were a matter of discretion (and thus potentially excluded from the definition of "facilitation payments"). On January 25, 2013, the SEC filed an amended complaint, which Jackson and Ruehlen moved to dismiss on February 22, 2013. The parties then jointly moved to grant the SEC leave to file a second amended complaint with corrected pleadings regarding the statute of limitations, which the court granted. The SEC filed its second amended complaint on March 25, 2013, to which Jackson and Ruehlen filed answers on April 19, 2013, denying most of the SEC's allegations.

On February 24, 2012, without admitting or denying the allegations, O'Rourke consented to the entry of an order permanently enjoining him from further FCPA violations and requiring him to pay a civil money penalty of $35,000. The order notes that O'Rourke agreed to cooperate with the SEC's subsequent investigation. The action was terminated on February 28, 2012.

105. SEC v. Smith & Nephew plc (D.D.C. 2012)²⁵⁶

Nature of the Business. Smith & Nephew, plc is a global medical company incorporated in England and Wales. It issued and maintained a class of publicly-traded securities which traded on the New York Stock Exchange. Smith & Nephew, Inc. (“S&N Inc.”) was a wholly-owned subsidiary of Smith & Nephew, plc, and was a global manufacturer and supplier of orthopedic medical devices. S&N Inc. was incorporated in Delaware and headquartered in Memphis, Tennessee.

Business Location. Greece

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $9.4 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Shell entity; subsidiary company.
4. The foreign official. Healthcare providers and doctors employed by publicly-owned Greek hospitals.

Influence to be Obtained. From about 1998 to about 2008, Smith & Nephew, through certain executives, employees, and affiliates, funded an offshore slush fund by selling products at full list price to a Greek distributor based in Athens and then paying the “distributor discount” to an offshore shell company controlled by the distributor. The distributor then paid cash incentives and other things of value to publicly-employed Greek health care providers to induce the purchase of medical devices manufactured by Smith & Nephew. The funds were recorded as “marketing services” to conceal the true nature of the payments in the consolidated books and records of Smith & Nephew and its subsidiaries.

Enforcement. On February 6, 2012, the SEC filed a civil complaint against S&N plc. Without admitting or denying the allegations against it, S&N plc reached a settlement with the SEC and agreed to pay $5.43 million in disgorgement of profits, including prejudgment interest. On March 6, 2012, the court issued a final judgment in which the court permanently enjoined S&N plc from future violations of Sections 30A, 13(b)(2)(A), and 13(b)(2)(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and ordered S&N plc to retain an independent compliance monitor for a period of 18 months to review its FCPA compliance program.

In a related criminal action, the DOJ entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement with S&N Inc.

104. SEC v. Magyar Telekom, Plc. and Deutsche Telekom, AG (S.D.N.Y. 2011)²⁵⁷
SEC v. Elek Straub, Andras Balogh, and Tamas Morvai (S.D.N.Y. 2011)²⁵⁸

Nature of the Business. Magyar Telekom, Plc. (“Magyar Telekom”) is the largest telecommunications company in Hungary. Deutsche Telekom, AG (“Deutsche Telekom”), a private stock corporation organized under the laws of Germany, owns a controlling interest in Magyar Telekom. Elek Straub was the Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Magyar Telekom from July 17, 1995, until December 5, 2006. Andras Balogh was the Director of Central Strategic Organization of Magyar Telekom from April 1, 2002 until August 8, 2006, and Tamas Morvai was the Director of Business Development and Acquisitions in the Central Strategic Organization of Magyar Telekom from July 2004 until July 10, 2006. All three individual defendants are Hungarian citizens.

Business Location. Macedonia, Montenegro.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. €12,225,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unspecified.
3. Intermediary. Shell companies and a third-party intermediary.
4. The foreign official. Macedonia and Montenegrin government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. The SEC alleged that Elek Straub, Andras Balogh, and Tamas Morvai (collectively, the “senior executives”) executed a scheme between 2005 and 2006 to bribe Macedonian government officials to obtain certain regulatory and business benefits. In particular, the senior executives allegedly retained a Greek “lobbying consultant” to negotiate a secret agreement with a senior government official, called the “Protocol of Cooperation,” pursuant to which the government would refrain from tendering a license to Magyar Telekom’s mobile phone competitor under a newly-enacted law and would mitigate other adverse effects under the law for Magyar Telekom’s subsidiaries. In return, the government official was promised up to €10 million in bribes. The Protocol of Cooperation was allegedly approved by Straub and Balogh and, according to the complaint against the senior executives, by executives at Deutsche Telekom.

Balogh and Morvai allegedly entered a second Protocol of Cooperation, identical to the first, with a senior government official of Macedonia’s minority political party. In addition, the senior executives allegedly offered the minority political party the opportunity to designate the beneficiary of a valuable business opportunity in exchange for its support of the benefits sought by Magyar Telekom.

According to the SEC, as a result of these promises, the Macedonian government delayed the introduction of a mobile phone competitor until 2007 and unlawfully reduced the frequency fee tariffs imposed on Magyar Telekom’s subsidiaries. In exchange, the senior executives allegedly authorized Magyar

Telekom's subsidiaries to channel payments of €4.875 million to the officials through entities affiliated with the Greek intermediary. These payments were purportedly made under the guise of six bogus "consulting" and "marketing" contracts that were specifically designed to evade Magyar Telekom's internal controls and were recorded as consulting expenses in Magyar Telekom's books and records.

In 2005, Straub, Balogh, and Morvai allegedly executed a second corrupt scheme in which they authorized payments of €7.35 million to government officials in the Republic of Montenegro. The payments were intended to facilitate Magyar Telekom's acquisition of super-majority ownership of Telekom Crne Gore A.D. ("TCG"), a former state-owned public telecommunications services provider in Montenegro. The Government of Montenegro sold its 51% stake to Magyar Telekom through a public tender process, but Magyar Telekom was unsuccessful in acquiring shares from the minority shareholders due to a budget set by Deutsche Telekom. Straub, Balogh, and Morvai offered bribes to Montenegrin officials to induce the government to contribute €0.30 per share to private shareholders, which enabled Magyar Telekom to acquire additional shares.

After the government facilitated the TCG deal, Straub and Balogh allegedly funneled €4.47 million to Montenegrin officials through "consulting" contracts between Magyar Telekom's subsidiaries and entities in Mauritius and the Seychelles. Straub, Balogh, and Morvai also allegedly funneled €580,000 to the sister of a Montenegrin official through a sham consulting agreement with a purported New York-based counter-party and entered a fourth sham consulting agreement with a shell company purportedly based in England, under which it paid €2.3 million.

The SEC further alleged that Straub, Balogh, and Morvai lied to Magyar Telekom's auditors by failing to disclose the purpose and existence of the contracts used to pay government officials. The false entries in Magyar Telekom's books and records were consolidated into the books and records of Deutsche Telekom.

Enforcement. The SEC charged Magyar Telekom with violations of the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. Magyar Telekom agreed to pay $31.2 million in disgorgement and prejudgment interest to settle the charges. Magyar Telekom also agreed to pay a $59.6 million criminal penalty as part of a deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ.

Deutsche Telekom was also charged with books and records and internal controls violations. Deutsche Telekom settled the SEC's charges, and as part of a non-prosecution agreement with the Department of Justice agreed to pay a penalty of $4.36 million.

Straub, Balogh, and Morvai are charged with violating or aiding and abetting violations of the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal controls provisions of the FCPA; knowingly circumvented internal controls and falsifying books and records; and making false statements to the company's auditor. The SEC seeks disgorgement and penalties and the imposition of permanent injunctions in its actions against Straub, Balogh, and Morvai.

On October 29, 2012, Straub, Balogh, and Morvai filed a motion to dismiss the civil charges, arguing that the court lacks personal jurisdiction over the defendants because they are foreign national defendants and their alleged conduct occurred wholly outside, and without a nexus to, the United States. Furthermore, the defendants argue that the SEC's claims are time-barred. Lastly, the defendants argue that the complaint fails to state the claims alleged because it does not adequately plead that the defendants corruptly made use of interstate commerce and that the intended payment recipients were "foreign officials" under the FCPA; it does not sufficiently allege facts to support the aiding and abetting claims; and the complaint does not meet the heightened pleading requirements under Rule 9 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, which requires allegations of individual culpable conduct by each defendant.

On February 8, 2013, Judge Richard Sullivan of the Southern District of New York denied the defendants' motion to dismiss the complaint in the action, finding that 1) the court had personal jurisdiction over the defendants, 2) the SEC's claims were not time-barred, and 3) the SEC had sufficiently stated its claims. On August 5, 2013, the Court also denied the defendants' motion for leave to file an interlocutory appeal. The case has since entered the discovery phase and defendants have been ordered to appear for depositions.

See DOJ Digest Number D-126.

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

103. SEC v. Aon Corporation (D.D.C 2011)²⁵⁹

Nature of the Business. Aon is a Delaware corporation that provides risk management services, insurance, and reinsurance brokerage worldwide.

Business Location. Bangladesh, Costa Rica, Egypt, Indonesia, Myanmar, United Arab Emirates, Vietnam.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. 3,600,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. 11,416,814 in profits.
3. Intermediary. A tourism company associated with a Costa Rican government official; the son of a high-ranking government official in Bangladesh; third-party facilitators.
4. The foreign official. Officials at a government-owned reinsurance company in Costa Rica; officials at the Egyptian Armament Authority, an Egyptian government-owned company, and its U.S. arm, the Egyptian Procurement Office; unidentified individuals associated with Vietnam Airlines; unidentified Indonesian government officials; a senior manager at Myanmar Insurance, a government-owned entity; the son of a high-ranking government official in Bangladesh.

Influence to be Obtained. The SEC alleged that, from as early as 1983 until 2007, Aon's subsidiaries made over $3.6 million in improper payments to various parties as a means of obtaining or retaining insurance business in Costa Rica, Egypt, Vietnam, Indonesia, the United Arab Emirates, Myanmar, and Bangladesh. The improper payments allegedly made by Aon's subsidiaries fall into two general categories: (i) training, travel, and entertainment provided to employees of foreign government-owned clients and third parties; and (ii) payments made to third-party facilitators.

In Costa Rica, Aon's U.K. subsidiary, Aon Limited, allegedly administered two funds which disbursed approximately $865,000 to pay for travel and entertainment expenses for officials at the Instituto Nacional de Seguros ("INS"), a government-owned reinsurance company. The purported purpose of the funds was to provide training and education for INS employees, but a substantial number of the expenses served no legitimate business purpose. The majority of the amounts paid out by the two funds were to a tourism company in Costa Rica with which the director of reinsurance at INS was connected.

The SEC further alleges that, from 1998 through 2007, Aon Risk Services paid $100,000 to fund trips to the United States for a delegation of officials from the Egyptian Armament Authority and the Egyptian Procurement Office, an Egyptian government-owned company for which Aon served as an insurance broker. The SEC alleged that these delegation trips included a disproportionate amount of leisure activities and lasted longer than their business component would justify.

The SEC also alleges that Aon's subsidiaries made payments to third-party facilitators in Vietnam, Indonesia, the United Arab Emirates, Myanmar, and Bangladesh in connection with prospective accounts with government-owned companies. The third parties appeared to have performed no legitimate services in relation to these accounts. Certain employees of Aon subsidiaries were allegedly aware that part of the payments to these third parties would ultimately be funneled to officials at the government-owned entities to secure and retain business for Aon's subsidiaries.

²⁵⁹ SEC v. Aon Corporation, 1:11-cv-02256 (D.D.C. 2011).

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

The complaint alleges that none of these payments were accurately reflected in Aon's books and records and that Aon failed to maintain an adequate internal control system reasonably designed to detect and prevent the improper payments.

Enforcement. Without admitting or denying the allegations, Aon consented to the entry of a final judgment permanently enjoining it from future violations of the books and records and internal control provisions of the FCPA and ordering the company to pay $14,545,020 in disgorgement and prejudgment interest. Separately, Aon entered into a non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ and agreed to pay a 1.764 million penalty.

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

102. SEC v. Uriel Sharef, Ulrich Bock, Carlos Sergi, Stephan Signer, Herbert Steffen, Andres Truppel, and Bernd Regendantz (S.D.N.Y. 2011)²⁶⁰

Nature of the Business. Siemens AG is an engineering company headquartered in Munich, Germany. Siemens Business Services GmbH & Co. (“SBS”) and Siemens S.A. (“Siemens Argentina”) are both subsidiaries of Siemens AG. All allegations in this case are related to a project to develop a new national identity card in Argentina.

All of the defendants are non-U.S. citizens. Uriel Sharef, a dual citizen of Germany and Israel, was a member of Siemens AG’s Managing Board. German citizen Herbert Steffen was group president of Siemens AG’s transportation systems operating group, and was previously CEO of Siemens Argentina. Andres Truppel, a dual citizen of Germany and Argentina, was a consultant to Siemens, and previously CFO of Siemens Argentina. German citizen Ulrich Bock was a consultant to Siemens, and previously commercial head of SBS’s Major Projects subdivision. German citizen Stephan Signer worked for SBS as a commercial director. German citizen Bernd Regendantz was CFO of SBS. Argentine citizen Carlos Sergi was a businessman with extensive high-level government contracts in Argentina.

Business Location. Argentina.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $100 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $1 billion.
3. Intermediary. Business consultants and agents, shell companies.
4. The foreign official. Argentine government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the SEC’s Complaint, from approximately 1996 until early 2007, senior executives at Siemens and its regional company in Argentina, Siemens Argentina, paid bribes to senior Argentine government officials. The bribes were initially paid to secure a $1 billion government contract (the “DNI Contract”) to produce national identity cards for every Argentine citizen. SBS was the operating group responsible for managing the DNI Contract. The defendants allegedly worked to conceal the illicit payments through various means, including sham contracts and shell companies associated with Sergi and other intermediaries. In May 1999, however, the Argentine government suspended the DNI project. When a new government took power in Argentina, and in the hopes of getting the DNI project resumed, the defendants allegedly paid additional bribes to the incoming officials. When the project was terminated in May 2001, the defendants allegedly responded with a multi-faceted strategy to overcome the termination. According to the Complaint, the defendants sought to recover the anticipated proceeds of the DNI project, notwithstanding the termination, by causing Siemens AG to file a fraudulent arbitration claim against the Republic of Argentina. Defendants allegedly caused Siemens to actively hide from the arbitral tribunal the fact that the DNI Contract had been secured through corruption.

²⁶⁰ SEC v. Sharef et al., No. 11-cv-09073 (S.D.N.Y. 2011).

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

The Complaint also alleges that between 2002 and 2006, defendant Regendantz signed quarterly and annual certifications pursuant to the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, falsely representing that the financial statements of SBS did not contain fraudulent or misleading statements.

Enforcement. On December 13, 2011, the SEC filed a civil complaint against the defendants, alleging aiding and abetting violations of the anti-bribery, books and records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. The SEC also alleged substantive violations of the anti-bribery provision of the FCPA. On the same day, defendant Regendantz consented to a final judgment with the SEC, without admitting or denying the SEC's allegations. Regendantz was permanently enjoined from future violations and ordered to pay a civil penalty of $40,000, deemed satisfied by his payment of a €30,000 administrative fine ordered by the Public Prosecutor General in Munich, Germany.

Also on December 13, 2011, the DOJ filed a criminal indictment alleging similar facts against many of the defendants in the SEC case, adding two additional defendants (Eberhard Reichert and Miguel Czysch), but notably excluding Regendantz, the only SEC defendant to have settled with the authorities as of the date of the criminal indictment.

In October 2012, Steffen moved to dismiss the civil complaint, arguing that the court lacked personal jurisdiction over him and the SEC's claims are time-barred by statute. On February 19, 2013, Steffen's motion was granted for lack of personal jurisdiction.

On April 12, 2013, Uriel Sharef consented to entry of final judgment with the SEC without admitting or denying the allegations of the complaint. Sharef was permanently enjoined from future violations and ordered to pay a civil penalty of $275,000.

In October 2013, the SEC voluntarily dismissed the complaint against Sergi. On November 16, 2013, the SEC requested that the court enter a default and final judgment against Singer and Bock and further requested that they be permanently enjoined from future violations and ordered to pay civil penalties and disgorgement of ill-gotten gains. The motion is currently pending. Also in November 2013, the SEC indicated that it and counsel for Truppel had reached an agreement-in-principle to settle the SEC's claims, although the agreement remains subject to SEC approval and the terms have not been disclosed.

Previous DOJ and SEC actions against Siemens AG and its subsidiaries were filed and settled in 2008, in part based on the alleged conduct in Argentina. In the criminal action, all corporate defendants pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA, and agreed to pay criminal fines totaling $450 million. In the parallel SEC action against the corporate defendants, Siemens AG agreed to disgorge more than $350 million in ill-gotten profits. Siemens also settled with German authorities, agreeing to pay a total of €596 million in penalties.

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

101. In the Matter of Watts Water Technologies, Inc. and Leesen Chang (2011)²⁶¹

Nature of the Business. Watts Water Technologies, Inc. (“Watts”) is a Delaware corporation that designs, manufactures, and sells water valves and related products.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Unknown.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $2.7 million.
3. Intermediary. Local subsidiary.
4. The foreign official. Employees of design institutes owned by the Chinese government.

Influence to be Obtained. Between 2006 and 2009, Watts’s Chinese subsidiary, Watts Valve Changsha Co., Ltd. (“CWV”), produced and supplied large valve products for infrastructure projects in China. Leesen Chang was vice president of sales at the Watts subsidiary that managed CWV. In China, state-owned design institutes are frequently retained by the government to assist in the design and construction of infrastructure projects. Under Chang’s watch, CWV employees allegedly made improper payments to employees of certain design institutes to influence the institutes to recommend CWV valve products and create design specifications that favored CWV products. The improper payments were facilitated by a sales incentive policy created by CWV’s Chinese predecessor, before it had been acquired by Watts. The sales policy provided, among other things, that sales personnel could utilize their commissions to make payments to design institutes. As a result, the payments to design institutes were improperly recorded in Watts’ books and records as sales commissions.

Enforcement. In 2009, Watts became aware of potential FCPA violations at CWV and retained outside counsel to conduct an internal investigation. Watts publicly disclosed the internal investigation and on October 13, 2011, the SEC issued an administrative cease-and-desist order against Watts and Chang. Under the order, Watts was ordered to pay disgorgement of $2,755,815, prejudgment interest of $820,791, and a civil money penalty of $200,000. Chang was ordered to pay a civil money penalty of $25,000.

100. In the Matter of Diageo plc (2011)²⁶²

Nature of the Business. Diageo plc (“Diageo”) is a U.K. company that produces and distributes a wide variety of alcoholic beverages. Through its various direct and indirect subsidiaries, Diageo maintains operations in more than 180 countries.

Business Location. India, South Korea, Thailand.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Over $2.7 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Over $11 million in increased sales in India; approximately $50 million in tax rebates in South Korea; amount in Thailand unknown.
3. Intermediary. Third-party distributors, third-party sales promoters.
4. The foreign official. Employees of Indian Government Liquor Stores; employees of the Indian Military Canteen Stores Department; Indian government officials (North Region of India, State of Assam); Thai commerce, finance, and customs officials; members of the Thai Parliament; South Korean Customs Service officials; South Korean government officials; South Korean military officers.

Influence to be Obtained. The SEC found that from 2003 to 2009, Diageo India Pvt. Ltd. (Diageo’s wholly-owned indirect subsidiary based in India, “DI”) paid $792,310 through third-party distributors to employees of Indian government liquor stores to increase sales and improve product placement, as well as $186,299 in “cash service fees” to reimburse these distributors. The SEC also found that DI reimbursed $530,955 and made plans to reimburse an additional $79,364, to third-party sales promoters. The promoters made improper cash payments to Indian government employees of the military Canteen Stores Department to promote DI’s products, obtain listings and registration for Diageo’s brands and secure the release of seized shipments. The SEC found that DI also paid $78,622 in commissions to reimburse distributors for payments to Indian excise officials to secure import permits and administrative approvals. DI allegedly failed to properly account for these payments and fees.

In Thailand, the SEC found that from April 2004 to July 2008, Diageo Moet Hennessy Thailand (a joint venture of Diageo based in Thailand, “DT”) paid $599,322 to a consulting firm, knowing this money was for the benefit an active Thai government official. The official lobbied on behalf of DT on customs and tax disputes between Diageo and the government, meeting with senior commerce, finance, and customs authorities, as well as the Prime Minister, and members of the Thai parliament. DT allegedly improperly accounted for the monthly retainer paid to the Thai official.

According to the SEC, Diageo also faced significant tax and customs issues in South Korea. During negotiations on a difficult tax dispute, Diageo Korea Co. Ltd. (Diageo’s wholly-owned indirect subsidiary based in South Korea, “DK”) paid $109,253 in travel and entertainment costs to Korean customs and other government officials. After negotiations with South Korean officials on tax issues, a DK manager allegedly paid the equivalent of $86,339 to a Korean Customs Service official by means of a kickback to a third-party customs broker. The SEC found that DK improperly and falsely accounted for this cash reward payment and for the travel and entertainment expenses to other officials. The SEC also found that from 2002 to 2006, DK made payments in the form of holiday or business development gifts to South Korean military officers to obtain or maintain business and secure a competitive business advantage. DK allegedly failed to properly account for these gifts.

Enforcement. On July 27, 2011, the SEC issued a cease-and-desist order, alleging that Diageo and its subsidiaries failed to account for the various illicit payments in their books and records, and failed to devise and maintain internal account controls sufficient to detect and prevent such payments. Without admitting to any of the allegations, Diageo agreed to cease and desist from committing or causing any further violations, and agreed to pay disgorgement of $11,306,081, prejudgment interest of $2,067,739 and a civil penalty of $3,000,000 based on Diageo's cooperation with the SEC investigation.

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

99. SEC v. Armor Holdings, Inc. (2011)²⁶³

Nature of the Business. Manufacture and sales of military, law enforcement, and personal safety equipment. On July 31, 2007, after the conduct described in the complaint occurred, Armor Holdings, Inc. (“Armor Holdings”), a Delaware corporation, was acquired by BAE Systems, Inc., an indirect wholly-owned U.S. subsidiary of Britain’s BAE Systems PLC. Armor Products International, Ltd. (“API”) was a U.K. subsidiary of Armor Holdings. Armor Holdings Products, LLC (“AHP”) was a U.S. subsidiary of Armor Holdings.

Business Location. Indonesia, Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $4,594,028.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. More than $7.1 million in revenues and more than $1.5 million in profits.
3. Intermediary. Sales Agent/Consultant.
4. The foreign official. Officials at the United Nations.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the SEC’s Complaint, between 2001 and 2006, certain agents of Armor Holdings participated in a bribery scheme in which corrupt payments were authorized to be made to an official at the U.N. for the purpose of obtaining and retaining U.N. contracts for the supply of body armor to be used in U.N. peacekeeping missions. The agents allegedly caused API to enter into a sham consulting agreement with a third-party intermediary for purportedly legitimate services in connection with the sale of goods to the U.N. The Complaint alleges that the intermediary charged illegitimate or inflated commissions for its purported consulting services, and that Armor Holdings agents knew or consciously disregarded that some portion of these commissions would be offered to a U.N. official.

AHP also allegedly employed a separate accounting practice that disguised in the books and records of Armor Holdings commissions paid to third-party intermediaries who brokered the sale of goods to foreign governments. Even after being warned by internal and external accountants that this practice violated U.S. GAAP, the subsidiary continued the improper accounting practice. As a result, approximately $4,371,278 in commissions was not properly disclosed in the books and records of the company.

Enforcement. Without admitting or denying any of the SEC’s allegations, Armor Holdings consented to entry of a permanent injunction against further violations and agreed to pay $1,552,306 in disgorgement, $458,438 in prejudgment interest, and a civil money penalty of $3,680,000. Separately, Armor Holdings entered into a non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ, and agreed to pay a $10.29 million fine.

98. SEC v. Tenaris, S.A. (2011)²⁶⁴

Nature of the Business. Tenaris, S.A. (“Tenaris”) is a corporation organized under the laws of Luxembourg. Tenaris is a global manufacturer and supplier of steel pipe products and related services to the oil and gas industry throughout the world. Tenaris’s operations include supplying steel pipe and related services in the Caspian Sea region, including Uzbekistan, through Tenaris’s offices in Azerbaijan and Kazakhstan.

Business Location. Uzbekistan.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. More than $32,140.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unknown.
3. Intermediary. Agent.
4. The foreign official. Officials at OJSC O’ztashqineftgaz (“OAO”), a subsidiary of Uzbekneftegaz, the state-owned holding company of Uzbekistan’s oil and gas industry.

Influence to be Obtained. During 2006 and 2007, Tenaris utilized the services of an agent to bid on a series of contracts with OJSC O’ztashqineftgaz (“OAO”). In or around February 2007, Tenaris entered into an agreement to pay the agent a commission of 3.5% for access to confidential bid information. Using the confidential bid information, Tenaris was awarded the contract and OAO agreed to pay Tenaris $2,719,720 for pipe used in oil and gas development in Uzbekistan. In or around April and May 2007, Tenaris entered into an agreement to pay the agent a commission of 3% for bid information related to three additional OAO contracts. By using confidential bid information Tenaris was awarded the three contracts. Tenaris’s then-regional sales personnel understood that a portion of the commissions paid to the agent would be used to pay OAO officials.

Tenaris’s then-regional sales personnel also agreed to make payments to the Uzbek government agency, Uzbekexpertiza JSC (“Uzbekexpertiza”), to encourage Uzbekexpertiza not to investigate the bidding process. However, evidence of such payment was not found. According to the SEC, in or around 2007, Tenaris also failed to accurately account for these transactions with the agent and payments to OAO officials on their books and records. Tenaris’s system of internal controls also allegedly failed to detect or prevent payments to OAO officials, including a failure to ensure that proper due diligence was conducted on the agent.

Enforcement. In 2009, Tenaris disclosed the improper activity to the SEC, and in 2010, launched a world-wide investigation and took steps to update and improve its existing compliance programs. On May 17, 2011 Tenaris entered into a deferred prosecution agreement with the SEC, under which Tenaris agreed to pay disgorgement in the amount of $4,786,438 plus prejudgment interest of an estimated $641,900, totaling $5,428,338. Tenaris is the first company to ever enter into a deferred prosecution agreement with the SEC. Tenaris agreed to implement compliance measures, cooperate with the ongoing investigation, toll the statute of limitations, and observe and enhance reporting obligations. The deferred prosecution agreement allowed Tenaris to “neither admit nor deny” the allegations with only the proviso that it could not dispute the facts in any subsequent SEC proceeding. Tenaris must also refrain from seeking or accepting a U.S. federal or state tax credit or deduction for any monies paid pursuant to the deferred prosecution agreement.

On May 17, 2011, the DOJ and Tenaris also entered into a two-year non-prosecution agreement, under which Tenaris agreed to pay a monetary penalty in the amount of $3,500,000, implement rigorous compliance measures, toll the statute of limitations, adhere to enhanced reporting obligations, disclose required information, and cooperate fully with all law enforcement agencies.

See DOJ Digest Number B-122.

97. In the Matter of Rockwell Automation, Inc. (2011)²⁶⁵

Nature of the Business. Rockwell Automation, Inc. (“Rockwell”) is a global company that designs and manufactures industrial automation products and services. Rockwell is incorporated in Delaware and has its principal offices in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Rockwell Automation Power Systems (Shanghai) Ltd. (“RAPS-China”) was a wholly-owned subsidiary of Rockwell headquartered in Shanghai, China. In 2007, Rockwell sold RAPS-China to Baldor Electric Company. RAPS-China supplied industrial mechanical power transmission products and industrial motors and drives.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Travel and cash payments of over $1,500,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $1,771,000 in net profits.
3. Intermediary. Third-party intermediaries.
4. The foreign official. Employees of state-owned Chinese design institutes and employees of other unspecified Chinese state-owned companies.

Influence to be Obtained. The SEC alleged that, from 2003 through 2006, employees of RAPS-China, relying on third-party intermediaries, made over $1,065,000 in payments and funded approximately $450,000 in leisure travel for employees of Chinese state-owned design institutes (which were typically state-owned design engineering and technical integration enterprises) and other Chinese government-owned companies to influence sales contracts and obtain business from end-user state-owned customers. RAPS-China allegedly recorded these payments as legitimate business expenses in its books and records and failed to implement or maintain a system of internal accounting controls sufficient to prevent and detect the payments. Rockwell self-reported the payments after discovering them in 2006 through its normal financial review process.

Enforcement. On May 3, 2011, without admitting or denying the allegations, Rockwell consented to the entry of an order requiring it to cease and desist from violating the books and records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA and ordering Rockwell to pay disgorgement of $1,771,000, prejudgment interest of $590,091, and a civil money penalty of $400,000. The cease and desist order notes that Rockwell voluntarily self-reported the improper payments to the SEC and cooperated with the SEC’s subsequent investigation. Rockwell also undertook numerous remedial measures with respect to its internal controls and compliance program.

96. SEC v. Johnson & Johnson (D.D.C. 2011)²⁶⁶

Nature of the Business. Sale of medical devices and pharmaceuticals manufactured by DePuy, Inc. (“DePuy”) and DePuy International, both wholly-owned subsidiaries of Johnson & Johnson, a U.S.-based manufacturer and seller of health care products. Other subsidiaries, employees, and agents of Johnson & Johnson allegedly paid bribes to publicly-employed health care providers in Poland and Romania and paid kickbacks to the former government of Iraq in connection with the U.N. Oil for Food Program.

Business Location. Greece, Iraq, Poland, Romania.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Unspecified.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $38,227,826.
3. Intermediary. Greek distributor; Lebanese agent.
4. The foreign official. Publicly-employed doctors in Greece; publicly-employed doctors and hospital administrators in Poland; publicly-employed doctors and pharmacists in Romania; top Ministry of Health officials in Iraq.

Influence to be Obtained. From at least 1998 to 2006, DePuy International, through a Greek distributor which it later acquired, allegedly paid bribes to public doctors in Greece who selected DePuy’s surgical implants. The scheme featured a complicated web of transactions involving distributors and agents paid through commissions overseas and allegedly resulted in $24,258,072 in profit.

In Poland, a Johnson & Johnson subsidiary, MD&D Poland, allegedly made improper payments to publicly-employed doctors and hospital administrators in Poland to use their medical devices and award them medical device tenders from 2000 to 2006. This scheme was carried out through sham civil contracts and false travel invoices and resulted in approximately $4,348,000 in profit for the company. The SEC further alleged that, from 2000 to 2007, employees of Johnson & Johnson’s Romanian subsidiary, Pharma Romania, made improper payments to publicly-employed doctors and pharmacists in Romania to prescribe Johnson & Johnson products through cash and travel payments. Pharma Romania used local distributors to generate the cash that was ultimately paid to the doctors in exchange for the doctors prescribing Johnson & Johnson products. The purported profit to Johnson & Johnson from these sales was $3,515,500.

Finally, two other Johnson & Johnson subsidiaries in Europe – Cilag AG International and Janssen Pharmaceutica N.V. – were accused of paying a Lebanese agent an inflated commission that included a 10% kickback to the former government of Iraq for participation in the U.N. Oil for Food Program. The stated reason for the high commission to the Lebanese agent was “promotional activities,” yet that agent was unable to provide detailed evidence or description of any of those activities. There are allegations of $857,387 in kickbacks in connection with nineteen U.N. Oil for Food contracts. The total profit on those contracts is alleged to be $6,106,255.

Enforcement. Apart from the Oil-for-Food allegations, Johnson & Johnson had self-disclosed some wrongdoing and had conducted wide-reaching internal investigations. On April 8, 2011, without admitting or denying the facts alleged in the SEC's complaint, Johnson & Johnson consented to the entry of a court order permanently enjoining it from future violations of the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal control provisions of the FCPA; ordering it to pay $38,227,826 in disgorgement and $10,438,490 in prejudgment interest; and ordering it to comply with an FCPA compliance program.

95. SEC v. Converse Technology, Inc. (E.D.N.Y. 2011)²⁶⁷

Nature of the Business. Purchase orders between a telecommunications company partially owned by the Greek government and Converse Limited, an Israeli operating subsidiary of Converse Technology, Inc. (“Converse”), a provider of software systems and applications incorporated in New York.

Business Location. Greece, Cyprus, Israel.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $536,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $1,200,000 in net profits.
3. Intermediary. A third party agent and Fintron Enterprises Ltd. (“Fintron”), a shell entity incorporated in Cyprus.
4. The foreign official. Employees of Hellenic Telecommunications Organisation S.A. (“OTE”), which is partially owned by the Greek government, and certain of its subsidiaries.

Influence to be Obtained. In early 2003, Converse Limited allegedly engaged an agent to facilitate sales in Greece through Fintron. According to the SEC, Converse Limited employees negotiated orders with customers, directed the agent’s activities, and used Fintron to process and funnel improper payments made to procure that business. Converse Limited allegedly paid the agent a fee, 85% of which was used as a bribe amount to customers (including OTE), and then falsely recorded these bribes as commissions to Fintron and the agent. According to the SEC, the arrangement continued through 2006 and included $536,000 in improper payments to employees of OTE to obtain or retain business.

Enforcement. On April 6, 2011, the SEC filed a complaint against Converse, alleging that it had violated the books and records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. Six days later, following a settlement with the SEC, judgment was entered against Converse and it was ordered to pay $1,608,501 in disgorgement and prejudgment interest. Converse consented to the judgment, but neither admitted nor denied the SEC’s allegations.

94. In the Matter of Ball Corporation (2011)²⁶⁸

Nature of the Business. Ball Corporation, an Indiana corporation headquartered in Colorado, manufactures metal packaging for beverages, foods, and household products. Ball Corporation also provides aerospace and other technological services to commercial and government customers. Formametal, based in Argentina, is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Ball Corporation that manufactures aerosol cans.

Business Location. Argentina.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $106,749.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unspecified.
3. Intermediary. Customs Agents.
4. The foreign official. Customs Officials.

Influence to be Obtained. In 2006, Ball Corporation acquired Formametal and discovered that its newly acquired subsidiary had, in the past, made questionable payments associated with Argentinean customs. Despite this knowledge, Ball Corporation allegedly undertook insufficient remedial steps to ensure that illegal payments would not recur.

According to the SEC, from July 2006 until October 2007, Formametal senior officials authorized at least ten unlawful payments to Argentinean government officials, totaling approximately $106,749.00, for two purposes. First, Formametal allegedly paid bribes in excess of $100,000 to circumvent Argentinean law prohibiting the importation of used equipment and parts. Formametal disguised the alleged bribes as “customs fees” by detailing them on non-governmental customs agents’ invoices and identifying them as “customs advice” or professional fees which were booked to an “other expenses” account or to accounts associated with the related equipment.

In early 2007, two accountants at Ball Corporation discovered that Formametal reimbursed the Vice President of Institutional Affairs because the Vice President had allegedly personally paid one of the bribes to government officials for importation of used equipment and parts. To reimburse him, Formametal had given the Vice President a car, and to disguise the bribe, Formametal allegedly booked the transfer of the car as an interest expense. When Ball Corporation discovered that the car was reimbursement for a bribe, it allegedly rebooked the transfer as a miscellaneous expense.

Second, in October 2007, Formametal’s President allegedly authorized improper payments in an attempt to gain governmental approval to export copper scrap metal at reduced tariffs. After six months of attempts to secure the waiver legitimately, Formametal allegedly paid five bribes to customs officials through third-party customs agents to avoid payment of tariffs. Formametal inaccurately recorded the payment as “Advice fees for temporary merchandise exported” in an “other expenses” account.

Enforcement. Without admitting or denying the SEC’s findings, Ball Corporation consented to the entry of an order (i) ordering Ball Corporation to cease and desist from future violations of the books and records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA and (ii) ordering it to pay a civil penalty of $300,000. The order recognized remedial acts promptly undertaken Ball Corporation, Ball Corporation’s voluntary disclosure of the violations, and the company’s cooperation with the SEC investigation.

93. SEC v. International Business Machines Corporation (D.D.C. 2011)²⁶⁹

Nature of the Business. International Business Machines Corporation (“IBM”) is a New York corporation that manufactures and develops computer and information technology products and services. IBM-Korea is a South Korean corporation that sells IBM products in South Korea. IBM-Korea is an indirect subsidiary of IBM International Group B.V., which in turn is wholly-owned by IBM. IBM-China Investment Company Limited and IBM Global Services (China) Co., Ltd. (collectively “IBM-China”) are owned by IBM China/Hong Kong Limited, a Hong Kong company and wholly-owned subsidiary of IBM. LG IBM PC Co., Ltd. (“LG-IBM”) is a joint venture formed by IBM-Korea and LG Electronics to sell personal computers in South Korea. IBM holds a majority interest in LG-IBM.

Business Location. China, South Korea.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $207,157 in cash payments; entertainment, travel, and gifts of unspecified total value.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Contracts worth over $52,000,000.
3. Intermediary. Employees of IBM Korea and IBM-China and two key IBM-China managers.
4. The foreign official. Korean and Chinese government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. The SEC complaint alleges that, between 1998 and 2003, employees of IBM-Korea and LG-IBM made cash payments totaling $207,157 and provided entertainment, travel and gifts to South Korean government officials at 16 South Korean government entities in exchange for confidential bidding information and sales contracts for mainframe and personal computers.

The complaint further alleges that two key managers of IBM-China, and 100 IBM-China employees overall, provided trips, entertainment, and improper gifts to Chinese government officials from at least 2004 to early 2009. According to the SEC, IBM-China employees created slush funds to pay for the travel and entertainment expenses of these officials. In exchange, IBM-China was awarded contracts with government-owned or government-controlled entities for the provision of hardware, software, and other services. The SEC purported to identify at least 114 instances of invoices being fabricated, trips improperly documented, unapproved sightseeing activities, trips funded involving little or no business content, and provision of per diem payments and gifts to officials.

The complaint alleges that IBM failed to accurately record these payments in its books and records and lacked sufficient internal controls to detect and prevent these alleged violations.

Enforcement. On March 18, 2011, without admitting or denying the SEC’s allegations, IBM consented to the entry of a final judgment that permanently enjoins the company from violating the books and records and internal control provisions of the FCPA. IBM also agreed to pay $5,300,000 in disgorgement,

$2,700,000 in prejudgment interest, and a $2,000,000 civil penalty. U.S. District Judge Richard Leon, however, refused to approve the settlement unless it included a requirement that the company submit periodic reports to the SEC and the court regarding its efforts to comply with the FCPA, as well as any future violations of the FCPA and any new criminal or civil investigations. IBM and the SEC initially resisted, but ultimately consented to the additional requirement. The amended settlement was approved by Judge Leon on July 26, 2013.

92. SEC v. Tyson Foods, Inc. (D.D.C. 2011)²⁷⁰

Nature of the Business. Tyson Foods, Inc. (“Tyson”), headquartered in Arkansas, produces protein-based and prepared food products. Tyson de Mexico, Tyson’s wholly-owned subsidiary, operates three meat-processing facilities in Mexico and processes prepared foods for sale in Mexico and abroad.

Business Location. Mexico.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. More than $100,311.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Net profits of more than $880,000.
3. Intermediary. The wives of two Mexican government-employed veterinarians.
4. The foreign official. Veterinarians responsible for certifying meat exports under a federal inspection program in Mexico.

Influence to be Obtained. The SEC alleges that, from 2004 to 2006, Tyson executives permitted Tyson de Mexico to make illegal payments to Mexican government-employed veterinarians responsible for administering a federal inspection program for meat exports at Tyson de Mexico’s plants. Some of these payments were allegedly concealed in the form of salaries paid to the wives of the veterinarians for services never performed. The complaint further alleges that, in August 2004, Tyson executives terminated the salaries of the veterinarians’ wives and increased the amount of the service invoices paid to the veterinarians by the sum of the wives’ salaries. The improper payments were purportedly recorded as legitimate expenses in Tyson de Mexico’s books and records.

Enforcement. On February 10, 2011, the SEC filed a civil complaint against Tyson. Tyson consented to entry of a final judgment on February 14, 2011 without admitting or denying the SEC’s allegations. The judgment requires Tyson to pay a $1,214,477 penalty (including disgorgement of profits and prejudgment interest), engage in various compliance activities, and periodically report such activities to the SEC. In a related DOJ action, Tyson signed a deferred prosecution agreement that requires Tyson to pay a $4 million penalty.

91. SEC v. Maxwell Technologies Inc. (D.D.C. 2011)²⁷¹

Nature of the Business. Marketing and sales of high-voltage capacitors to Chinese state-owned entities by Maxwell S.A., a wholly-owned Swiss subsidiary of Maxwell Technologies, Inc. (“Maxwell”), a Delaware corporation that manufactures energy storage and power delivery products.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Over $2,500,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Over $5,600,000 in profits.
3. Intermediary. Sales Agent/Consultant.
4. The foreign official. Officials at Chinese state-owned entities.

Influence to be Obtained. Maxwell S.A. allegedly paid more than $2.5 million to a third-party sales agent in China to secure sales contracts for high-voltage capacitors with Chinese state-owned manufacturers of electrical-utility infrastructure. The complaint alleges that the agent accomplished these payments by inflating purchase orders by 20%, then distributing the extra amount to officials at the state-owned entities. Maxwell accounted for these fees as commission expenses in Maxwell’s books and records. Maxwell’s U.S. management discovered the bribery scheme in late 2002. However, the bribery scheme continued until 2009, when it was reported to the company’s new CEO by a new sales director. The sales and profits from these contracts purportedly helped Maxwell offset losses that it incurred to develop new products now expected to become Maxwell’s future source of revenue growth.

Enforcement. Without admitting or denying the allegations in the SEC’s complaint, Maxwell consented to the entry of a final judgment on January 31, 2011 that permanently enjoins the company from future violations of the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal control provisions of the FCPA. The judgment also ordered Maxwell to pay $5,654,576 in disgorgement and $696,314 in prejudgment interest and to undertake remediation and implementation of its FCPA compliance measures. Maxwell entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement in a related criminal case brought by the DOJ and agreed to pay an $8 million penalty.

90. SEC v. Paul W. Jennings (D.D.C. 2011)²⁷²

Nature of the Business. Manufacture and sales of fuel additives and other specialty chemicals by Innospec, Inc. (“Innospec”), a U.S. corporation with principal offices in the U.S. and the U.K.

Business Location. Indonesia, Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. More than $2.24 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. More than $17 million.
3. Intermediary. Sales Agent/Consultant.
4. The foreign official. Iraqi government officials (Ministry of Oil) and Indonesian government officials and officials of state-owned oil and gas companies in Indonesia (BP Migas and Pertamina).

Influence to be Obtained. From 2000 to 2007 Innospec paid more than $6.3 million in bribes and promised another $2.8 million in illicit payments to Iraqi and Indonesian government officials to obtain contracts for sales of tetraethyl lead (TEL). The SEC alleges that Jennings approved of these bribes beginning in mid- to late-2004 during his tenure as Chief Financial Officer, and continuing after he became Chief Executive Officer in 2005.

In Iraq, Jennings allegedly approved of bribery payments to Iraqi Ministry of Oil officials, through Innospec’s agent, Ousama M. Naaman. Through these payments, Innospec allegedly obtained additional TEL orders and favorable exchange rates, and facilitated TEL shipments. The SEC also alleges that Jennings was aware that payments were made to fund lavish trips for Iraqi government officials, and that various bribe payments were improperly booked as legitimate commission payments on Innospec’s books and records. In Indonesia, Jennings allegedly approved of bribes that were paid under various euphemisms, such as “the Indonesian Way,” “the Lead Defense Fund,” and “TEL Optimization.” Bribes were allegedly paid to Indonesian officials through Innospec’s Indonesian agent, to generate more TEL sales. The SEC alleges that Jennings was involved in discussions regarding the bribery scheme and approved of, or was aware of, the payments to Indonesian government officials.

Enforcement. Without admitting or denying any of the SEC’s allegations, Jennings was ordered to disgorge $116,092, representing profits gained as a result of the alleged conduct, together with prejudgment interest thereon of $12,945, and a civil penalty of $100,000. Innospec has offered to pay $40.2 million as part of a global settlement with the SEC, the DOJ, the United Kingdom’s Serious Fraud Office (“SFO”), and the U.S. Department of the Treasury’s Office of Foreign Assets Control (“OFAC”). Innospec agreed to pay disgorgement of $11.2 million to the SEC, a criminal fine of $14.1 million to the DOJ, a criminal fine of $12.7 million to the SFO and $2.2 million to OFAC. Innospec also agreed to injunctive relief and certain undertakings regarding its FCPA compliance program, including an Business Location. Costa Rica, Honduras, Malaysia, and Taiwan.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. More than $8 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $463 million.
3. Intermediary. Consultants and subsidiaries.
4. The foreign official. Officials of state-owned entities and government agencies including, but not limited to, Instituto Costarricense de Electricidad S.A. (Costa Rica); Empresa Hondureña de Telecomunicaciones (Honduras); Comisión Nacional de Telecomunicaciones (Honduras); Telekom Malaysia Berhad (Malaysia); and Taiwan Railway Administration (Taiwan).

Influence to be Obtained. According to a complaint filed by the SEC on December 27, 2010, Alcatel S.A. (“Alcatel”) and its subsidiaries, including Alcatel CIT, S.A., Alcatel Standard, A.G., and Alcatel de Costa Rica, S.A., paid bribes to government officials in Costa Rica, Honduras, Taiwan, and Malaysia, to obtain or retain telecommunications contracts. The payments were allegedly undocumented or improperly recorded as consulting fees in the books of Alcatel’s subsidiaries. All of the alleged payments took place before Alcatel’s merger with Lucent Technologies in November 2006. Lucent Technologies itself entered into a separate agreements in December 2007 with the DOJ and the SEC related to pre-merger offenses.

Enforcement. On December 29, 2010, Alcatel-Lucent consented to entry of a final judgment without admitting or denying the allegations in the SEC’s complaint, which had been filed on December 27, 2010. Alcatel-Lucent was ordered to pay disgorgement of $28,990,937, and prejudgment interest of $16,381,063, for a total of $45,372,000, and to engage an independent compliance monitor for a term of three years.

88. SEC v. RAE Systems Inc. (D.D.C. 2010)²⁷⁴

Nature of the Business. RAE Systems Inc. (“RAE”) is a Delaware corporation based in San Jose, California that develops and manufactures rapidly-deployable, multi-sensor chemical and radiation detection monitors and networks. Its operations in China involve two Chinese joint ventures: RAE-KLH (Beijing) Co., Limited (“RAE-KLH”), which is 96% owned by RAE, and RAE Coal Mine Safety Instruments (Fushun) Co., Ltd. (“RAE-Fushun”), which is 70% owned by RAE.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $400,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $3,000,000.
3. Intermediary. Joint-venture entities and a third-party agent.
4. The foreign official. Employees of Chinese state-owned entities including employees of the Dagang Oil Field.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the SEC’s complaint, when RAE sought to acquire an interest in KLH it carried out due diligence through which it uncovered that KLH sales personnel historically financed their sales activities with state-owned companies through cash advances reimbursed by the company and that such cash advances were used to pay bribes. After acquiring its interest in KLH in 2004, RAE allegedly communicated to RAE-KLH personnel and officers that bribery practices should stop, but did not institute sufficient internal controls or discontinue the system of cash-advance reimbursements which facilitated the bribery practices.

Throughout 2005 and 2006, RAE allegedly failed to investigate and remediate through the implementation of adequate internal controls when it encountered evidence of multiples instances of bribery and kickback activities taking place at RAE-KLH. For example, during a visit to China in 2005 RAE’s then Vice President and Chief Financial Officer allegedly observed that RAE-KLH had not received proper receipts for $500,000 in cash advances and reported that it was possible the cash had been used for “grease payments.” In response, RAE-KLH put in place a compliance program, but, according to the government, controls remained insufficient to prevent bribery from taking place. Moreover, the company improperly recorded cash advances connected to bribes as business fees and travel and entertainment expenses.

Through 2007 bribery continued at both RAE-KLH, paid directly and through a third-party agent, and at a new joint venture entered by RAE in China, RAE-Fushan, according to the government. In addition to cash bribes, both companies allegedly provided luxury gifts to employees of state owned entities such as notebook computers, jade, fur coats, appliances, suits, and expensive liquor.

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

Enforcement. On December 10, 2010, without admitting or denying the SEC's allegations, RAE consented to the entry of final judgment, under which it is enjoined from violating the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. Under the terms of the settlement, RAE will pay a total of $1,257,012 in disgorgement and prejudgment interest. RAE will also continue to review its internal controls and modify them to ensure no further violations of the books and records or anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA, among other remediation steps. RAE also agreed to self-report any questionable or corrupt payments it discovers it has made or false entries in its books and records to the SEC. Over three years, RAE must undertake internal reviews of its remediation efforts and report them to the SEC. The court entered final judgment in the case on December 15, 2010.

87. SEC v. GlobalSantaFe Corp. (D.D.C. 2010)²⁷⁵

Nature of the Business. Offshore oil and gas drilling services for oil and gas exploration companies incorporated in the Cayman Islands and headquartered in Texas. GlobalSantaFe Corp.'s ("GSF") direct subsidiary, Global Offshore Drilling Ltd., operated in West Africa. In November 2007, GSF merged with a subsidiary of Transocean Inc. In December 2008, the listed company became Transocean Ltd.

Business Location. Nigeria, Gabon, Angola, and Equatorial Guinea.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $469,4000 in illicit payments to government officials in Nigeria, Gabon, Angola, and Equatorial Guinea.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $2.7 million in profits.
3. Intermediary. Customs brokers.
4. The foreign official. Nigerian Customs Service ("NCS") officials and unspecified Gabon, Angolan, and Equatorial Guinean government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. Between January 2002 and July 2007, GSF allegedly, through its customs brokers, made illegal payments to NCS officials to obtain preferential treatment during the customs process for the purpose of assisting GSF in retaining business in Nigeria. Instead of moving its oil drilling rigs out of Nigerian waters as required by Nigerian law when GSF's permit to temporarily import the rigs into Nigeria expired, GSF's customs brokers allegedly made payments to obtain documentation reflecting that the rigs had moved out of Nigerian waters, when in fact, the rigs had not moved at all. In addition, GSF allegedly made a number of suspicious payments to government officials in Gabon, Angola, and Equatorial Guinea. These payments were described on invoices as, for example, "customs vacation," "customs escort," "costs extra police to obtain visa," "official dues," and "authorities fees." According to the SEC, these payments were not accurately reflected in GSF's books and records, nor was GSF's system of internal accounting controls adequate at the time to detect and prevent these illegal payments.

Enforcement. On October 22, 2010, GSF consented to the entry of a court order permanently enjoining it from violating the anti-bribery and record keeping and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. Without admitting or denying the SEC's allegations, GSF also consented to the entry of a court order requiring GSF disgorge profits of $2,694,405 plus prejudgment interest of $1,063,760, and pay a civil penalty of $2.1 million.

Panalpina also made payments on behalf of its customers to obtain improper benefits concerning customs and immigration matters.

In Angola, Panalpina allegedly made illegal payments to Angolan officials on behalf of its customers to avoid fines, expedite or facilitate the approval or correction of incomplete or inaccurate documentation, avoid customs duties, circumvent Angolan immigration law, and illegally use military cargo aircraft to transport commercial goods.

From 2002 to 2005, SIEP allegedly authorized dealings with companies acting as customs brokers and freight forwarders, involving suspicious payments to Nigerian customs officials. Through these payments, Shell allegedly obtained preferential treatment during the customs process in Nigeria relating to Shell’s Bonga Project.

While the freight forwarder was not specifically identified by the SEC, the deferred prosecution agreement in the related DOJ criminal proceeding and the DOJ’s subsequent press release indicate that Panalpina World Transport (Holding) Ltd. (“Panalpina”) was the freight forwarder that allegedly made suspicious payments on Shell’s behalf.

Enforcement. On November 4, 2010, without admitting or denying the SEC’s findings, Shell consented to entry of an order requiring it to cease-and-desist from the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. It also made illicit payments through Panalpina World Transport (Holding) Ltd. (“Panalpina”), a freight forwarder, to expedite the import of various goods, equipment and materials into Nigeria.

2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $6.62 million.
3. Intermediary. Freight forwarder, agent.
4. The foreign official. Azeri tax officials; Nigerian customs officials.

Influence to be Obtained. From 2001 to 2005, Tidewater allegedly made payments totaling approximately $160,000 to an entity in Dubai, knowing that the funds would go to tax officials in Azerbaijan to obtain favorable results in an audit of Tidewater’s Azeri offices.

From 2002 to 2007, Tidewater allegedly reimbursed improper payments made by its Nigerian agent, “the Nigerian affiliate of a major international freight forwarding and customs clearing agent based in Switzerland,” to Nigerian customs officials. While the SEC did not identify the Nigerian agent by name, the DOJ’s press release regarding its criminal action against Tidewater’s Panamanian subsidiary, Tidewater Marine International, Inc. (“TMII”), states that it was the Nigerian subsidiary of Panalpina World Transport (Holding) Ltd. (“Panalpina”). These payments were made on behalf of Tidewater to circumvent certain regulations regarding the importation of Tidewater’s vessels in Nigerian waters.

Enforcement. On November 4, 2010, without admitting or denying the SEC’s findings, Tidewater consented to entry of an order requiring it to cease and desist from committing further violations of the anti-bribery, books and records and internal control provisions of the FCPA and pay disgorgement of $8,321,000.

On the same day, TMII also entered into a deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ.

²⁸⁰ S.E.C. v. Pride Int’l, Inc., No. 4:10-cv-4335 (S.D. Tex. 2010).

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

In the Republic of Congo, Pride's Congolese subsidiary allegedly made a payment of $8,000 to a Congolese Merchant Marine official to resolve a paperwork deficiency and thus avoid an official penalty.

In Libya, Pride's Libyan subsidiary allegedly made payments totaling $116,000, through an unidentified third-party tax agent, to Libyan social security agency officials to reduce social security taxes and penalties.

Pride voluntarily disclosed to the DOJ and SEC possible FCPA violations discovered in a routine audit. While the SEC complaint does not specifically identify the freight forwarder Pride used in Nigeria and Kazakhstan, the DOJ noted in a press release that, during the course of its cooperation with the DOJ and SEC, Pride provided information and substantially assisted in the investigation of Panalpina World Transport (Holding) Ltd. ("Panalpina").

Enforcement. On November 4, 2010, without admitting or denying the SEC's findings, Pride consented to entry of an order of judgment against it. 81. SEC v. Noble Corp. (S.D. Tex. 2010)²⁸¹

Nature of the Business. Noble Corporation (“Noble”) is an international oil and gas drilling contractor that owns and operates drilling rigs through its subsidiaries and affiliates. In March 2009, Noble redomesticated from the Cayman Islands and is now incorporated in Switzerland; the company is headquartered in Sugar Land, Texas.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. At least $79,026.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. At least $4,294,933.
3. Intermediary. Customs agent.
4. The foreign official. Nigeria Customs Service officials.

Influence to be Obtained. Between January 2003 and May 2007, Noble’s Nigerian subsidiary (“Noble-Nigeria”) allegedly paid a total of at least $79,026 as “special handling charges” to its Nigerian customs agent. Noble-Nigeria and certain employees of Noble Drilling Services Inc., Noble’s U.S.-subsidiary, had allegedly been informed that a portion of the money paid to the Nigerian customs agent would be paid to the Nigeria Customs Service officials for the purpose of illegally obtaining extensions for the temporary import permits for the rigs in the Nigerian waters, so as to avoid the need to either permanently import the rigs or export and re-import the rigs to obtain new temporary import permits.

Enforcement. In June 2007, Noble informed the SEC that it was conducting an internal investigation of its operations in Nigeria and thereafter disclosed the findings and cooperated with the government’s investigations. On November 4, 2010, Noble, without admitting or denying the allegations, consented to the entry of final judgment, under which Noble would be enjoined from violating the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal controls provisions of the FCPA and pay a total of $5,576,998 in disgorgement of its profits gained and costs avoided, with prejudgment interest.

80. SEC v. Bobby J. Elkin, Jr., Baxter J. Myers, Thomas G. Reynolds, and Tommy L. Williams (D.D.C. 2010)²⁸²

Nature of the Business. The four defendants were executives at Dimon, Inc., which engaged in the purchase and fermentation of tobacco in Kyrgyzstan through its wholly-owned local subsidiary.

Business Location. Kyrgyzstan and Thailand.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Over $3.2 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Over $9.4 million.
3. Intermediary. Tobacco sales agents.
4. The foreign official. Tamekisi, the Kyrgyzstan governmental agency responsible for issuing tobacco export licenses, officials and Thailand Tobacco Monopoly (“TTM”) officials.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the complaint filed by the SEC, Bobby J. Elkin, Jr., a former Dimon country manager for Kyrgyzstan, authorized, directed, and paid bribes in Kyrgyzstan through a bank account in his name referred to as the “Special Account.” The payments were made to obtain export licenses and gain access to government tobacco processing facilities. The SEC’s complaint further alleges that defendant Baxter J. Myers, a former Dimon Regional Financial Director, authorized all fund transfers from another Dimon subsidiary’s bank account to the “Special Account” and that Thomas G. Reynolds, a former Dimon Corporate Controller, formalized the accounting methodology used to record the payments made from the “Special Account” for purposes of Dimon’s internal reporting.

Dimon allegedly paid bribes of approximately $542,590 to government officials of the TTM in exchange for obtaining approximately $9.4 million in sales contracts. Tommy L. Williams, a former Dimon Senior Vice President of Sales, allegedly directed the sales of tobacco from Brazil and Malawi to the TTM through Dimon’s agent in Thailand and authorized the payment of bribes to officials at the TTM. These bribes were characterized in Dimon’s books and records as “commissions” to Dimon’s agent in Thailand.

Enforcement. The SEC alleged the four defendants violated the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA and aiding and abetting violations. On August 26, 2010, without admitting or denying the allegations in the SEC’s complaint, the defendants consented to the entry of final judgments permanently enjoining each of them from violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA. Myers and Reynolds were ordered to pay monetary penalties of $40,000 each.

79. SEC v. Universal Corporation (D.D.C. 2010)17²⁸³⁸

Nature of the Business. Universal Corporation, a holding company incorporated in Virginia, operates primarily through its wholly-owned subsidiary, Universal Leaf Tobacco Company, Incorporated (“Universal Leaf”) and Universal Leaf’s domestic and international subsidiaries (collectively, “Universal”). Universal purchases, processes, and sells leaf tobacco worldwide.

Business Location. Malawi, Mozambique, and Thailand.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. At least $1.8 million in improper payments by Universal.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Over $11.5 million in sales contracts.
3. Intermediary. Tobacco sales agents.
4. The foreign official. Officials of the Thailand Tobacco Monopoly (“TTM”), official of the Malawian government, and officials of the Mozambique government.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the complaint filed by the SEC, payments were made to government officials in Thailand and Mozambique to obtain or retain business and favorable contracts for Universal. Allegedly, between 2000 and 2004, Universal paid approximately $800,000 to government officials in Thailand and more than $165,000 to government officials in Mozambique. Between 2002 and 2003, Universal allegedly paid $850,000 to high-ranking Malawian government officials. The SEC alleges that employees at multiple levels within Universal, including management at headquarters and employees at wholly- and majority-owned and controlled foreign subsidiaries were responsible for the improper payments. The SEC alleges that Universal made these payments to secure, amongst other things, an exclusive right to purchase tobacco from regional growers and to procure legislation beneficial to the company’s business.

Enforcement. On August 24, 2010, without admitting or denying the SEC’s allegations Universal consented to the entry of a final judgment permanently enjoining it from violating the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal control provisions of the FCPA. Universal was also ordered to disgorge $4,581,276.

In related criminal proceedings, the DOJ brought charges against Universal Leaf Tabacos, Ltda., a Universal subsidiary in Brazil, and two of Universal competitor Alliance One’s subsidiaries, charging each with violating and conspiring to violate the anti-bribery provisions of FCPA. The parent corporations entered into non-prosecution agreements with the DOJ.

78. SEC v. Alliance One International, Inc. (D.D.C. 2010)17²⁸⁴⁷

Nature of the Business. Dimon, Inc. (“Dimon”) and Standard Commercial Corporation (“Standard”) merged in May 2005 to form Alliance One International, Inc. (“Alliance One”), a Virginia corporation. Like its predecessors, Alliance One purchases, processes, and sells leaf tobacco worldwide.

Business Location. Greece, Indonesia, Kyrgyzstan, and Thailand.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. At least $4,400,000 in improper payments.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Alliance One obtained over $18.3 million in sales contracts for its subsidiaries in Brazil and Malawi.
3. Intermediary. Tobacco sales agents.
4. The foreign official. Officials of the Thailand Tobacco Monopoly (“TTM”) and tax officials in Greece and Indonesia.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the complaint filed by the SEC, from 2000 to 2004, Dimon and Standard together paid bribes of more than $1.2 million to government officials of the TTM. Standard also provided gifts, travel, and entertainment expenses to foreign government officials in the Asia region, including China and Thailand, and in 2004 it made a $50,000 payment to a political candidate, who was also its tobacco sales agent in Thailand. According to the SEC, in 2003, a Dimon subsidiary in Greece paid $96,000 to a Greek tax official in exchange for an agreement not to pursue tax irregularities in an audit, and another Dimon subsidiary in Indonesia made a $44,000 cash payment to an Indonesian tax official in exchange for a tax refund. Dimon allegedly characterized the payment of bribes to TTM officials as commissions paid to Dimon’s agent in Thailand. Similarly, Standard personnel allegedly authorized improper payments to TTM officials and failed to record those payments accurately in Standard’s books and records. The SEC alleges that most of these payments were delivered in bags filled with $100 bills to a high-ranking government official.

In addition, the SEC alleged that employees of Dimon International Kyrgyzstan, a subsidiary of Dimon, paid approximately $3 million in bribes from 1996 to 2004 to various officials in the Republic of Kyrgyzstan, including officials of the Kyrgyz Tamekisi, a government entity that controlled and regulated the tobacco industry in Kyrgyzstan. Dimon employees allegedly paid bribes totaling $254,262 to five local provincial government officials, known as “Akims,” to obtain permission to purchase tobacco from local growers during the same period. In addition, the employees allegedly paid approximately $82,000 in bribes to officers of the Kyrgyz Tax Police to avoid penalties and lengthy tax investigations.

Enforcement. On August 26, 2010, without admitting or denying the SEC’s allegations, Alliance One consented to the entry of a final judgment permanently enjoining it and its subsidiaries from violating the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal control provisions of the FCPA. Alliance One was also ordered to disgorge $10,000,000.

In related criminal proceedings, the DOJ brought criminal actions against two Alliance One subsidiaries and Universal Leaf Tabacos, Ltda., a Brazilian subsidiary of Universal Corporation, a competitor of Alliance One, charging each with conspiring to violate the anti-bribery provisions of FCPA and violating the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA. The parent corporations entered into non-prosecution agreements with the DOJ, agreed to pay criminal penalties of $9,450,000 and $4,400,000, respectively, and agreed to retain an independent monitor for at least three years.

In other related civil proceedings, the SEC charged four Dimon executives with FCPA violations in connection with business in Kyrgyzstan. Without admitting or denying the charges, the four executives consented to injunctive relief and two paid monetary penalties.

77. SEC v. ABB Ltd (D.D.C. 2010)²⁸⁵

Nature of the Business. ABB Ltd. is a Swiss public corporation which provides power and automation products and services around the globe. Two of its subsidiaries, ABB Inc., a Delaware corporation based in Sugar Land, TX, and ABB Ltd. – Jordan, provide products and services to electrical utilities, including state-owned utilities.

Business Location. Iraq and Mexico.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $2.7 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. At least $100 million.
3. Intermediary. Mexican companies purporting to act as service and support providers.
4. The foreign official. Officials at Comisión Federal de Electricidad (“CFE”), a Mexican state-owned utility company; regional companies of the Iraqi Electricity Commission.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

Six subsidiaries of ABB Ltd. allegedly paid more than $800,000 in kickbacks to the former Iraqi government to obtain 27 contracts for the sale of goods under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program, and promised to pay additional kickbacks of $239,501 on three other contracts. The total revenues on the contracts were approximately $13,577,727 and profits were $3,801,367. ABB Ltd. – Jordan acted as a conduit for other ABB subsidiaries by making the kickback payments on ABB Ltd. – Jordan contracts, as well as on contracts awarded to other ABB subsidiaries, in the form of bank guarantees and cash payments. ABB Ltd. – Jordan allegedly concealed these kickbacks on its books by mischaracterizing them as legitimate after-sales service fees, consultation costs, or commissions.

The government did not allege bribery of any individual foreign governmental officials.

Additionally, from 1997 to 2004, ABB Inc. allegedly paid bribes that totaled approximately $1.9 million to government officials and others in Mexico to obtain and retain business with two government owned electrical utilities, CFE and Luz y Fuerza del Centro. The bribes were allegedly funneled through phony invoices for local services submitted by several intermediary companies. ABB Ltd. failed to conduct due diligence on the use or payment terms used with these companies, or to conduct any review of the payments. As a result of this alleged scheme, ABB Inc. was awarded contracts that generated over $90 million in revenues and $13 million in profits. The illicit payments were recorded on ABB Ltd.'s books as payments for commissions and services on the government utilities projects.

The complaint also alleges that ABB Ltd. failed to devise and maintain an effective system of internal controls to prevent or detect either of these anti-bribery and books and records violations.

Enforcement. On September 29, 2010, the SEC filed a settled enforcement action against ABB Ltd., charging it with violations of the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal control provisions of the FCPA. Without admitting or denying the allegations in the complaint, ABB Ltd. consented to the entry of a final judgment that 1) permanently enjoined the company from similar future violations, 2) ordered the company to pay $22,804,262 in disgorgement and prejudgment interest, 3) ordered the company to pay a $16,510,000 civil penalty, and 4) required the company to comply with certain undertakings regarding its FCPA compliance program. In related criminal proceedings, ABB Ltd. entered a deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ under which it agreed to pay $30.4 million in criminal penalties.

76. SEC v. David P. Turner and Ousama M. Naaman (D.D.C. 2010)²⁸⁶

Nature of the Business. Sale of fuel additives used in the refining of leaded gasoline and some types of jet fuel. Ousama M. Naaman is a Lebanese/Canadian dual national, with principal business offices in Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates. Naaman acted as the agent in Iraq for Innospec Inc. (“Innospec”), a Delaware corporation based in the United Kingdom. In that role, Naaman negotiated contracts with the Iraqi Ministry of Oil for the provision of gasoline additives to oil refineries operating in Iraq. David Turner, a former Business Director for Innospec, was responsible for authorizing agreements with the Iraqi Ministry of Oil, as well as agreements to sell gasoline additives to various state-owned oil companies in Indonesia.

Business Location. Iraq and Indonesia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $6,347,588.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $176,77,341 in revenues and $60,071,613 in profits.
3. Intermediary. Agents.
4. The foreign official. Iraqi Ministry of Oil and unspecified Iraqi and Indonesian government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

From 2001 to 2008, Naaman allegedly promised or made over $3.7 million in kickback and bribery payments to Iraqi government officials in exchange for contracts with the Iraqi Ministry of Oil to purchase a gasoline additive from Innospec.

Between 2001 and 2003, Naaman negotiated five agreements under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program, including a 10% increase in the price of each to cover the kickbacks to three Iraqi Ministry of Oil refineries. Officials at Innospec devised a scheme to pay inflated commissions to Naaman that Naaman would use to funnel kickbacks to Iraq. Naaman allegedly made improper payments of approximately $1,853,754 and offered additional kickbacks of $1,985,897 to the Iraqi government. Innospec earned revenues of approximately $45,804,915 and profits of $23,125,820 under these agreements. Allegedly, Turner was aware of the alleged kickback scheme in Iraq and made false statements to internal auditors to conceal it.

²⁸⁶ SEC v. David P. Turner and Ousama M. Naaman, No. 1:10-cv-01309-RMC (D.D.C. 2010).

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

From 2004 to 2008, Turner also allegedly approved $1,369,269 in bribes to Iraqi officials under a long-term purchase agreement that Innospec entered into, through Naaman, with the Iraqi Ministry of Oil. Naaman paid these bribes, and also paid an official in the Trade Bank of Iraq in exchange for a favorable exchange rate on letters of credit for purchases under the agreement. In 2008, a second long-term purchase agreement was agreed to by Turner and entered into by Naaman under which Innospec would have paid $850,000 in bribes to Iraqi ministry officials. In addition, Turner allegedly directed Naaman to pay $155,000 in bribes to Iraqi Ministry of Oil officials to ensure Innospec's competitors' product would fail field trial tests. All of these payments were improperly booked as legitimate commissions to Naaman. From 2002 to 2008, Naaman, with Turner's approval, also allegedly arranged or paid approximately $120,538 in travel, gifts, and entertainment expenses for Iraqi senior officials.

From 2000 through 2005, Turner allegedly authorized and directed the payment of bribes to Indonesian government officials in exchange for orders of gasoline additives by Indonesian state-owned oil and gas companies. These bribes were made through an Indonesian agent who submitted fictitious invoices for the payments. The illicit payments totaled approximately $2,883,507 and were inaccurately recorded in Innospec's books and records as "sales commissions." Innospec's revenues in connection with the bribes were approximately $48,571,937 and its profits were $21,506,610.

Enforcement. On August 5, 2010, the SEC filed a settled enforcement action against Turner and Naaman, charging them both with violating the FCPA, falsifying documents, and aiding and abetting Innospec's violations of the FCPA. Without admitting or denying the SEC's allegations, Turner and Naaman have consented to the entry of final judgments that permanently enjoin them from similar future violations. Naaman was ordered to disgorge $810,076 plus prejudgment interest of $67,030, and pay a civil penalty of $438,038. Turner will disgorge $40,000. Turner's extensive and ongoing cooperation in the investigation was noted by the SEC.

75. SEC v. General Electric Co., Ionics, Inc., and Amersham PLC (D.D.C. 2010)²⁸⁷

Nature of the Business. General Electric (“GE”) is an international company participating in a wide variety of markets, including the generation, transmission, and distribution of electricity, lighting, industrial automation, medical imaging equipment, motors, railway locomotives, aircraft jet engines, and aviation services. GE is headquartered in Fairfield, Connecticut.

Business Location. Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $3.6 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $18.4 million.
3. Intermediary. Agent.
4. The foreign official. Iraqi Health Ministry and Iraqi Oil Ministry officials.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” (“ASSF”) from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

According to the SEC’s complaint, four GE subsidiaries, Marquette, OEC-Medical, Nycomed, and Ionics Italba, only two of which, Marquette and OEC-Medical were GE subsidiaries during the relevant period, engaged in Oil-for-Food transactions involving ASSF kickbacks. These subsidiaries entered into a total of eighteen contracts in which ASSF kickbacks were either made or authorized. These subsidiaries inaccurately described the in-kind and cash ASSF payments in their books and records and failed to maintain adequate internal controls to detect or prevent the illicit payments. According to the SEC’s complaint, the kickback scheme occurred from approximately 2000 to 2003.

The government did not allege bribery of any individual foreign governmental officials.

The SEC alleges that Marquette, based in Germany, either paid or agreed to pay illegal kickbacks worth $1.5 million in the form of computer equipment, medical supplies, and services to the Iraqi Ministry of Health. Marquette used an Iraqi third-party agent to obtain three contracts worth $8.8 million to cover the cost of the illegal kickbacks, Marquette increased the Iraqi agent’s commission by 10%. The agent used this 10% to cover the cost of the equipment and services he kicked back to the Iraqi Ministry of Health. The U.N. contract prices were inflated by a corresponding 10% amount.

²⁸⁷ SEC v. General Electric Co., No. 10-cv-01258 (D.D.C. 2010).

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

OEC-Medical, based in Switzerland, allegedly paid illegal kickbacks worth $870,000 in the form of computer equipment, medical supplies, and services to the Iraqi Ministry of Health on one contract worth $2.1 million. OEC-Medical also increased the agent's commission on the contract by approximately 10% to conceal the kickback, OEC-Medical and the agent entered into a fictitious "service provider agreement" purportedly identifying services the agent would perform to justify his increased commission.

Nycomed, based in Norway, allegedly paid approximately $750,000 in kickbacks on nine contracts with the Iraqi Ministry of Health worth approximately $5 million in profits. A Nycomed salesperson allegedly explicitly authorized the payments and increased an agent's commission and the U.N. contract prices by 10% to conceal the kickback. GE acquired Nycomed's parent company, Amersham plc, based in the United Kingdom, in 2004, after the conduct at issue.

Ionics Italba, based in Italy, allegedly paid $795,000 in kickbacks and earned $2.3 million in profits on five contracts to sell water treatment equipment to the Iraqi Oil Ministry. Four of the five contracts were negotiated with side letters documenting the Ionics Italba's commitment to make kickback payments. These letters were concealed from U.N. inspectors. Ionics Italba artificially inflated the prices charged to the U.N. by 10% to cover the cost of the kickback payments. GE acquired Ionics Italba's parent company, Ionics, Inc., based in Massachusetts, in 2005, after the conduct at issue.

Enforcement. On July 30, 2010, without admitting or denying the allegations in the SEC's complaint, GE, Ionics, Inc. and Amersham PLC consented to entry of a final judgment enjoining them from future books and records and internal controls FCPA violations and ordering GE to disgorge $18,397,949 in profits, plus $4,080,665 in prejudgment interest, and pay a civil penalty of $1,000,000.

The SEC's jurisdictional grounds for bringing enforcement against Amersham plc was based on the company listing American Depository Receipts on the New York Stock Exchange. Similarly, Ionics, Inc. was a publicly-listed company in the United States, and was therefore, subject to the SEC jurisdiction.

The SEC took GE's prompt remediation and cooperation into account.

74. SEC v. ENI, S.p.A. and Snamprogetti Netherlands B.V. (S.D. Tex. 2010)²⁸⁸

Nature of the Business. Engineering, procurement, and construction (“EPC”) contracts for natural gas liquefaction facilities at Bonny Island in Nigeria (“Bonny Island Project”) as part of a four-company joint venture. Snamprogetti Netherlands B.V. (“Snamprogetti”) is a corporation organized under the laws of the Netherlands and headquartered in Amsterdam. During the conduct at issue, Snamprogetti was a wholly-owned subsidiary of ENI S.p.A. (“ENI”); it is currently a wholly-owned subsidiary of Saipem S.p.A. (“Saipem”).

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $180 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Over $6 billion.
3. Intermediary. Agents.
4. The foreign official. Officials in the executive branch of the Nigerian government, employees of Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation, and employees of Nigeria LNG Limited, controlled by the Nigerian government.

Influence to be Obtained. Snamprogetti participated in a joint venture to obtain and perform EPC contracts to build and expand the Bonny Island Project for Nigeria LNG Limited, which is owned in part by the Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation. The joint venture was awarded four EPC contracts for the Bonny Island Project between 1995 and 2004. From August 1994 until June 2004, Snamprogetti and its partners in the joint venture allegedly authorized, promised, and paid bribes to Nigerian government officials, including officials in the executive branch, employees of the government-owned Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation, and employees of government-controlled Nigeria LNG Limited, to win and retain the EPC contracts to build the Bonny Island Project. To conceal the bribes, the joint venture allegedly entered into sham consulting or services agreements with intermediaries and held “cultural meetings” where the joint venture partners met with their agents to plan how to pay the bribes. Allegedly, the joint venture gave one consultant over $130 million for use in paying bribes to high-level Nigerian government officials. Another consultant, allegedly hired to bribe lower level Nigerian officials, received over $50 million to use for that purpose.

Enforcement. On July 7, 2010, Snamprogetti and ENI entered into consent agreements to settle civil claims brought by the SEC in a complaint filed the same day by jointly agreeing to pay $125 million in disgorgement of the profits obtained as a result of the illicit payments. In its complaint, the SEC alleged that Snamprogetti violated the FCPA’s anti-bribery provisions, and that both Snamprogetti and ENI violated the books and records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. ENI and Snamprogetti also settled a related criminal case with the DOJ by agreeing to pay a $240 million fine.

73. SEC v. Veraz Networks, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2010)²⁸⁹

Nature of the Business. Veraz Networks, Inc. (“Veraz”) is a Delaware corporation based in California which sells telecommunications products that assist telecommunications service providers in transporting and managing data.

Business Location. China and Vietnam.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. At least $40,500.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. At least $233,000.
3. Intermediary. Reseller and consultant.
4. The foreign official. Officials at government-controlled telecommunications companies in China and Vietnam.

Influence to be Obtained. Between 2007 and 2008, a consultant hired by Veraz gave approximately $4,500 in gifts to officials at a telecommunications company controlled by the Chinese government to secure a business deal for Veraz. A Veraz supervisor approved what he described as the “gift scheme” by email. In addition, the consultant offered another $35,000 to an official at the telecommunications company to secure a second deal worth $233,000. The second offer was discovered by Veraz and the deal was cancelled before Veraz received any money for the transaction.

During the same period, a Singapore-based reseller through which Veraz sold products to a government-controlled telecommunications company in Vietnam made or offered improper payments to the CEO of the Vietnamese company to obtain business for Veraz. Veraz also approved and reimbursed this reseller for questionable gifts and entertainment expenses related to the Vietnamese telecommunications company.

Enforcement. On September 29, 2010, the SEC filed a settled enforcement action against Veraz, charging Veraz with violating the books and records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA by failing to accurately record the improper payments on its books and records and failing to devise and maintain a system of effective internal controls to prevent such payments. Without admitting or denying the allegations, Veraz consented to the entry of a final judgment permanently enjoining Veraz from future similar violations and requiring Veraz to pay a penalty of $300,000.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

Influence to be Obtained. The joint venture was awarded four EPC contracts for the Bonny Island Project between 1995 and 2004. From August 1994 until June 2004, Technip and its partners in the joint venture allegedly authorized, promised, and paid bribes to Nigerian government officials, including officials in the executive branch, employees of the government-owned Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation, and employees of government-controlled Nigeria LNG Limited, to win and retain the EPC contracts to build the Bonny Island Project. To conceal the bribes, the joint venture allegedly entered into sham consulting or services agreements with intermediaries and held cultural meetings” where the joint venture partners met with their agents to plan how to pay the bribes. The joint venture allegedly used U.K. and Japanese agents to transfer approximately $183.5 million to Nigerian officials during the relevant time period.

Enforcement. On June 28, 2010, Technip entered into an agreement to settle civil claims brought by the SEC in a complaint filed the same day by agreeing to pay $98 million in disgorgement of the profits obtained as a result of the illicit payments. 71. SEC v. Daimler AG (D.D.C. 2010)²⁹¹

Nature of the Business. Securing numerous contracts with government customers for the purchase of Daimler vehicles. Daimler is a German vehicle manufacturing company with business operations throughout the world.

Business Location. 22 countries including China, Croatia, Egypt, Greece, Hungary, Indonesia, Iraq, Ivory Coast, Latvia, Nigeria, Russia, Serbia and Montenegro, Thailand, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan, Vietnam and others.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. At least $56 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $1.9 billion.
3. Intermediary. Various.
4. The foreign official. Various officials involved in the purchase of vehicles around the world.

Influence to be Obtained. The SEC alleged that between 1998 and 2008, Daimler AG (“Daimler”) and its subsidiaries made improper payments worth tens of millions of dollars to foreign officials to obtain vehicle contracts in at least 22 countries. Daimler allegedly made the improper payments by various means, including certain ledger accounts, corporate “cash desks”, deceptive pricing and commission arrangements, offshore bank accounts, inflated fees, and other methods. The SEC complaint included the following allegations:

- Daimler used “third-party accounts,” maintained as ledger accounts on Daimler’s books but controlled by third parties outside the company or by Daimler subsidiaries. Daimler employees misused these accounts to provide improper payments to foreign officials in Africa, Eastern Europe, and the Middle East. For example, Daimler paid bribes through the accounts to officials in Nigeria.
- Daimler used sham intermediaries and consultants to funnel payments to government officials, and Daimler paid bribes through its dealers and distributors.
- Daimler provided government officials with lavish travel.

The SEC also alleged that Daimler paid illegal kickbacks to the former Iraqi government to obtain contracts for the sale of vehicles to the government of Iraq under the oil-for-food program.

In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

²⁹¹ SEC v. Daimler AG., No. 10-cv-00473 (D.D.C. 2010).

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

Like other companies that have been prosecuted in Oil-For-Food cases, Daimler, according to the SEC, agreed to pay a 10% commission to the Iraqi government by inflating contract prices by 10%. The payments were characterized as “after sales services fees,” but no services were performed. Most of Daimler’s oil-for-food contracts involved third-party intermediaries, but Daimler understood its partners would pay the illegal kickbacks to Iraqi ministries.

The government did not allege bribery of any individual foreign governmental officials.

Enforcement. On April 1, 2010, without admitting or denying the SEC’s allegations, the Court issued final judgment. Daimler consented to the entry of a court order permanently enjoining it from future violations of the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. Daimler agreed to pay $91.4 million in disgorgement to settle the SEC’s charges and to pay $93.6 million in fines to settle charges in separate criminal proceedings with the DOJ. The court order also required Daimler to comply with certain undertakings regarding its FCPA compliance program, including a provision that requires the company to retain an independent compliance monitor for three years. The SEC noted that Daimler cooperated with the ongoing investigation, conducted its own substantial internal investigation, and remediated problems as they were identified.

70. SEC v. Innospec (D.D.C. 2010)²⁹²

Nature of the Business. Manufacture and sales of fuel additives and other specialty chemicals by Innospec, Inc. (“Innospec”), a Delaware corporation based in the United Kingdom.

Business Location. Indonesia and Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. More than $8.6 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. More than $176 million.
3. Intermediary. Sales Agent/Consultant.
4. The foreign official. Iraqi government officials (Ministry of Oil), Indonesian government officials (Ministry of Energy and Mineral Resources), and officials of state-owned oil and gas companies in Indonesia (BP Migas and Pertamina).

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

From 2000 to 2007, Innospec allegedly paid or promised more than $5.8 million in bribes and illicit payments to Iraqi government officials to obtain contracts for sales of tetraethyl lead (“TEL”). The SEC alleges that Innospec’s Swiss subsidiary, Alcor, obtained U.N. Oil-for-Food Program contracts by paying kickbacks to Iraq and Iraqi officials through an Iraqi agent. According to the SEC, Innospec continued to use the Iraqi agent after the Oil-for-Food Program ended to pay bribes to Iraqi officials, including officials at the Ministry of Oil, to secure TEL business from Iraq. Allegedly, the Iraqi agent also made payments to ensure the failure of a field test of a competitor’s product. According to the SEC, Innospec also paid for lavish trips for Iraqi officials, including a honeymoon to Thailand for one and “pocket money” for others while on the trips.

The SEC also alleges Innospec paid $2,833,507 in bribes to Indonesian government officials and officials at state-owned oil companies to win contracts for the sale of TEL to state-owned oil and gas companies in Indonesia.

Enforcement. Without admitting or denying any of the SEC’s allegations, Innospec has offered to pay $40.2 million as part of a global settlement with the SEC, the DOJ, the United Kingdom’s Serious Fraud Office (“SFO”), and the U.S. Department of the Treasury’s Office of Foreign Assets Control (“OFAC”). On March 18, 2010, Innospec agreed to pay disgorgement of $11.2 million to the SEC, a criminal fine of $14.1 million to the DOJ, a criminal fine of $12.7 million to the SFO, and $2.2 million to OFAC. Innospec also agreed to injunctive relief and certain undertakings regarding its FCPA compliance program, including the appointment of an independent monitor for at least three years.

69. SEC v. NATCO Group Inc. (S.D. Tex. 2010)²⁹³

Nature of the Business. NATCO Group Inc. (“NATCO”), a Delaware corporation, designs, manufactures, and markets oil and gas production equipment and systems. TEST Automation & Controls, Inc. (“TEST”), a wholly-owned subsidiary of NATCO, manufactures, sells, and services controls and automation systems.

Business Location. Kazakhstan.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. At least $45,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Consultant.
4. The foreign official. Kazakh immigration prosecutors, Kazakh Ministry of Labor.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the complaint filed by the SEC on January 11, 2010, in June 2005, TEST Kazakhstan, a branch office of TEST, won a contract to provide instrumentation and electrical services in Kazakhstan. In February 2007 and September 2007, Kazakh immigration prosecutors conducted audits and claimed that TEST Kazakhstan expatriate workers were working without proper documentation. The prosecutors threatened to fine, jail, or deport the workers if TEST Kazakhstan did not pay cash fines. Believing the prosecutors’ threats were genuine, employees of TEST sought and obtained guidance from TEST’s senior management in Louisiana. TEST authorized payments, initially made in two separate transactions by TEST employees, in the amount of $25,000 and $20,000. The employees were reimbursed by TEST. TEST inaccurately recorded these payments in its books as a “salary advance” and as “visa fines.”

TEST Kazakhstan also allegedly used at least one consultant, who did not have a license to perform visa services, to assist in obtaining immigration documentation for its expatriate employees. This consultant allegedly had close ties to an employee at the Kazakh Ministry of Labor, the entity issuing the visas. Because Kazakh law requires companies seeking to withdraw cash from commercial bank accounts to submit supporting invoices, the consultant provided TEST Kazakh with bogus invoices. With full knowledge of the invoices’ falsity, it is alleged that TEST Kazakh presented these false invoices in excess of $80,000 to the banks to withdraw the requested cash. TEST Kazakhstan later submitted the invoices to TEST for reimbursement. It is alleged that TEST reimbursed these requests despite knowing the invoices mischaracterized the true purpose of the services rendered.

Enforcement. The SEC’s complaint charged NATCO violations of the books and records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. On January 6, 2010, without admitting or denying the allegations in the complaint, NATCO agreed to pay a $65,000 penalty.

Nature of the Business. Provision of global telecommunications services, including the design, manufacture, and sales of network equipment and handsets by UTStarcom, Inc. (“UTStarcom”), a Delaware corporation and its wholly-owned subsidiary UTStarcom China Co. Ltd.

Business Location. China, Mongolia, and Thailand.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $7,000,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Consultants.
4. The foreign official. Employees of Chinese government-controlled telecommunications companies; employees of government customers in Thailand.

Influence to be Obtained. According to a complaint filed by the SEC on December 31, 2009, UTStarcom made improper payments to sham consultants in China and Mongolia while knowing they would pay bribes to foreign government officials and provided employment benefits and salaries to employees of government customers or their family members when the individuals did no work for UTStarcom. Further, between 2002 and 2007, UTStarcom allegedly paid for more than 225 overseas “training” trips for employees of Chinese government-owned telecommunications companies. In actuality, the trips were primarily for sightseeing. In addition, UTStarcom arranged for expensive gifts and all-expense paid executive training programs in the U.S. for existing and potential government customers in China and Thailand.

In 2006, UTStarcom’s audit committee began an internal investigation into the improper payments which eventually uncovered and disclosed the infractions.

Enforcement. The SEC’s complaint charges UTStarcom with violations of the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. On April 13, 2010, without admitting or denying the allegations in the complaint, UTStarcom consented to entry of final judgment and agreed to pay a $1.5 million penalty, a permanent injunction against violations of the FCPA, and to provide the SEC with annual FCPA compliance reports and certifications.

67. SEC v. Bobby Benton (S.D. Tex. 2009)²⁹⁵
SEC v. Joe Summers (S.D. Tex. 2010)²⁹⁶

Nature of the Business. Provision of drilling services for oil and gas wells by Pride International, Inc. (“Pride”), a Houston-based corporation which provides offshore drilling services. Bobby Benton, a U.S. citizen, was Vice President of Western Hemisphere Operations for Pride. Joe Summers, a U.S. citizen, was Pride’s Country Manager for Venezuela .

Business Location. Mexico and Venezuela.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $439,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Agents.
4. The foreign official. Official of Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. and Mexican customs officials.

Influence to be Obtained. The SEC alleges that in December 2004, Benton authorized the bribery of a Mexican customs official in the amount of $10,000 in return for overlooking customs deficiencies identified during an inspection of a boat transporting Pride equipment. Benton allegedly had knowledge of a second bribe totaling approximately $15,000 paid to a different Mexican customs official that same month to ensure that customs violations would not delay the export of a jackup rig from Mexico.

The SEC alleges that between 2003 and 2005, Summers authorized or allowed payments of $384,000 to third-party companies believing that all or a portion of the funds would be given to an official at Petróleos de Venezuela S.A., Venezuela’s state-owned oil company, in exchange for the extension of three drilling contracts. The SEC also alleges that Summers authorized an additional payment of $30,000 to a third party believing that all or a portion of the funds would be given to an employee at Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. to obtain payment of receivables. In an effort to conceal the bribes, Benton allegedly redacted references to the Venezuelan payments in an action plan responding to an internal audit report, and the payments were recorded as payments for goods and services received from the vendors or as marketing commission payments.

Pride is involved in an ongoing investigation into its FCPA-related practices.

Enforcement. On December 12, 2009, the SEC filed a complaint alleging Benton violated the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal controls provisions of the FCPA, and aided and abetted the violation of the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. On August 9, 2010, without admitting or denying the SEC’s allegations in the complaint, Benton consented to the entry of a permanent injunction against future violations and was ordered to pay a civil penalty in the amount of $40,000.

On August 5, 2010, the SEC filed a complaint alleging Summers violated the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal controls provisions of the FCPA, and aided and abetted the violation of the anti-bribery and books and records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. On the same day, without admitting or denying the SEC's allegations in the complaint, Summers consented to the entry of a permanent injunction against future violations and a civil penalty of $25,000.

66. SEC v. AGCO Corp. (2009)²⁹⁷

Nature of the Business. AGCO Corp. (“AGCO”) is a U.S. corporation based in Duluth, Georgia that manufactures and sells agricultural machinery and equipment.

Business Location. Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $5,900,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Jordanian agents.
4. The foreign official. Unspecified Iraqi ministries.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

According to the SEC, from 2000 through 2003 AGCO’s subsidiaries made approximately $5.9 million in kickback payments in connection with their sales under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program. AGCO Ltd., AGCO’s U.K. subsidiary, marketed and negotiated sales through the U.N. Program via two other European subsidiaries, AGCO S.A., located in France, and AGCO Danmark A/S, located in Denmark. In connection with winning 16 sales contracts with the Iraqi Ministry of Agriculture for the sale of farm machinery and spare parts, an AGCO Ltd. business manager and his supervisor allegedly acquiesced to demands from Iraqi ministries for kickback payments. These payments of approximately 10% of the contracts’ values were made through a third-party agent based in Jordan. According to the SEC’s complaint, AGCO Ltd.’s marketing staff created a fictional account in its books from which AGCO made these payments with virtually no review or verification from AGCO Ltd.’s finance department; AGCO’s legal department failed to perform due diligence on or training of AGCO’s Jordanian agent.

Enforcement. In a complaint filed on September 30, 2009, the SEC charged AGCO with violating the books and records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA. Without admitting or denying the allegations contained in the SEC’s complaint, on July 31, 2009 AGCO consented to the entry of a final judgment, entered September 30, 2009, enjoining it from future similar violations and mandating that it disgorge $13,907,393. plus $2 million in prejudgment interest, and pay a civil penalty of $2.4 million.

65. SEC v. Oscar H. Meza (D.D.C. Aug. 28, 2009)²⁹⁸

Nature of the Business. Procurement of contracts for the sale of portable computerized measurement devices and software for the manufacturing sector. Oscar H. Meza, a U.S. citizen, served as the Vice-President for Asia-Pacific Sales and then, the Director of Asia-Pacific Sales for Faro Technologies, Inc. (“Faro”), a U.S. software development and manufacturing company.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $444,492.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $4.5 million.
3. Intermediary. Third-party intermediary.
4. The foreign official. Employees of China state-owned or controlled entities.

Influence to be Obtained. The SEC’s complaint alleges that Meza authorized bribery payments to obtain contracts for Faro. Allegedly, beginning in 2004, Meza authorized the Country Manager of Faro’s subsidiary, Faro Shanghai Co., Ltd. (“Faro China”), to make bribery payments termed “referral fees” to employees of Chinese state-owned companies to obtain contracts. To conceal the bribes, Meza instructed Faro China’s staff to alter account entries to delete the actual recipient of the improper payments. The complaint further alleges that in 2005, Meza and the Faro China Country Manager decided to route the corrupt payments through an intermediary to “avoid exposure,” according to internal e-mails. In January 2005, Faro China entered into a false services contract with an intermediary. The intermediary would pay the bribes and send regular invoices to Faro China for payment. Meza authorized a total of $444,492 in illicit payments during the period between 2004 and 2006, generating approximately $4.5 million in sales and approximately $1.4 million in net profit.

Enforcement. On August 28, 2009, the SEC filed a settled enforcement action against Meza, charging Meza with violations of the anti-bribery, books and records, and internal control provisions of the FCPA and aiding and abetting Faro’s violations of those provisions. Meza, without admitting or denying the allegations in the complaint, consented to the entry of a final judgment, which (1) permanently enjoined him from future similar violations and (2) ordered him to pay a civil penalty of $30,0000 and disgorgement and prejudgment interest of $26,707.

64. SEC v. Helmerich & Payne, Inc. (2009)²⁹⁹

Nature of the Business. Helmerich & Payne, Inc. (“H&P”), a U.S. corporation, engages in the contract drilling of oil and gas wells in the United States and internationally.

Business Location. Argentina, Venezuela.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Payments totaling approximately $185,673.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. The avoidance of approximately $320,604 in customs-related costs.
3. Intermediary. Customs brokers.
4. The foreign official. Argentine and Venezuelan customs officials.

Influence to be Obtained. Between 2003 and 2008, H&P’s Argentine and Venezuelan subsidiaries allegedly made approximately $185,673 in improper payments through their customers’ brokers to customs officials in Argentina and Venezuela to allow and expedite the importation and exportation of equipment and materials that were not in compliance with the regulations of those countries. According to the SEC, those improper payments enabled the subsidiaries to avoid approximately $320,604 in expenses they would have incurred had they properly imported and exported the equipment and materials. The customs brokers allegedly disguised the improper payments on their invoices to the subsidiaries.

Enforcement. On July 30, 2009, without admitting or denying the SEC’s findings, H&P consented to entry of an order of judgment against it. Under the order, H&P must cease and desist from committing books and records and internal controls FCPA violations and pay disgorgement of $375,681 including prejudgment interest. H&P also entered into a 2-year non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ, under which it agreed to pay a fine of $1 million and to take remedial actions.

63. SEC v. Nature's Sunshine Products, Inc., Douglas Faggioli, and Craig D. Huff (D. Utah 2009)³⁰⁰

Nature of the Business. Importation and sale of nutritional and personal care products by Nature's Sunshine Productos Naturais, Ltda., a wholly-owned Brazilian subsidiary of Nature's Sunshine Products, Inc. ("NSP"), a U.S. corporation. Douglas Faggioli is the former COO of NSP and its current CEO. Craig D. Huff is the former CFO of NSP.

Business Location. Brazil.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. More than $1 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unspecified.
3. Intermediary. Customs brokers.
4. The foreign official. Brazilian customs officials.

Influence to be Obtained. NSP manufactures and sells nutritional and personal care products. Brazil became NSP's largest foreign market soon after it established a wholly-owned subsidiary in Brazil, Nature's Sunshine Productos Naturais, Ltda. ("NSP Brazil"), in 1994. In 1999 and 2000, the Brazilian government reclassified specified vitamins, herbal products, and nutritional supplements as medicines, which required companies selling those products to register them for importation and sale in Brazil. NSP Brazil was unable to register some of its products and consequently experienced a sharp decline in sales. In an effort to circumvent the new registration requirements, NSP allegedly made over $1 million in undocumented cash payments to customs brokers. Some of these "importation advances" were allegedly paid to Brazilian customs officials to allow NSP Brazil to import unregistered products.

NSP controllers, one of whom was a former corporate officer and the corporate controller, allegedly conducted interviews with NSP Brazil's employees in December 2000. NSP Brazil's operations manager allegedly discussed the cash payments and the fact that NSP Brazil was selling unregistered products. Nevertheless, the payments were allegedly improperly recorded in NSP Brazil's books and records and later accounted for in NSP's 2001 financial statements as though they were legitimate import expenses.

Enforcement. On July 31, 2009, the SEC filed a settled complaint alleging that NSP violated the FCPA's anti-bribery, books and records, and internal controls provisions. The SEC further charged NSP with violating additional anti-fraud and issuer reporting provisions of the federal securities laws. The SEC charged Faggioli and Huff with responsibility as "control persons" within the meaning of Section 20 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. § 78t(a)) for NSP's violations of the FCPA's books and records and internal control provisions. Without admitting or denying the allegations, all three defendants agreed to orders enjoining them from future violations and requiring NSP to pay a civil penalty of $600,000 and Faggioli and Huff to each pay a civil penalty of $25,000.

62. SEC v. Avery Dennison Corp. (C.D. Cal. 2009)³⁰¹
In re Avery Dennison Corp. (2009)³⁰²

Nature of the Business. Procurement of sales of reflective materials in China used in printing and road signs where Chinese government required authorization for such products. Avery China, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Avery Dennison Corporation (“Avery Dennison”), a Delaware entity, sells reflective materials commonly used in printing and road signs.

Business Location. China, Indonesia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $81,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $1,250,218.
3. Intermediary. None.
4. The foreign official. Chinese government officials; Indonesian customs and tax officials.

Influence to be Obtained. The Chinese government requires authorization for all products used in road communications and safety. Between 2002 through 2005, Avery China attempted to pay Chinese government officials kickbacks to obtain such authorization and gain lucrative contracts. Some of the illegal payment schemes were discovered and prevented by Avery Dennison employees, while others were paid out, including a $24,752 payment to a project manager in 2005 to obtain profits of $273,213 on a sale. In addition, Avery China hosted expensive sightseeing trips to curry favor with Chinese government officials in both 2002 and 2005. In 2007, Avery Dennison acquired Paxar Corporation, a NYSE listed company. Avery Dennison later discovered that Paxar employees in Indonesia made illegal payments to customs and tax officials to obtain bonded zone licenses and to overlook bonded zone regulatory violations.

Enforcement. On July 28, 2009, the SEC filed two settled enforcement proceedings against Avery Dennison. The SEC filed a federal civil action in California charging Avery Dennison with violations of the books and records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA and seeking a civil penalty. The SEC also issued an administrative order finding that Avery Dennison violated the same provisions of the FCPA, ordering the company to cease and desist from these violations and disgorge profits in the amount of $273,213 plus $45,257 in prejudgment interest. Avery Dennison agreed to the entry of a final judgment, entered August 18, 2009, requiring it to pay a civil penalty in the amount of $200,000.

Nature of the Business. Thomas Wurzel (“Wurzel”) was President of ACL Technologies, Inc. (“ACL”), a wholly-owned subsidiary of United Industrial Corporation (“UIC”), an aerospace and defense systems contractor incorporated in Delaware. In 2007, after the conduct described herein occurred, an affiliate of Textron Inc. acquired UIC.

Business Location. Egypt.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Not provided. Three forms of illicit payments were made to an agent, with at least some of those payments allegedly being passed on to government officials: (1) payments to the agent ostensibly for labor subcontracting work; (2) a $100,000 advance payment to the agent for “equipment and materials”; and (3) a $50,000 payment to the agent for “marketing services.”
2. Amount of business related to the payment. A contract with gross revenues of approximately $5.3 million and net profits of $267,000.
3. Intermediary. A retired Egyptian Air Force (“EAF”) general enlisted as an agent.
4. The foreign official. EAF officials.

Influence to be Obtained. As alleged in the complaint, from late 2001 through 2002, Wurzel authorized multiple payments to an agent to secure a Contract Engineering Technical Services contract for ACL in connection with a project to build a F-16 combat aircraft depot for the EAF and provide, operate, and train labor to use the testing equipment for the depot. The complaint alleges that, in or around 1996, Wurzel was involved with hiring the agent, who was selected due to his connections with the Egyptian military community. The complaint further alleges that Wurzel knew or consciously disregarded the high probability that the agent would offer, provide, or promise at least a portion of such payments to active EAF officials.

Enforcement. On May 29, 2009, the SEC filed a complaint alleging that Wurzel violated, and aided and abetted violations of, the anti-bribery, internal controls, and books and records provisions of the FCPA. Without admitting or denying the allegations, Wurzel consented to the entry of a final judgment permanently enjoining him from future violations of the FCPA. In addition, Wurzel paid a $35,000 civil penalty.

On the same day, UIC consented to an SEC order requiring it to cease and desist from causing any future violations of the FCPA, under which UIC paid $337,679.42 in disgorgement and prejudgment interest.

Nature of the Business. United Industrial Corporation (“UIC”), a Delaware corporation headquartered in Hunt Valley, Maryland, focuses on the design and production of defense, training, transportation, and energy systems for the U.S. Department of Defense and domestic and international customers. ACL Technologies, Inc. (“ACL”), a wholly-owned subsidiary of UIC formerly headquartered in Brea, California, developed, operated, and maintained stationary and mobile test equipment in support of hydraulics, pneumatics, electrical, mechanical, and fuel requirements of commercial and military aircraft. In 2007, after the conduct described herein occurred, an affiliate of Textron Inc. acquired UIC.

Business Location. Egypt.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Unspecified. Three forms of illicit payments were made to an agent, with at least some of those payments allegedly being passed on to government officials: (1) payments to the agent ostensibly for labor subcontracting work; (2) a $100,000 advance payment to the agent for “equipment and materials”; and (3) a $50,000 payment to the agent for “marketing services.”
2. Amount of business related to the payment. A contract with gross revenues of approximately $5.3 million and net profits of $267,000.
3. Intermediary. A retired Egyptian Air Force (“EAF”) general enlisted as an agent.
4. The foreign official. EAF officials.

Influence to be Obtained. As alleged in the SEC’s cease-and-desist order, in late 2001 and throughout 2002, Thomas Wurzel, then President of ACL, authorized multiple payments to an agent to secure a Contract Engineering Technical Services contract for ACL in connection with a project to build a F-16 combat aircraft depot for the EAF and provide, operate, and train labor to use the testing equipment for the depot. The order further alleges that Wurzel knew or consciously disregarded the high probability that the agent would offer, provide, or promise at least a portion of such payments to active EAF officials. During this time, UIC allegedly lacked meaningful controls to prevent or detect Wurzel’s authorization of illicit payments to the agent. The UIC legal department allegedly approved the retention of the agent despite a lack of documented due diligence and the failure of the agent to comply with corporate policy. The order further alleges that a UIC official approved at least one payment to the agent and that UIC mischaracterized the illicit payment in its books and records as legitimate business expenses.

Enforcement. On May 29, 2009 without admitting or denying the allegations in the order, UIC consented to an SEC order requiring it to cease and desist from committing or causing any future violations of the FCPA. In addition, UIC paid $267,571 in disgorgement and $70,108 prejudgment interest.

59. SEC v. Novo Nordisk A/S (D.D.C. 2009)³⁰⁵

Nature of the Business. Novo Nordisk is an international manufacturer of insulin, medicines, and other pharmaceutical supplies headquartered in Denmark.

Business Location. Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $1.4 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. €22 million.
3. Intermediary. Agent.
4. The foreign official. Kickbacks were paid to Kimadia, a state-owned company that was part of the Iraqi Ministry of Health.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

According to the SEC’s complaint, Novo Nordisk paid illegal kickbacks to the former government of Iraq to secure contracts to provide insulin and other medical supplies to Iraq under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program. Allegedly, Novo Nordisk characterized these kickbacks as “after-sales service fees,” but did not provide any bona fide services. Branches of Novo Nordisk in Greece and Jordan handled the Iraqi sales. Novo Nordisk allegedly inflated the price of contracts by 10% before submitting them to the United Nations for approval, and then made the illegal payments to Kimadia, a state-owned company that was part of the Iraqi Ministry of Health, recording the payments as commissions in its books and records.

Enforcement. Without admitting or denying the allegations in the SEC’s complaint, filed May 11, 2009, Novo consented, also on May 11, 2009, to entry of a final judgment:

1. Enjoining it from future books and records and internal controls FCPA violations.
2. Ordering it to disgorge $4,321,523 in profits, plus $1,683,556 in prejudgment interest.

58. SEC v. ITT Corp. (D.D.C. 2009)³⁰⁶

Nature of the Business. Sale of water pumps for large infrastructure projects in China. ITT Corporation (“ITT”), a U.S. corporation, designs and manufactures a wide range of engineered products and related services, concentrating on water and fluids management, global defense and security, and motion and flow control.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $200,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. More than $4 million.
3. Intermediary. Agents and employees.
4. The foreign official. Officials of Chinese government design institutes.

Influence to be Obtained. From 2001 through 2005, ITT’s wholly-owned Chinese subsidiary, Nanjing Goulds Pumps Ltd. (“NGP”), directly through certain employees and indirectly through third-party agents, allegedly made illicit payments totaling approximately $200,000 to Chinese government officials, generating more than $4 million in sales and improper profits of more than $1 million. NGP, part of ITT’s Fluid Technology division, allegedly bribed employees of Chinese state-owned design institutes that assisted in the design of infrastructure projects to ensure that they recommended NGP water pumps for use in the projects. Allegedly, the payments were disguised as commissions in NGP’s books and records. The allegedly improper NGP entries were consolidated and included in ITT’s financial statements contained in SEC filings for the company’s fiscal years 2001 through 2005. ITT discovered the allegedly illegal payments in December 2005, after the company ombudsman received an anonymous complaint from NGP employees alleging illegal payments to Chinese government officials by NGP employees.

Enforcement. On February 11, 2009, the SEC filed a complaint alleging violations of the FCPA’s books and records and internal controls provisions. ITT, without admitting or denying the allegations in the SEC’s complaint, consented to the entry of a final judgment permanently enjoining it from future violations of the FCPA, and agreed to disgorge $1,041,112, together with prejudgment interest of $387,538.11, and to pay a $250,000 civil penalty.

57. SEC v. Halliburton Co. and KBR, Inc. (S.D. Tex. 2009)³⁰⁷

Nature of the Business. Engineering, procurement, and construction (“EPC”) contracts for natural gas liquefaction facilities at Bonny Island in Nigeria (“Bonny Island Project”). During most of the time of the conduct, which occurred between 1995 and 2004, Kellogg Brown & Root LLC, a U.S. corporation, was a subsidiary of Halliburton Company (“Halliburton”). Kellogg Brown & Root LLC is now a wholly-owned subsidiary of KBR, Inc. (“KBR”). Halliburton and KBR are incorporated in Delaware and headquartered in Houston, Texas.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $180 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Over $6 billion.
3. Intermediary. Agents.
4. The foreign official. Officials in the executive branch of the Nigerian government; employees of Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation; and employees of Nigeria LNG Limited, controlled by the Nigerian government.

Influence to be Obtained. Kellogg Brown & Root LLC participated in a joint venture to obtain and perform EPC contracts to build and expand the Bonny Island Project for Nigeria LNG Limited, which is owned in part by the Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation. The joint venture received four EPC contracts for the Bonny Island Project between 1995 and 2004. According to the SEC’s February 11, 2009 complaint, from at least 1995 until 2004, Kellogg Brown and Root LLC and its partners in the joint venture allegedly authorized, promised, and paid bribes to Nigerian government officials to obtain business related to the Bonny Island Project. To conceal the bribes, the joint venture allegedly entered into sham consulting or services agreements with intermediaries. The complaint alleges that one consultant received over $130 million, and another received over $50 million, for use in bribing Nigerian government officials.

Enforcement. On February 11, 2009, the SEC filed a complaint alleging that KBR, acting as an agent of Halliburton, violated the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA; that Halliburton failed to keep accurate books and records and to maintain adequate internal controls; that KBR aided and abetted Halliburton’s failure to do so; and that KBR falsified, or caused to be falsified, Halliburton’s books and records. Without admitting or denying the allegations of the complaint, Halliburton and KBR consented to the entry of final judgments permanently enjoining future violations, ordering disgorgement of $177 million, requiring Halliburton to retain an independent consultant to evaluate its FCPA-related policies and procedures and adopt any recommendations, and requiring KBR to obtain an independent corporate monitor for a term of three years. Pursuant to the master separation agreement between Halliburton and

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

KBR, Halliburton agreed to indemnify KBR for certain FCPA-related matters, and Halliburton will pay the $177 million disgorgement.

Kellogg Brown & Root LLC and KBR also settled a related DOJ action on February 11, 2009, pleading guilty to one count of conspiring to violate the FCPA and four counts of violation of the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA. As part of the plea agreement, Kellogg Brown & Root LLC and KBR agreed to pay a $402 million fine, of which Halliburton will pay $382 million. Additionally, Kellogg Brown & Root LLC will retain an independent corporate monitor for a term of three years.

In September 2008, Albert “Jack” Stanley, former CEO and chairman of Kellogg Brown & Root LLC, pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA, admitting that he participated in a scheme to bribe Nigerian government officials. Stanley was later sentenced on February 23, 2012 to 30 months in prison followed by three years of supervised release along with a payment of $10.8 million in restitution.

In February 2009, the DOJ indicted two other individuals, Jeffrey Tesler and Wojciech Chodan, both U.K. citizens, alleging involvement in the scheme. Chodan and Tesler subsequently pleaded guilty to charges to conspiracy and other related charges on December 3, 2011 and March 11, 2012 respectively. Sentencing of both individuals took place in February 2012.

French, Nigerian, Swiss, and British authorities continue to investigate this matter. In an SEC filing on February 17, 2010, Halliburton first reported it was seeking plea negotiations with the United Kingdom’s Serious Fraud Office. On February 16, 2011, KBR announced that its wholly-owned subsidiary, M.W. Kellogg Limited (“MWKL”), reached a civil settlement with the Serious Fraud Office, according to which MWKL paid approximately $11, 238,886 and agreed to improve its internal audit and compliance systems.

Similarly according to a February 17, 2011 SEC filing, Halliburton and KBR reached a settlement to resolve charged filed against the two corporations in Nigeria in December 2010. As a result, Halliburton agreed to pay $33 million to the Government of Nigeria and an additional $2 million for the Government of Nigeria’s attorneys’ fees.

A March 30, 2009 news article reported that Swiss authorities will provide Britain with bank account details related to the payments. Swiss authorities previously provided these documents to France and the U.S..

Influence to be Obtained. Siemens Aktiengesellschaft ("Siemens AG") and several of its subsidiaries allegedly paid more than $1.7 million in kickbacks to the Iraqi government to win 42 contracts worth more than $80 million under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program. Additionally, Siemens AG allegedly engaged in systematic efforts to falsify books and records and circumvent internal controls to permit this and other corrupt payments to occur.

The SEC alleged a wide range of corrupt payments, spread across several of Siemens's divisions. Significantly, in some cases, the sole jurisdictional basis for certain of the bribes was based on the use of correspondent bank accounts. Siemens allegedly paid almost $19 million in bribes to Venezuelan government officials, using sham consultants and other intermediaries, in connection with mass transit systems in the Venezuelan cities of Valencia and Maracaibo.

Between 2002 and 2007, Siemens allegedly paid approximately $22 million to business consultants who used some portion of those funds to bribe government officials in China in connection with a $1 billion project to construct metro trains and signaling devices. Also in China, between 2002 and 2003, Siemens allegedly paid approximately $25 million in bribes to government customers in connection with two projects involving installation of high voltage transmission lines. The projects were worth approximately $838 million, and as in many other instances, Siemens allegedly funneled payments through multiple intermediaries. Siemens also allegedly paid approximately $14.4 million in bribes in connection with $295 million in sales of medical equipment to five Chinese state-owned hospitals, and funded expensive trips for doctors at Chinese state-owned hospitals.

In Israel, between 2002 and 2005, Siemens allegedly paid approximately $20 million in bribes through a business consultant to a former director of the state-owned electricity company in connection with four contracts worth approximately $786 million to build and service power plants.

In Bangladesh, Siemens allegedly made more than $5.3 million in corrupt payments between 2004 and 2006 to Bangladeshi government officials and senior employees of the state-owned Bangladesh Telegraph & Telephone Board (“BTTB”) in connection with a BTTB mobile telephone contract worth almost $41 million, using three sham business consultants. The SEC alleged payments to the son of the former Prime Minister of Bangladesh, though it is not clear if the SEC alleged that he was a government official.

In Nigeria, Siemens allegedly made approximately $12.7 million in suspicious payments, including at least $4.5 million in bribes, in connection with four telecommunications projects with state-owned companies worth approximately $130 million. These payments were allegedly made through various intermediaries, including sham business consultants and the wife of a former Nigerian Vice-President, and the recipients were alleged to include the President and Vice-President of Nigeria.

In Argentina, Siemens allegedly paid approximately $95 million, directly or indirectly, to officials in the Argentine government, in connection with the company’s bid for a project valued in excess of $1 billion involving the development of a national identification card.

Siemens allegedly paid almost $750,000 in bribes to officials of the Moscow Project Implementation Unit, a quasi-governmental entity in Russia responsible for implementing a traffic control system in Moscow. Siemens allegedly paid approximately $55 million in bribes through a Dubai intermediary to Russian state-owned hospitals in connection with sales of medical equipment.

Siemens also paid approximately $2.6 million in bribes to a business consultant in Mexico, some portion of which allegedly was routed to a senior official of the state-owned petroleum company, Pemex.

Siemens allegedly paid $383,000 in bribes in connection with $6 million in sales of medical devices on two projects involving the Vietnamese Ministry of Health. Finally, Siemens allegedly paid approximately

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

$140,000 in bribes to officials at the Vietnamese defense ministry and state-owned telecommunications company Viettel in connection with a $35 million tender for the supply of telecommunications equipment and services.

Enforcement. On December 15, 2008, Siemens consented to the entry of final judgment enjoining it from committing further FCPA violations. Without admitting or denying the allegations, Siemens agreed to pay $350 million in disgorgement and also agreed to the imposition of an independent monitor for a period of up to four years. Theo Wiegler, a former German finance minister, will serve as the Monitor, and will be assisted by a U.S. law firm, marking the first time that a non-U.S. Monitor has been appointed in an FCPA case.

On the same day, Siemens AG pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA's internal controls and books and records provisions, Siemens Argentina pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA's books and records provisions, and Siemens Bangladesh and Siemens Venezuela each pleaded guilty to conspiring to violate the FCPA's anti-bribery and books and records provisions. Siemens AG and its subsidiaries agreed to pay criminal fines totaling $450 million. On the same day, Siemens also entered into a settlement with German authorities, agreeing to pay penalties of €395 million in addition to the €201 million in penalties that it previously paid in an earlier settlement.

In addition, the DOJ brought a forfeiture action against more than $3 million contained in several bank accounts held by or for the benefit of the son of the former Prime Minister of Bangladesh and two of the intermediaries involved in the bribery scheme involving Siemens Bangladesh.

In July 2009, Siemens reached a settlement with the World Bank over bribery allegations. The Bank's investigation focused specifically on an urban-transport project the Bank financed in Russia. Siemens agreed to pay $100 million over 15 years to help anticorruption efforts and also agreed to forgo bidding on any of the Bank's projects for two years. The settlement means that Siemens and its subsidiaries will not face additional sanctions from the World Bank.

Separately, on August 12, 2009, Siemens AG stated that it would drop a case against Argentina's government in the World Bank's International Center for Settlement of Investment Disputes, which had demanded $200 million related to the cancellation of a contract to make identity cards. Siemens had been accused of paying bribes to win the contract. Siemens stated that it would continue to cooperate with investigations by Argentine authorities.

55. SEC v. Fiat S.p.A. and CNH Global N.V. (D.D.C. 2008)³⁰⁹

Nature of the Business. Sales of trucks and parts, agricultural and construction equipment, and construction vehicles and spare parts, and other equipment to Iraq under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program.

Business Location. Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $4.3 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $59,000,000.
3. Intermediary. Distributors and agents.
4. The foreign official. None.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value, though in this case sometimes as high as 15%.

From approximately 2000 through 2003, Fiat S.p.A. (“Fiat”) and CNH Global N.V. (“CNH Global”), which is 90% owned by Fiat, allegedly violated the books and records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA when one of Fiat’s subsidiaries and two of CNH Global’s subsidiaries provided the Iraqi government with approximately $4.3 million in kickback payments, improperly recorded as commissions and service fees. One of Fiat’s subsidiaries, Iveco S.p.A (“Iveco”), allegedly used its Egypt office to enter into four direct contracts with Iraqi Ministries in which $1,803,880 in kickbacks were made on the sale of commercial vehicles and parts. Iveco Egypt increased its agent’s commissions from 5% to between 15 and 20% of the total contract price, which the agent allegedly funneled to the Iraqi government as kickbacks. Iveco and the agent allegedly inflated the U.N. contracts by 10 to 15% to account for these payments. In November 2000, the agent became Iveco’s distributor and, with Iveco’s knowledge, allegedly facilitated $1,364,080 in “after sales service fees” on twelve additional contracts.

One of CNH Global’s subsidiaries, Case France (now known as CNH France S.A.), allegedly engaged in three direct transactions with Iraqi ministries in which $187,720 in kickbacks were made on the sale of construction equipment in the same manner.

Another CNH Global subsidiary, New Holland (now known as CNH Italia S.p.A.), allegedly engaged in two direct transactions with Iraqi ministries in which $447,116 in kickbacks were made on the sale of tractors. The purported “after sales service fees” were recorded as cost of goods sold in New Holland’s books and records. New Holland subsequently made its dealer a distributor, which allowed the dealer to purchase New Holland goods for the dealer's own account. The dealer then sold New Holland products to the Iraqi government under the dealer's secretly-inflated U.N. contracts. With New Holland's knowledge, the dealer allegedly facilitated kickback payments totaling $576,861 to Iraq on three U.N. contracts and an additional kickback of $312,198 on a fourth contract was authorized but was never paid.

The government did not allege bribery of any individual foreign governmental officials.

Enforcement. The SEC brought suit against Fiat and CNH Global for failure to maintain internal controls and for books and records violations. On December 22, 2008, without admitting or denying the allegations of the Complaint, Fiat and CNH Global entered into a consent agreement with the SEC. The agreement called for disgorgement of $5,309,632 in profits, prejudgment interest of $1,899,510, and a civil penalty of $3,600,000.

54. SEC v. Albert Jackson Stanley (S.D. Tex. 2008)³¹⁰

Nature of the Business. Engineering, procurement, and construction (“EPC”) contracts to build liquefied natural gas (“LNG”) facilities on Bonny Island, Nigeria. Albert “Jack” Stanley (“Stanley”) is a U.S. citizen and a former officer and director of Kellogg, Brown & Root, Inc. (“KBR”), that was during part of the relevant period a subsidiary of Halliburton.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $182 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $6 billion.
3. Intermediary. Two agents.
4. The foreign official. Officials of the Nigerian Government

Influence to be Obtained. KBR participated in a joint-venture seeking EPC contracts to build LNG facilities on Bonny Island, Nigeria. Four EPC contracts were awarded to the joint venture by Nigeria LNG Ltd, the largest shareholder the Nigerian government-owned Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation. Stanley and others allegedly approved entering into sham transactions with two agents to pay bribes to Nigerian government officials. From 1995 to 2004, the joint venture paid the two agents a total of $182 million. Stanley admitted that the agents’ fees were to be used in part to bribe government officials. The payments were allegedly falsely characterized as “commissions” or “services” fees in the company’s books and records, for example, in internal bid documents and in due diligence materials.

Enforcement. Without admitting or denying the allegations, Stanley consented to an entry of final judgment in the SEC case enjoining him from committing further FCPA violations on September 3, 2008. He agreed to cooperate with the SEC’s ongoing investigations into the matter. Stanley also pleaded guilty in a related DOJ action on the same day, and was later sentenced to 30 months in prison and three years’ supervised release, as well as $10.8 million in restitution set by the terms of Stanley’s plea agreement.

On February 11, 2009, KBR and Halliburton settled related actions with the DOJ and SEC. Two alleged co-conspirators, Wojciech Chodan and Jeffrey Tesler, were indicted on February 17, 2009, and they pleaded guilty on December 6, 2010 and March 11, 2011, respectively. They were sentenced in February 2012.

In re Con-way Inc. (2008)³¹²

Nature of the Business. Shipping logistics.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $417,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not specified.
3. Intermediary. None.
4. The foreign official. Officials of the Philippines Bureau of Customs, officials at the Philippine Economic Zone Area and officials and fourteen state-owned airlines.

Influence to be Obtained. Emery Transnational, a former subsidiary of Con-way Inc., based in the Philippines allegedly paid $244,000 in improper payments to officials of the Philippines Bureau of Customs and the Philippines Economic Zone area. These payments allegedly consisted of hundreds of small payments designed to induce officials to violate customs regulations, settle customs disputes, and reduce or not enforce legitimate fines.

In addition to the payments to customs officials, Emery also allegedly paid approximately $173,000 in cash to officials of state-owned airlines that did business in the Philippines between 2000 and 2003 to induce the airline officials to either improperly reserve space for Emery Transnational on their airplanes (called “weight shipped”) payments or to induce the airline officials to falsely under-weigh the shipments, resulting in lower shipping charges (called “gain share” payments).

Enforcement. On August 27, 2008, without admitting or denying the allegations in the SEC’s complaint, Con-way agreed to pay a civil penalty of $300,000. On the same day, the Commission issued a settled cease-and-desist order that requires the company to cease and desist from causing or committing any future FCPA violations. Con-way consented to the issuance of the order without admitting or denying any of the Commission’s findings.

Nature of the Business. Procurement of contracts for the sale of portable computerized measurement devices and software for the manufacturing sector.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $444,492.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $4.5 million.
3. Intermediary. Agent.
4. The foreign official. Employees of Chinese state-owned or controlled entities.

Influence to be Obtained. Faro Technologies, Inc. (“Faro”), a U.S. corporation, develops and markets portable computerized measurement devices and software for the manufacturing sector. Faro began direct sales in China in 2003 through a subsidiary, Faro Shanghai Co., Ltd. (“Faro China”). In 2004 and 2005, the then Country Sales Manager of Faro China made corrupt payments, authorized by the then Director of Asia-Pacific Sales of Faro, directly to employees of Chinese state-owned or controlled entities on several occasions. The payments were referred to internally as “referral fees” and generated approximately $4,500,000 in sales, from which Faro received a net profit of $1,411,306.

In 2005, the then Director of Asia-Pacific Sales of Faro and the Country Sales Manager of Faro China decided to route the corrupt payments through third-party intermediaries or “distributors” to “avoid exposure,” according to internal e-mails. Faro China funneled cash payments through these intermediaries from early 2005 until early 2006.

Faro falsely recorded corrupt payments as legitimate “selling expenses” in Faro’s books and records. During the period of improper payments, Faro also failed to devise and maintain a system of internal controls to ensure compliance with the FCPA.

Enforcement. A cease-and-desist order was entered in the matter on June 5, 2008 under which Faro agreed to pay disgorgement of $1,411,306 and prejudgment interest of $439,637.32 and retain an independent consultant and compliance monitor for a period of two years to review and evaluate Faro’s internal controls, record keeping, and financial reporting and compliance.

51. SEC v. Willbros Group, Inc., Jason Steph, Gerald Jansen, Lloyd Biggers, Carlos Galvez (S.D. Tex. 2008)³¹⁴

Nature of the Business. Procurement of contracts for oil and gas construction projects by Willbros International Inc. (“Willbros International”), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Willbros Group, Inc. (“Willbros Group”), both Panama corporations.

Business Location. Nigeria, Ecuador, and Bolivia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $11.7 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. More than $490 million.
3. Intermediary. Consultants and employees.
4. The foreign official. 1) Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation (“NNPC”) officials; 2) officials of NNPC’s wholly-owned subsidiary National Petroleum Investment Management Services (“NAPIMS”); 3) officials of NNPC’s majority-owned joint venture operator, Shell Petroleum Development Company of Nigeria (“SPDC”); 4) a senior official in the executive branch of the Nigerian federal government; 5) officials in the dominant political party in Nigeria from 1999 to present; and 6) officials of PetroEcuador and PetroComercial in Ecuador.

Influence to be Obtained. The SEC alleged that Willbros Group, through the actions of others acting on its behalf, engaged in multiple schemes to bribe foreign officials. The complaint alleges that, beginning by at least 2003, Willbros Group, via Willbros International and through the conduct of a former executive officer of Willbros International, Steph as General Manager – Onshore in Nigeria, and others, engaged in a scheme to pay over $6 million in bribes to Nigerian government officials and to employees of an operator of a joint venture majority-owned by the Nigerian government to obtain significant contracts with respect to construction of a natural gas pipeline. As part of this scheme, the SEC alleged that, in 2005, after Willbros began an internal investigation into allegations of corruption, Steph assisted in the payment of $1.85 million, mostly in cash, to satisfy a portion of these earlier commitments. It is alleged that consultants were also used to help obtain offshore oil platform repair projects for which Willbros promised Nigerian officials over $5 million in bribes. The SEC alleged that these contracts resulted in cumulative revenue for Willbros Group of approximately $487 million and net profits of approximately $8.9 million.

In addition to Steph, Jansen, a Canadian National, was in Nigeria with Willbros International from 1993-1995 and was most recently with Willbros International as Administrator and General Manager – Finance. The SEC alleged that he was responsible for submitting consultants’ invoices for payment to Willbros Group headquarters in Houston, Texas. Biggers was another U.S. employee in Nigeria. The complaint further alleged that Willbros Group, through acts by a former executive officer, Steph, Jansen, ³¹⁴ SEC v. Willbros Group, Inc., et al., No. 4:08-cv-01494 (S.D. Tex. 2008).

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

Biggers, and others, employed a long-running scheme of using fabricated invoices to procure cash from the company's administrative headquarters in Houston to, among other things, bribe Nigerian tax and court officials, and also to fund, in part, the bribes paid in 2005.

The SEC also alleged that Willbros International, in a scheme orchestrated by its former President, paid officials of state-owned PetroEcuador and its subsidiary PetroComercial to obtain contracts in Ecuador which generated revenues of approximately $3.4 million.

The SEC alleged that Willbros Group recorded all of the above payments as contract costs for legitimate consulting services or vendor goods and services.

The SEC also alleged that a subsidiary of Willbros International devised a scheme to buy false invoices through a consultant to fraudulently claim VAT tax credits to reduce tax liability, in violation of books and records requirements. The SEC alleged that Galvez, an employee in an accounting and administrative supervisory role in Bolivia, used the fictitious invoices to further the scheme by, among other things, preparing false returns and related records. For these alleged acts, the SEC charged Willbros Group and Galvez for violation of Section 17(a) of the Securities Act of 1933 and Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

Enforcement. On May 14, 2008 the SEC filed a settled complaint against Willbros Group, Steph, Jansen, Biggers, and Galvez. The SEC alleged that Willbros Group violated the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA and the anti-fraud, books and records, internal controls, and reporting provisions of the federal securities laws. The SEC alleged that Steph violated the bribery provisions of the FCPA and aided and abetted violations of the FCPA and books and records and internal control provisions of the federal securities laws. The SEC alleged that Jansen aided and abetted violations of the FCPA and books and records and internal control provisions of the federal securities laws. The SEC alleged that Biggers aided and abetted violations of the FCPA and the books and records provisions of the federal securities laws. The SEC alleged that Galvez illegally falsified books and records and aided and abetted violations of the anti-fraud, books and records, internal controls, and reporting provisions of the federal securities laws.

Willbros Group did not admit or deny the Commission's allegations, but agreed to disgorge $8.9 million in profits and pay $1.4 million in prejudgment interest. The court ordered Willbros Group to pay the $10.3 million in installments of $2.575 million within 10 days of the entry of final judgment, and three $2.575 million payments with post-judgment interest annually for three years from entry of the final judgment. Jansen consented to an entry of judgment and did not admit or deny the Commission's allegations. He received a $30,000 penalty. Biggers consented to an entry of judgment and did not admit or deny the Commission's allegations. He received no penalty. Galvez consented to an entry of judgment and did not admit or deny the Commission's allegations. He received a $35,000 penalty. All consented to being permanently enjoined from future violation of the provisions alleged. Final judgment with respect to Willbros Group, Jansen, Biggers, and Galvez was entered on May 14, 2008, as was an interlocutory judgment against Steph effecting an injunction against any future violation. The court stayed determination of his penalty, if any, pending resolution of the criminal matter against him. On January 28, 2010 Steph was sentenced in the criminal matter to 15 months of imprisonment.

50. SEC v. AB Volvo (D.D.C. 2008)³¹⁵

Nature of the Business. Sales of heavy commercial construction equipment and vehicles and other equipment to Iraq under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program.

Business Location. Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $8,594,750 in kickbacks to the Iraqi government.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not specified.
3. Intermediary. Distributors and agents.
4. The foreign official. None.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

From approximately 1999 through 2003, AB Volvo allegedly violated the books and records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA when two of its subsidiaries provided the Iraqi government with approximately $6,206,331 in kickback payments and authorized additional payments of $2,388,419. One of AB Volvo subsidiaries, Renault Trucks SAS (“Renault”), contracted to provide vehicles to various Iraqi ministries. In performing these contracts, Renault hired a Swiss “bodybuilder” to tailor the vehicles to the buyer’s specifications. Renault provided the “bodybuilder” with additional payments to be passed on to the Iraqi government. The purpose of these payments was to procure additional contracts for Renault. AB Volvo’s other subsidiary, Volvo Construction Equipment International (“Volvo Construction”), also contracted to sell vehicles to various Iraqi ministries. Volvo Construction sold these vehicles through a Jordanian consulting firm and a Tunisian distributor. Large kickbacks were included in the contract prices to procure the contract. Volvo Construction also made additional illicit payments, including providing money to purchase a car for the Iraqi Ministry of the Interior.

The government did not allege bribery of any individual foreign governmental officials.

Enforcement. The SEC brought suit against Volvo for failure to maintain internal controls and for books and records violations. On March 20, 2008, without admitting or denying the allegations of the Complaint, the parent company, AB Volvo, entered into a consent agreement with the SEC. The agreement called for disgorgement of $7,299,208, prejudgment interest of $1,303,441, a civil penalty of $4,000,000, and Volvo’s agreement to be permanently restrained and enjoined from violations of the

In June 2011, the court granted the DOJ's motion to dismiss the information against AB Volvo because it had complied with the terms of the deferred prosecution agreement.

In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

Flowserve Corporation (“Flowserve”), an American corporation, was involved in the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program through two of its foreign subsidiaries: Flowserve Pompes SAS, a French subsidiary, and Flowserve B.V., a Dutch subsidiary. These two foreign subsidiaries allegedly entered into 20 contracts in which kickback payments to the Iraqi government were either made or authorized. In total, payments of $646,488 were made through two Jordanian agents with Flowserve Pompes SAS making payments totaling $604,651, and Flowserve B.V. making payments totaling $41,836. According to the SEC, Flowserve Pompes authorized an additional $173,758 in payments which were never made.

The government did not allege bribery of any individual foreign governmental officials.

Enforcement. The SEC alleged in its complaint, filed in February 2008, that Flowserve either knew of or was reckless in not knowing of the kickback payments being made by Flowserve Pompes and Flowserve B.V., which Flowserve knew were illegal under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program. The complaint further alleged that Flowserve violated the books and records provision of the FCPA by failing to properly account for these payments and that Flowserve violated the internal controls provision of the FCPA by failing to implement internal controls sufficient to prevent this type of misconduct.

SEC v. Westinghouse Air Brake Technologies Corporation (Feb. 14, 2008)³¹⁸

Nature of the Business. Sales of railway equipment.

Business Location. India.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $137,400.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $259,000.
3. Intermediary. Marketing Agents.
4. The foreign official. Officials of the Indian Railway Board.

Influence to be Obtained. From 2001 to 2005, Pioneer Friction Limited (“Pioneer”), an Indian subsidiary of Westinghouse Air Brake Technologies Corporation (“Wabtec”), a U.S corporation, and its employees and agents made various payments to officials of the Indian Railway Board (“IRB”), a government agency which is part of India’s Ministry of Railroads, to have its competitive bids for government business granted or considered. In connection with the improper payments, Wabtec failed to keep accurate books and records and failed to devise and maintain effective internal accounting controls.

Enforcement. In February 2008, without admitting or denying the allegations in the SEC’s complaint, Wabtec consented to the entry of a final judgment and paid a $87,000 civil penalty. In a separate proceeding, Wabtec consented to the entry of a cease and desist order detailing the same allegations and requiring disgorgement of $259,000 and prejudgment interest of $29,351 and the appointment of a compliance consultant for a 60 day review.

SEC v. Gioacchino De Chirico \(N.D. GA 2007\)³²⁰

Nature of the Business. Manufacture and marketing of blood-testing supplies and equipment. Immucor, Inc., a U.S. corporation, is a medical equipment company specializing in products used in the pre-transfusion diagnostics of human blood. Gioacchino De Chirico, an Italian citizen and legal resident of the U.S., was the President and Chief Operating Officer of Immucor. As of September 2009, he continues to serve as President and CEO.

Business Location. Italy.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $16,119 (€13,500).
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not specified.
3. Intermediary. Agent.
4. The foreign official. The director of a public hospital in Milan, Italy.

Influence to be Obtained. In January 2002, Immucor Italia S.p.A., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Immucor, sold blood testing units to Niguarda Hospital, a public hospital in Milan, Italy. The associated contract included additional services that Immucor would provide to the hospital over time to assist in the usage of the equipment. In 2003, De Chirico allegedly arranged for the director of Niguarda Hospital to chair a medical conference in Italy on the topic of an Immucor product and agreed to compensate the hospital director for his role at the conference in a method that would enable him to avoid paying income taxes.

According to the SEC, in 2004, Immucor Italia, acting through a sales agent, offered the hospital director a payment of 13,500 Euros to influence his decision to award a contract. De Chirico allegedly authorized Immucor's German subsidiary to pay 13,500 Euros to the hospital director through a Swiss bank account. Immucor's German subsidiary allegedly categorized the 2004 payment as a payment for consulting services, but no consulting services were rendered and the payment was, in fact, made in exchange for preferential treatment from the hospital director in selecting suppliers.

Enforcement. On September 27, 2007, Immucor and De Chirico consented to the SEC issuing a cease and desist order ordering them to cease from committing or causing any further violations of the books and records or internal controls provisions of the FCPA. In addition, without admitting or denying the allegations in the complaint, De Chirico consented to the district court of the Northern District of Georgia entering a final judgment against him on October 2, 2007 requiring him to pay a $30,000 civil penalty.

46. SEC v. Lucent Technologies Inc. (D.D.C. 2007)³²¹

Nature of the Business. Procurement of contracts for communications networks systems. Lucent Technologies Inc. (“Lucent”), a U.S. corporation, merged with Alcatel SA in 2006, forming a new entity, Alcatel-Lucent, incorporated in France.

Business Location. China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. In excess of $10 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $ 3-4 billion.
3. Intermediary. None specified.
4. The foreign official. Officials of the Chinese government who were employees of state-owned or state-controlled telecommunications enterprises.

Influence to be Obtained. Between at least 2000-2003, Lucent provided approximately 315 trips to the United States to over 1,000 Chinese government officials. The trips were primarily, and sometimes wholly, for sight-seeing and leisure rather than business purposes, and were booked improperly in Lucent’s books and records, for example as “factory inspections” in locations where no factory existed or “services rendered – other services” (where no business-related services were rendered). Lucent’s internal controls provided no mechanism for assessing whether any of the trips violated the FCPA. These trips and educational expenses were intended to procure contracts for the provision of communications networks systems worth at least $3 billion .

Enforcement. Without admitting or denying the allegations in the Commission’s complaint, Lucent consented to a final judgment on January 5, 2008, requiring it to cease and desist from further violations of the FCPA, to implement an FCPA compliance protocol, and to pay a civil penalty of $1.5 million. Lucent also entered into a two-year non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ, admitting to the alleged conduct and agreeing to pay a $1 million penalty and to adopt new, or modify existing, internal controls.

45. SEC v. Ingersoll-Rand Co. Ltd. (D.D.C. 2007)³²²

Nature of the Business. Procurement of humanitarian contracts to sell industrial equipment to Iraqi government entities under the United Nations Oil-for-Food Program. Ingersoll-Rand Co. Ltd. (“Ingersoll-Rand”) is a Bermuda corporation.

Business Location. Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $1,515,845 in kickbacks to the Iraqi government.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $2.27 million in profits.
3. Intermediary. Distributor.
4. The foreign official. Unspecified Iraqi government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

The SEC complaint alleges that, from October 2000 to August 2003, four wholly-owned subsidiaries of Ingersoll-Rand (ABG Allgemeine Baumaschinen-Gesellschaft mbH, Ingersoll-Rand Italiana, SpA, Thermo King Ireland Limited, and Ingersoll-Rand Benelux, N.V.) entered into twelve contracts and either made, or agreed to make, “after sales service fees” payments to secure or obtain contracts to sell industrial equipment to the Iraqi government and were improperly recorded in the company’s books and records. The Italian subsidiary, Ingersoll-Rand Italiana, also allegedly financed leisure travel and entertainment for Iraqi government officials.

Enforcement. Without admitting or denying the allegations in the Commission’s complaint, Ingersoll-Rand consented to the entry of a final judgment on October 31, 2007. Ingersoll-Rand agreed to a cease and desist order and to pay disgorgement of profits of $1,710,034 plus prejudgment interest of $560,953, and a further civil penalty of $1,950,000, and to retain a compliance monitor. Ingersoll-Rand also entered into a 3-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ, agreeing to pay a monetary penalty of $2.5 million, accept responsibility for the alleged misconduct, continue to cooperate with the DOJ, adopt an FCPA compliance program as well as a set of internal controls designed to prevent future violations, and retain an independent compliance expert for a period of three years.

Nature of the Business. Akzo Nobel N.V., a Netherlands-based pharmaceutical company, manufactures human and animal health care products, decorative paints, and other chemicals.

Business Location. Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $279,491 in kickbacks to the Iraqi government.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $1,647,363 in profits.
3. Intermediary. Agents.
4. The foreign official. None.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

The SEC’s complaint alleges that, between 2000 and 2002, two Akzo Nobel subsidiaries authorized and made $279,491 in kickback payments to the Iraqi government in connection with their sales of humanitarian goods to Iraq under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program. The payments were in the form of kickbacks, characterized as “after-sales services fees,” and were usually 10% of the contract price. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price and the commissions paid to certain agents and were improperly recorded in the company’s books and records as commission payments.

The government did not allege bribery of any individual foreign governmental officials.

Enforcement. Without admitting or denying the allegations in the SEC’s complaint, Akzo Nobel consented to the entry of a final judgment permanently enjoining it from future violations and ordering disgorgement and prejudgment interest of $2,231,513, as well as a civil penalty of $750,000.

The company also entered into a deferred-prosecution agreement with the DOJ, which required the company to reach a resolution with the Dutch Public Prosecutor under which it would pay a criminal fine of no less than €381,602 in the Netherlands. According to the agreement, if Akzo Nobel fails to reach a resolution with the Dutch Public Prosecutor within 180 days, it will pay $800,000 to the U.S. Treasury.

43. SEC v. Robert W. Philip (D. Or. 2007)³²⁴

Nature of the Business. Sale of scrap metal by Schnitzer Steel Industries (“Schnitzer”) to steel mills. Robert Philip (“Philip”) is the former President, CEO, and Chairman of Schnitzer, a U.S. corporation.

Business Location. South Korea and China.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $205,000 (foreign officials) and $1.7 million (private parties).
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $500 million.
3. Intermediary. None specified.
4. The foreign official. Managers of private and government-owned steel mills.

Influence to be Obtained. The SEC’s complaint alleges that, from at least 1999 through 2004, Philip authorized payments of cash bribes and other gifts to managers of government-owned steel mills in China to induce them to purchase scrap metal from Schnitzer. Philip also allegedly authorized payments to managers of privately owned steel mills in both China and South Korea. The payments were allegedly made in the form of cash or gifts.

Enforcement. On December 13, 2007, the SEC brought a settled civil suit charging Philip with authorizing the payment of the bribes, aiding and abetting Schnitzer’s failure to keep accurate books and records, and failing to implement internal controls. The complaint alleges that the profits from the illicit payments caused Philip to receive “excess bonus compensation.” Without admitting or denying the allegations, Philip settled the matter by agreeing to disgorge $169,864 in bonuses and pay $16,537 in prejudgment interest and pay a civil penalty of $75,000, in addition to agreeing to an order enjoining him from future violations.

42. SEC v. Chevron Corp. (S.D.N.Y. 2007)³²⁵

Nature of the Business. Purchase of Iraqi oil by Chevron Corporation, a U.S. corporation.

Business Location. Iraq.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $20 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unspecified.
3. Intermediary. Oil trading companies.
4. The foreign official. None.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

According to the SEC’s complaint, from approximately April 2001 through May 2002, Chevron allegedly purchased 78 million barrels of crude oil from Iraq pursuant to 36 contracts with third parties, paying premiums to the third parties that, in turn, were paid to Iraq’s State Oil Marketing Organization as illegal surcharges, paid to bank accounts in Jordan and Lebanon controlled by the Iraqi government and in the names of Iraqi government officials and other individuals. The complaint alleges that Chevron improperly recorded the true nature of the payments.

The government did not allege bribery of any individual foreign governmental officials.

Enforcement. On November 14, 2007, the SEC filed a settled complaint against Chevron. Without admitting or denying the allegations, Chevron consented to the entry of an injunction as well as to disgorgement of $25 million ($20 million to the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the Southern District of New York and $5 million to the New York County District Attorney’s Office) and a civil penalty of $3 million.

Chevron also agreed to pay the Office of Foreign Asset Controls of the U.S. Department of Treasury a penalty of $2 million, and entered into a two-year non-prosecution agreement with the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the Southern District of New York and the District Attorney of New York County, New York.

2. Amount of business related to the payment. $931,318 in net profits in connection with the Iraqi U.N. Oil-for-Food Program; $3.7 million in total sales revenue in connection with the UAE project; approximately $8,017,814 in net profits in connection with 774 other contracts on several continents.
3. Intermediary. Unnamed intermediaries were used in connection with the UAE and other projects.
4. The foreign official. UAE government appointees; officials responsible for over 300 government contracts in various countries.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people (“U.N. Oil-for-Food Program”). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed “after sales service fees,” from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

From 2000 to 2003, York FZE allegedly used a Jordanian company as an intermediary to make a series of indirect kickback payments to the Iraqi government in exchange for receiving contracts to supply its products to various Iraqi ministries and governmental departments. In 2003 to 2004, York Inc. allegedly used one of its own employees to make payments to an intermediary, which is suspected of passing along the payments to governmental appointees responsible for managing the construction of a luxury hotel and convention complex. subsidiaries, allegedly made hundreds of payments to secure government and private contracts in various countries.

Enforcement. On October 1, 2007, the SEC filed a complaint alleging that York International violated the anti-bribery and books and records provisions of the FCPA and failed to maintain adequate internal controls. Without admitting or denying the allegations of the complaint, York International consented to the entry of a final judgment against it permanently enjoining it from future violations and ordering disgorgement of $8,949,132 in profits, plus $1,083,748 in interest, and a $2,000,000 civil penalty. York International also was ordered to retain an independent compliance monitor. The SEC noted that it took into consideration the company's internal remedial actions, cooperation and the fact that it self-reported these alleged violations. The company also separately entered into a deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ, under which it agreed to pay a $10 million fine and to submit to the appointment of an independent monitor for its compliance program. On October 1, 2010, the DOJ dismissed the criminal information on the basis that York International had fully complied with all of its obligations under the deferred prosecution agreement.

40. SEC v. Monty Fu (D.D.C. 2007)³²⁷

Nature of the Business. The sale of radiopharmaceutical products to and the referral of patients to medical imaging centers by state-owned hospitals. Fu was the founder and former CEO and Chairman of Syncor International Corp. (“Syncor”). Syncor’s subsidiary, Syncor Taiwan, sells radiopharmaceuticals and runs medical imaging centers in Taiwan.

Business Location. Taiwan.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Total annual payments averaged $30,000 per year from 1989 to at least 1993, increasing to average over $170,000 per year from at least 1997 through the first half of 2002.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unspecified.
3. Intermediary. The commission payments for radiopharmaceuticals were made directly by Syncor Taiwan, in cash, and the referral fees for the medical imaging centers were hand-delivered, in cash, by a bookkeeper at the imaging center with funds that had been wired to the center by Syncor Taiwan for that purpose.
4. The foreign official. Doctors at state-owned hospitals in Taiwan.

Influence to be Obtained. From 1985 through 1996, Syncor Taiwan allegedly made payments to doctors at private and public hospitals in Taiwan for the purpose of influencing them to purchase or prescribe radiopharmaceutical products and, after 1997, to influence them to refer patients to medical imaging centers owned and operated by Syncor Taiwan.

Enforcement. Without admitting or denying the allegations, Fu has agreed to settle the Commission’s charges by consenting to the entry of a final judgment permanently enjoining him from future violations, and ordering him to pay a civil penalty of $75,000.

39. In the Matter of Bristow Group Inc.³²⁸

Nature of the Business. Reducing annual state expatriate employment taxes in Nigeria. Bristow Group Inc. (“Bristow”), a U.S. company, provides helicopter transportation services and operates oil and gas production facilities.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $423,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Savings of $873,940.
3. Intermediary. None.
4. The foreign official. Two state tax officials in the Delta and Lagos states of Nigeria.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the cease-and-desist order entered with the SEC, Bristow, through its wholly-owned U.S. subsidiary, AirLog International, Ltd. (“AirLog”) and a Nigerian entity partially owned by Bristow, Pan African Airlines Nigeria Ltd. (“PAAN”), made payments in 2003 and 2004 to two state tax officials to reduce the annual expatriate employment taxes due to the state governments by PAAN. At the end of each year, the state government assessed taxes against PAAN, which negotiated with the state tax officials to reduce the tax in exchange for payments to the tax officials. The state government then issued new tax demand letters reflecting the lower tax amount without the separate payments. By this process, PAAN reduced its tax payment from $1,358,940 to $121,700. Taking into account the $423,300 payment, the company saved $873,940. The payments to the officials as well as the tax payments were booked in Bristow’s books and records as legitimate “payroll tax expenses.” During the same time period, additional Bristow affiliates, not listed in the U.S. or organized under U.S. laws, made similar payments to Nigerian tax officials.

Enforcement. Bristow consented to the entry of an SEC cease-and-desist order finding that the company improperly accounted for the cash payments to the government officials, inputting them in their books and records as legitimate tax expenses, and had insufficient internal controls. In addition, the company also underreported its payroll expenses to the Nigerian government and, as a result, improperly reported its payroll expenses in its books and records. As the financials of the additional Bristow affiliates not subject to the FCPA were consolidated with Bristow’s financials, the order also stated that the company’s books and records were inaccurate with respect to payments made by those entities.

Nature of the Business. Provision of management consulting services by Electronic Data Systems Corporation (“Electronic Data”), a U.S. corporation, and its India-based subsidiary, A.T. Kearney Ltd. – India (“Kearney Ltd.”). Chandramowli Srinivasan was the founder and president of Kearney Ltd.

Business Location. India.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $720,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Over $7.5 million.
3. Intermediary. None specified, though some payments were identified as indirect.
4. The foreign official. Senior employees of two Indian energy companies that were partly government-owned.

Influence to be Obtained. Srinivasan allegedly made improper payments to prevent Kearney Ltd.’s two primary customers from canceling their existing contracts with Kearney Ltd. and to award additional contracts to Kearney Ltd. These payments were allegedly partially effected by means of phony invoices prepared by Kearney Ltd.’s outside accountant.

Enforcement. On September 25, 2007, the SEC filed a settled civil action against Srinivasan, alleging violations of the FCPA’s anti-bribery and internal controls provisions. Without admitting or denying the allegations, Srinivasan consented to the entry of final judgment against him enjoining future violations, and agreed to pay a penalty of $70,000. The SEC also brought a related administrative action against Electronic Data under the ‘34 Act on September 25, 2007, in which Electronic Data consented to a cease-and-desist order and agreed to pay $490,902 in disgorgement.

Nature of the Business. Sale of scrap metal to Chinese government instrumentalities and Chinese and South Korean private customers by SSI International, Inc. (“SSI”), which was until 2006 a wholly-owned U.S. subsidiary of Schnitzer Steel Industries, Inc. (“Schnitzer Steel”), a U.S. corporation.

Business Location. China and South Korea.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $205,000 to foreign officials and approximately $1.7 million to private parties.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximate gross revenue of $96 million and net profits of approximately $6.3 million from government entities and approximately $504 million in gross revenue from private entities.
3. Intermediary. None.
4. The foreign official. Managers of government and private customers.

Influence to be Obtained. From 1995 to August 2004, Wooh, a former Executive Vice President and head of SSI, conspired with Schnitzer Steel, SSI, and SSI International Far East, Ltd. (a South Korea-based wholly-owned subsidiary of Schnitzer managed by SSI) to make payments to officers and employees of government-owned customers in China and to managers of privately-owned customers in China and South Korea to induce them to purchase scrap metal. The payments were made to foreign officials primarily in the form of commissions, refunds, and gratuities via off-book foreign bank accounts.

Enforcement. On June 29, 2007, the SEC brought a complaint against Wooh, alleging violations of the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA and aiding and abetting violations of the books and records provisions of the FCPA. On that same day, without admitting or denying the allegations of the SEC’s complaint, Wooh agreed to pay approximately $40,000 in disgorgement, interest, and civil penalties. Nature of the Business. Delta & Pine Land Company (“Delta”), a U.S. corporation, is engaged in the breeding, production, and marketing of cottonseed. Turk Deltapine, Inc. (“Turk”) is a wholly-owned, U.S.-based subsidiary of Delta engaged in the production and sale of cottonseed in Turkey. Delta was acquired by Monsanto Company on June 1, 2007.

Business Location. Turkey.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $43,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unspecified.
3. Intermediary. None.
4. The foreign official. Officials of the Turkish Ministry of Agricultural and Rural Affairs.

Influence to be Obtained. Turk made the payments to secure governmental reports and certifications that were necessary for it to operate in Turkey.

Enforcement. On July 25, 2007, the SEC filed a settled civil action against Delta and Turk, alleging both had violated the FCPA. Without admitting or denying the allegations of the complaint, Delta and Turk consented to the entry of a final judgment requiring a $300,000 penalty to be paid jointly and severally by them. On July 26, 2007, the SEC also filed a cease-and-desist order against Delta and Turk, finding that Delta had violated the books-and-records and internal controls provisions of the FCPA and that Turk had violated the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA. The cease-and-desist order required Delta to retain an independent consultant to review and recommend improvements to the company’s FCPA compliance policies and procedures. Delta and Turk neither admitted nor denied the allegations of the SEC’s cease-and-desist order.

D. SEC Actions Relating to Foreign Bribery

35. SEC v. Textron Inc. (D.D.C. 2007)³³²

Nature of the Business. Sales of industrial pumps, gears and other equipment to Iraq under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program by three of Rhode-Island-based Textron, Inc.'s David Brown French subsidiaries. The investigation into the Iraq payments yielded several dozen more corrupt payments in other countries to secure 36 contracts in those places.

Business Location. Iraq, UAE, Bangladesh, Indonesia, Egypt, and India.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $650,539 in Iraq; $114,995 in the other countries.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Alleged profits of $1,936,926 from Iraq, and $328,939 from the other countries.
3. Intermediary. Two "consultants" for the Iraq payments, one in Lebanon and one in Jordan.
4. The foreign official. Officials of GASCO, ZADCO, and ADCO (subsidiaries of state-owned Abu Dhabi National Oil Company), Pertamina (Indonesian state-owned oil company), and unidentified government-owned companies in Bangladesh, India, and Egypt.

Influence to be Obtained. In April 1995, the U.N. adopted Security Council Resolution 986, which permitted the government of Iraq to sell oil and to use proceeds from those sales to purchase humanitarian supplies such as food for the Iraqi people ("U.N. Oil-for-Food Program"). In an extensive scheme, the Iraqi government received illicit payments in the form of surcharges from oil purchasers and kickbacks, often termed "after sales service fees," from humanitarian goods suppliers. The kickback payments were masked by inflating the contract price, usually by 10% of the contract value.

Textron's French subsidiaries allegedly used consultants to make kickback payments to the government of Iraq to secure sales of industrial pumps and gear.

In addition, the Textron subsidiaries paid bribes to officials of state-owned companies in the UAE, Indonesia, Bangladesh, India, and Egypt to obtain contracts.

Enforcement. The SEC charged Textron with violations of the FCPA's internal controls and books-and-records provisions for failing to implement an adequate set of internal controls to detect and prevent the payments made by its subsidiaries. Without admitting or denying the allegations, Textron consented to the entry of final judgment permanently enjoining it from future violations, ordering it to disgorge $2,284,579 in profits, plus $450,461.68 in prejudgment interest, and to pay a civil penalty of $800,000. Textron is also ordered to take certain steps with respect to its FCPA compliance program.

34. SEC v. Baker Hughes Inc. and Roy Fearnley (S.D. Tex 2007)³³³

Nature of the Business. Provision of oilfield development services by Baker Hughes Inc. (“Baker Hughes”), a U.S. corporation. Roy Fearnley is a former Kazakhstan-based Baker Hughes business executive.

Business Location. Kazakhstan, Angola, Nigeria, Indonesia, Russia, and Uzbekistan.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. At least $5.2 million in Kazakhstan; approximately $10.3 million in Angola; indeterminate amounts in Nigeria, Indonesia, Russia, and Uzbekistan.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. At least $208 million in Kazakhstan; undisclosed amounts in Angola, Nigeria, Indonesia, Russia, and Uzbekistan.
3. Intermediary. Unidentified agents in Kazakhstan, Angola, Russia, and Uzbekistan; a tax consultant and customs brokers in Nigeria; freight forwarders in Indonesia.
4. The foreign official. Officials of Kazakhoil and KazTransOil, Kazakhstani state-owned entities; officials of Sonangol, an Angolan state-owned oil company; Nigerian tax and customs officials; Indonesian customs officials; government officials in Russia and Uzbekistan.

Influence to be Obtained. Baker Hughes allegedly made payments to agents in Kazakhstan to secure a major services contract relating to the development of Karachaganak, a large gas and oil field in northwestern Kazakhstan. Although Baker Hughes was unofficially notified that it would win the contract, Kazakhoil representatives insisted prior to official notification that Baker Hughes retain an Isle of Man-based consultant and agree to pay it a percentage commission of the revenues from the Karachaganak contract. Baker Hughes and its subsidiaries complied, making payments totaling approximately $4.1 million to the consultant from May 2001 to November 2003. Baker Hughes also allegedly engaged in a host of other violations, including paying nearly $1.1 million in commission payments to another agent in Kazakhstan to influence government decision-making. The SEC’s complaint further alleges that Baker Hughes failed to conduct adequate due diligence to assure itself that several payments, including (among others) a $10.3 million payment to an Angolan agent and payments totaling approximately $5.3 million to an agent active in Russia, Uzbekistan, and Kazakhstan were not partly or entirely passed on to government officials in those countries.

Enforcement. On April 26, 2007, Baker Hughes agreed, without admitting or denying the SEC’s allegations, to pay over $23 million in disgorgement and prejudgment interest for these alleged violations, as well as an additional $10 million penalty for violating an existing SEC cease-and-desist order issued against it in 2001 pursuant to an investigation of a bribe paid to an Indonesian tax official. The settlement also permanently enjoins Baker Hughes from further violations of the FCPA or the 2001 cease-and-desist order. On January 26, 2010, the court entered a default judgment against Roy Fearnley, who never

33. SEC v. Charles Michael Martin³³⁴

Nature of the Business. Cultivation of genetically modified crops in Indonesia by Monsanto Co. (“Monsanto”), a U.S. corporation. Charles Michael Martin (“Martin”), a U.S. citizen, was a former employee of Monsanto.

Business Location. Indonesia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $50,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unknown.
3. Intermediary. An Indonesian consulting firm.
4. The foreign official. local Indonesian government official.

Influence to be Obtained. Martin was employed in 2002 by Monsanto as its Government Affairs Director for Asia. In that capacity, he authorized and directed an Indonesian consulting firm to pay a $50,000 bribe to a local Indonesian government official to induce the official to repeal a government decree. The decree required an environmental impact assessment study prior to cultivation of certain agricultural products, and would have prevented Monsanto from cultivating certain of its genetically modified crops in Indonesia. Martin directed the consulting firm to create a set of invoices to falsely bill Monsanto and subsequently approved the invoices and caused Monsanto to falsify its books and records, thus, violating and aiding and abetting violations of the anti-bribery and books and records provisions of the FCPA.

Enforcement. On February 28, 2007, without admitting or denying the allegations against him, Martin agreed to pay a fine of $30,000 and to an injunction not to violate the FCPA. In a related earlier case, on January 6, 2005, Monsanto entered into a non-prosecution agreement with DOJ and a settlement agreement with the SEC. As part of the settlement, Monsanto agreed to, among other things, pay a fine of $1.5 million and to appoint independent consultants to review its business practices over a three-year period, when the criminal charges against it would be dropped permanently by DOJ. Several Monsanto employees in Indonesia were fired.

(“DE-Nocil”), a Dow subsidiary, made payments to a variety of Indian governmental officials, including payments to an official in India’s Central Insecticides Board to expedite the registration of DE-Nocil products. The payments were made through contractors, sometimes using false invoices or fictitious charges in bills.

Enforcement. On February 13, 2007, the SEC filed a settled civil action against Dow under the FCPA, alleging violations of both its internal controls and its books and records provisions. The SEC also concurrently filed a cease-and-desist order against Dow, finding that Dow had also violated the corresponding provisions of the ‘34 Act. Without admitting or denying any of the foregoing allegations, Dow consented to pay a $325,000.00 civil penalty for its violations of the FCPA and consented to the entry of the cease-and-desist order under the ‘34 Act.

2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $420 million in oil purchases.
3. Intermediary. Third-party Iraqi oil companies.
4. The foreign official. None.

Influence to be Obtained. From approximately June 2001 through June 2002, El Paso allegedly purchased Iraqi oil from third parties, paying premiums to the third parties that, in turn, were paid to SOMO as illegal surcharges for the third parties’ oil purchases.

Enforcement. On February 7, 2007, the SEC published a press release announcing the filing of a settled complaint against El Paso Corporation alleging violations of the FCPA’s internal controls and books and records provisions in connection with its participation in the Iraqi Oil-for-Food Program. El Paso neither admitted nor denied the allegations of the complaint, but consented to the entry of an injunction against it under provisions of the ‘34 Act, as well as to a civil penalty of $2.25 million and disgorgement in the amount of $5,482,363.00. The disgorgement was agreed upon pursuant to a non-prosecution agreement with the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the Southern District of New York, which also requires El Paso to continue cooperating with the ongoing Oil-for-Food investigation. The U.S. Attorney’s Office intends to transfer the disgorged funds to the Development Fund for Iraq.

1. Amount of the value. $204, 537 (foreign officials) and $1,683,672 (private parties).
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Gross revenue of $96,455, 350 and profits of $6,279,095 from government entities and gross revenue of $603,593,957 and profits of $55,327,840 from private entities.

29. In the Matter of Statoil ASA (2006)³³⁸

Nature of the Business. Provision of oilfield development services by Statoil, Norway's largest oil and gas company. Statoil is a foreign issuer listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Business Location. Iran.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $5.2 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Undetermined.
3. Intermediary. Offshore intermediary company consultant.
4. The foreign official. Head of a subsidiary organization of the national oil company.

Influence to be Obtained. From 2000, Statoil sought to expand its international operations with a focus on Iran. In 2001, high-level Statoil officials met with the head of the Iranian Fuel Consumption Optimizing Organization, a subsidiary of the National Iranian Oil Company. The Iranian official, the son of a former President of Iran, was determined to be highly influential in the award of oil and gas business in Iran. In 2002, Statoil entered into a $15.2 million contract with Horton Investments, Ltd., a small consulting firm in Turks & Caicos and owned by a third-party in London, to provide payments to the Iranian official, of which $200,000 was paid in June 2002. The Iranian official used his influence to secure a contract for Statoil in October 2002 to develop the South Pars oil and gas field, a contract which would yield "millions of dollars in profit." In December 2002, Statoil paid an additional $5 million to the official.

In 2004, Statoil's internal audit department uncovered and reported the existence of the consulting contract and the $5.2 million payments to the company's CFO, who ordered an investigation. Statoil's security group and internal audit group prepared a report concluding that the company may have violated U.S. and Norwegian bribery laws and recommended that the contract be terminated immediately. Nevertheless, Statoil's CEO and the Chairman of its Board took no corrective action.

Three senior executives at Statoil have resigned: its chairman Leif Terje Loeddesoel, chief executive officer Olav Fjell, and executive vice president Richard Hubbard.

Enforcement. Statoil has consented to a cease-and-desist order and to pay $10.5 million in disgorgement and to retain a compliance monitor for three years. In the DOJ proceeding, Statoil entered a three-year deferred prosecution agreement and agreed to pay a $10.5 million penalty. Statoil has already paid a NOK 20 million ($3.045 million USD) fine to the Norway National Authority for Investigation and Prosecution of Economic Crime, without admitting or denying any liability, which will be deducted from the U.S. fines. On October 18, 2004, Richard Hubbard accepted a fine of NOK 200,000 ($30,300).

28. SEC v. Jim Bob Brown (S.D. Tex. 2006)³³⁹

Nature of the Business. Procurement of contracts for oil and gas pipeline construction projects by Willbros International Inc. (“Willbros International”), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Willbros Group, Inc. (“Willbros Group”). Willbros is a Panamanian corporation listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Jim Bob Brown, a former employee of Willbros International, was a managing director of Nigerian and South American subsidiary operations of Willbros International from 2000 until his termination in 2005.

Business Location. Nigeria and Ecuador.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $2.255 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Revenue of $243,400,000.
3. Intermediary. Outside consultants and employees.
4. The foreign official. Officials of Nigerian Petroleum Corporation and its subsidiaries and joint ventures, Nigerian tax officials, Nigerian tax and court officials, officials of PetroEcuador.

Influence to be Obtained. The SEC alleged that Brown and others, as employees on behalf of Willbros International, paid consultants to promise and make corrupt payments to foreign officials at the Nigerian and Ecuadorian government-owned oil companies to obtain oil and gas pipeline construction business. The payments in Nigeria were part of a larger multi-million dollar bribery scheme involving a former senior Willbros Group executive, a U.S. national acting as a purported “consultant,” and Nigeria-based employees of a major German construction and engineering firm with whom Willbros participated in a consortium. The SEC also alleged that Willbros staff made payments dating back to 1996 to Nigerian tax and court officials to obtain favorable treatment for tax assessments and litigation.

Enforcement. On September 14, 2006, Brown pleaded guilty in a related criminal proceeding to violating the FCPA by conspiring with others to bribe Nigerian and Ecuadorian officials. Brown settled the civil action without admitting or denying the SEC’s allegations. The district court entered an interlocutory judgment on September 19, 2006, enjoining Brown from further violations, but stayed the proceedings with respect to issuing a civil penalty, pending sentencing in Brown’s related criminal proceeding. On January 28, 2010, Brown was sentenced in the criminal proceeding to 12 months and 1 day of imprisonment, supervised release of 2 years, a criminal fine of $17,500, and an assessment of $100. On May 10, 2010, the court terminated the action brought by the SEC, converting the interlocutory judgment to a final judgment without imposing any civil penalty.

1. Amount of the value. $203,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $41,300,000.
3. Intermediary. Third party distributors of InVision’s products and InVision’s own sales agents.
4. The foreign official. Unknown.

Influence to be Obtained. Payments were made by InVision’s sales agents and distributors to foreign officials to secure or retain business for InVision. The DOJ found that there was a “high probability” that senior employees at InVision were aware of the payments, but took no action to determine their legality.

Enforcement. On August 15, 2006, the SEC settled charges against Pillor for failing to devise and maintain a system of internal controls adequate to detect and prevent InVision’s violations of the FCPA and for indirectly causing the falsification of the company’s books and records. Without admitting or denying the allegations, Pillor agreed to pay a $65,000 civil penalty and to the entry of a permanent injunction against future violations.

3. Intermediary. None.
4. The foreign official. Officials of the National Petroleum Investment Management Services (“NAPIMS”), the state-owned agency which oversees investment in petroleum.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the complaint filed by the SEC on July 5, 2006, during the period 1999 through 2001, the defendants offered, approved, and paid bribes to NAPIMS officials in furtherance of ABB’s bid to obtain a $180 million contract to provide equipment for an oil drilling project. In addition, the defendants disguised the payments on ABB’s books as legitimate consulting expenses through the creation of false business records.

Enforcement. Without admitting or denying the allegations in the complaint, Samson, Munro, Campbell and Whelan consented to the entry of final judgments that (1) permanently enjoin each of them from future violations of the FCPA, (2) order each to pay a civil monetary penalty ($50,000 as to Samson, and $40,000 each as to Munro, Campbell and Whelan), and (3) orders Samson to pay $64,675 in disgorgement and prejudgment interest.

Business Location. Nigeria, Rwanda, and Senegal.

In exchange for the payments, they sought the award of lucrative telephone contracts to provide individual and business telecommunication services in those countries.

Enforcement. After identifying the potential improper payments, Teleglobe notified the SEC and DOJ and conducted its own internal investigation. After conducting their own investigations, the SEC and DOJ in June 2005 brought separate cases against Amoako for violations of the FCPA. On September 6, 2006, the DOJ reported that Amoako had pled guilty to one count of conspiring to violate the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA. On April 22, 2008, without admitting or denying the allegations of the complaint, Amoako consented to the entry of final judgment with the SEC, by which he is permanently enjoined from violating the anti-bribery, internal controls, and books and records provisions of the FCPA. Amoako also agreed to disgorge $150,411 in profits, together with $38,042 in interest. The SEC brought an action against Ott and Young on September 6, 2006 for three counts of violating the anti-bribery and books and records provisions of the FCPA, seeking injunctive relief, penalties, and disgorgement. In April 2008, Ott and Young, without admitting or denying the facts in the complaint, settled with the SEC and agreed to an order enjoining them from committing future violations of the FCPA.

21. SEC v. Monsanto Co. (D.D.C. 2005)³⁴⁷

Nature of the Business. Cultivation of genetically modified crops in Indonesia by Monsanto Co. (“Monsanto”), a U.S. corporation.

Monsanto Co. (“Monsanto”) is a large provider of agricultural products.

Business Location. Indonesia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $50,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Unknown.
3. Intermediary. An Indonesian consultant.
4. The foreign official. A local Indonesian government official.

Influence to be Obtained. In November 2002, after a routine internal audit, Monsanto notified the SEC and DOJ of various financial irregularities at its Indonesian affiliate companies. The inquiry revealed that a Monsanto officer authorized the payment of a $50,000 bribe to a local Indonesian government official to induce the official to repeal a government decree. The decree required an environmental impact assessment study prior to cultivation of certain agricultural products, and would have prevented Monsanto from cultivating certain of its genetically modified crops in Indonesia. Interestingly, the bribe itself was unrelated to any specific contract sought by Monsanto, or that Monsanto would be unable to pass an environmental impact study. It appears, rather, that the purpose of the bribe was to avoid the regulatory and administrative burden associated with undertaking the environmental study.

Enforcement. On January 6, 2005, Monsanto entered into a non-prosecution agreement with the DOJ and a settlement agreement with the SEC. As part of the settlement, Monsanto agreed to, among other things, pay a fine of $1.5 million and to appoint independent consultants to review its business practices over a three-year period, when the criminal charges against it would be dropped permanently by the DOJ. Several Monsanto employees in Indonesia were fired.

Upon receipt and review of a motion to dismiss filed by the DOJ, on March 5, 2008, the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia entered an agreed order dismissing the proceeding against Monsanto with prejudice. The action by the court ends the Deferred Prosecution Agreement. The independent consultants subsequently submitted the final report to the government for review.

20. SEC v. GE InVision, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2005)³⁴⁸

Nature of the Business. Sales of explosives detection products by InVision Technologies, Inc.³⁴⁹ (“InVision”), a U.S. corporation.

Business Location. Thailand, China, and the Philippines.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. More than $95,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. More than $589,000.
3. Intermediary. Unknown.
4. The foreign official. Unknown.

Influence to be Obtained. Payments were made by InVision’s sales agents and distributors to foreign officials to secure or retain business for InVision. The DOJ found that there was a “high probability” that senior employees at InVision were aware of the payments, but took no action to determine their legality.

Enforcement. InVision disclosed that it was the subject of DOJ and SEC investigations in August 2004. In December 2004, the DOJ and InVision entered into a non-prosecution agreement whereby InVision agreed to certain conditions in exchange for a promise from the government that InVision will not be prosecuted for these violations. If InVision fails to comply with any of the terms of the agreement for a period of two years, the government will be free to prosecute the company for these violations. Among other things, InVision agreed to pay a fine of $800,000, accept responsibility for the misconduct, continue to cooperate with the DOJ, and adopt an FCPA compliance program as well as a set of internal controls designed to prevent future violations. Without admitting or denying the claims brought against it by the SEC, on February 14, 2005, InVision settled those claims and agreed to turn over $589,000 of ill-gotten profits, and pay a fine of $500,000. This case represents one of the few FCPA inquiries that involve distributors, rather than traditional FCPA investigations that focus on sales representatives or consultants to the company. Sales representatives and consultants are typically considered intermediaries of the company that is the subject of an investigation and the company is therefore deemed to be fully liable for their actions. In contrast, distributors purchase goods from manufacturers, take possession and title, and then offer the product for re-sale in their own name and at their own price. Accordingly, companies often do not view distributors as agents of the company for purposes of regulatory compliance.

19. SEC v. Titan Corp. (D.D.C. 2005)³⁵⁰

Nature of the Business. Provision of wireless telecommunications projects in Benin by subsidiaries of Titan Corporation (“Titan”), a U.S. company, which is a leading military and intelligence contractor with $2 billion in annual sales derived primarily from contracts with U.S. military, intelligence and homeland security agencies. Titan’s subsidiaries include Titan Wireless, Inc., Titan Africa, Inc., and Titan Africa, S.A.

Business Location. Benin.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. More than $3.5 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $98 million.
3. Intermediary. The business advisor of the President of Benin.
4. The foreign official. President of Benin.

Influence to be Obtained. At the direction of at least one former senior Titan official based in the United States, Titan made payments to the re-election campaign of Benin’s incumbent president to assist his re-election and thereby enable the company to develop a telecommunications project in Benin. The SEC alleged that Titan’s internal controls were virtually non-existent, and that Titan had falsified documents filed with the United States government and underreported commission payments in its business dealings in France, Japan, Nepal, Bangladesh, and Sri Lanka.

Enforcement. Titan pleaded guilty on March 1, 2005 to three felony counts of violating the FCPA and agreed to pay a criminal fine of $13 million, along with a civil penalty and disgorgement to the SEC in the amount of approximately $15.5 million. The SEC deemed the $13 million satisfied by Titan’s payment of criminal fines in the same amount in related proceedings brought by the DOJ. Titan also agreed to retain an independent consultant to review and further implement its FCPA compliance procedures.

18. *In the Matter of BJ Services Co. (D.D.C. 2004)*³⁵¹

Nature of the Business. Provision of oil well maintenance services by BJ Services Co. (“BJ Services”), a Houston-based corporation which provides oil field services, products, and equipment to petroleum producers worldwide.

Business Location. Argentina.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Several payments totaling 72,000 Argentine pesos.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Undetermined.
3. Intermediary. None.
4. The foreign official. Argentine customs officials and an employee of Argentina’s Secretary of Industry and Commerce.

Influence to be Obtained. Employees of BJ Services Argentine subsidiary, BJ Services, S.A., paid approximately 65,000 pesos to several Argentine customs officials in 2001 in return for the officials assistance in overlooking customs law violations relating to the importation of a piece of oil well maintenance equipment.

Enforcement. BJ Services identified the improper payments and violations of the books and records provisions of the FCPA during a routine financial audit and conducted an internal investigation. The company also reported the payments to the SEC. In March 2004, BJ Services settled the case with the SEC with the filing of a cease-and-desist order relating to the actions of BJ Services, S.A. Citing the company’s prompt remedial actions and cooperating with the SEC, in accepting the settlement offer, the SEC did not fine BJ Services.

17. SEC v. ABB Ltd. (D.D.C. 2004)³⁵²

Nature of the Business. Provision of power and automation technologies, including oil and gas projects by ABB, Ltd. (“ABB”), a Swiss corporation, which has a number of direct and indirect subsidiaries that do business in the United States and in 100 foreign countries. Among its subsidiaries is ABB Vetco Gray, Inc., a Texas corporation, and ABB Vetco Gray U.K., Ltd., a British corporation (the “Subsidiaries”).

Business Location. Nigeria, Angola, and Kazakhstan.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Over $1.1 million.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. At least $5,501,157 in profits.
3. Intermediary. See below.
4. The foreign official. See below.

Influence to be Obtained. To assist ABB’s subsidiaries in obtaining and retaining business in Nigeria, Angola, and Kazakhstan. From 1998 through 2003, ABB’s U.S. and foreign-based subsidiaries doing business in Nigeria, Angola, and Kazakhstan, offered and made illicit payments totaling over $1.1 million to government officials in those countries. In Nigeria, ABB’s subsidiary made improper payments (directly and through an intermediary) to officials of the National Petroleum Investment Management Service, the state-owned agency which oversees investment in petroleum, to secure oil and gas projects in Nigeria. In Angola, ABB’s subsidiary made improper payments in the form of three training trips to Sonangol (state-owned oil company) engineers to secure contracts. Finally, in Kazakhstan, an ABB subsidiary made payments to companies owned by a former employee of the subsidiary who was a government official to secure Kazakhstan government business for the ABB subsidiary.

Enforcement. In July 2004, without admitting or denying the allegations in the SEC’s complaint, ABB agreed to pay $5.9 million in disgorgement and prejudgment interest, $10.5 million civil penalty (which was deemed to be satisfied by the SEC as a result of two of ABB’s affiliates’ payments of criminal fines totaling the same amount in a parallel DOJ proceeding), and to retain an outside FCPA compliance consultant. In the DOJ proceeding, the ABB subsidiaries, ABB Vetco Gray, Inc. and ABB Vetco Gray U.K., Ltd., pled guilty to two felony counts of violating the FCPA and agreed to pay a $10.5 million fine.

16. SEC v. Schering-Plough Corp. (D.D.C. 2004)³⁵³

Nature of the Business. Sale of pharmaceutical products by Schering-Plough Corp., a U.S.-based global health care company.

Business Location. Poland.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. Approximately $76,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. None.
4. The foreign official. Polish government official, who is also the president of the Chudow Castle Foundation.

Influence to be Obtained. According to the complaint filed by the SEC on June 8, 2004, between February 1999 and March 2002, Schering-Plough's Polish subsidiary paid approximately $76,000 to a charitable foundation to induce the foundation's president, who was also a Polish government official, to influence the purchase of Schering-Plough's pharmaceutical products. None of the payments to the charity were accurately reflected in Schering-Plough's books and records. In addition, according to the complaint, Schering-Plough's system of internal accounting controls failed to prevent or detect the improper payments.

Enforcement. Without admitting or denying the allegations in the complaint, on June 16, 2004, Schering-Plough consented to pay $500,000 civil penalty to settle the matter.

Influence to be Obtained. 1) Obtaining and retaining business from those hospitals, 2) the purchase and sale of unit dosages of certain radiopharmaceuticals, and 3) referrals of patients to medical imaging centers owned by Syncor.

Enforcement. Without admitting or denying the allegations in the SEC complaint, Syncor consented to pay a civil penalty of $500,000 and consented to an administrative order drafted by the SEC which requires Syncor to cease-and-desist from the illegal activity and to hire an independent consultant to audit and recommend corrective changes to the company’s FCPA compliance policies and procedures. Notably, this matter was discovered in the course of due diligence in connection with the acquisition of the company.

In a related criminal action, Syncor pleaded guilty to violating the FCPA’s anti-bribery provision and agreed to pay a $2 million fine.

14. SEC v. BellSouth Corp. (N.D. Ga. 2002)³⁵⁵

Nature of the Business. Acquisition of a majority interest in a Nicaraguan telecommunications company by BellSouth (“BellSouth”) which has a wholly-owned subsidiary called BellSouth International (“BellSouth International”) and two Latin American subsidiaries: Telcel, C.A. (“Telcel”), a Venezuelan corporation, and Telefonía Celular de Nicaragua, S.A. (“Telefonía”), a Nicaraguan corporation.

Business Location. Venezuela and Nicaragua.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $60,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Not stated.
3. Intermediary. Not stated.
4. The foreign official. Payments in the form of consulting and lobbying fees paid to the wife of the chairman of the Nicaraguan legislative committee.

Influence to be Obtained. BellSouth sought to have a law prohibiting foreign companies from obtaining a majority interest in Nicaraguan telecommunications companies repealed. BellSouth paid the wife of the chairman of the Nicaraguan legislative committee $60,000 in consulting and lobbying fees. In December of 1999, the foreign ownership provision was repealed and BellSouth exercised an option which enabled it to acquire 89% ownership of Telefonía. The chairman of the legislative committee played a significant role in the repeal of the foreign ownership provision.

Enforcement. On January 15, 2002, while neither admitting nor denying the SEC’s allegations, BellSouth entered into a cease-and-desist order relating to BellSouth’s Latin American subsidiaries, Telcel and Telefonía. BellSouth also agreed to pay a civil penalty of $150,000.

13. SEC v. Douglas A. Murphy, David G. Kay and Lawrence H. Theriot (S.D. Tex. 2002)³⁵⁶

Nature of the Business. American Rice, Inc. (“ARI”) has a Haitian subsidiary, Rice Corporation of Haiti (“RCH”), engaged in the import of rice to Haiti. ARI is a Texas corporation and a U.S. issuer. Douglas A. Murphy is the former president of American Rice, and David Kay is the former Vice President. Lawrence H. Theriot is a former consultant to American Rice.

Business Location. Haiti.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. The alleged bribes ranged from $25,000 to $72,000 and totaled more than $528,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. The alleged bribes saved the company more than $1.5 million dollars in Haitian import tax.
3. Intermediary. None.
4. The foreign official. Haitian customs and tax officials.

Influence to be Obtained. False shipping documents reducing the amount of customs duties and sales taxes due to Haitian authorities.

Enforcement. On July 30, 2002, the SEC filed a civil injunctive action against two former officers of ARI. The complaint asked that Kay and Murphy each pay $187,000 in civil penalties, and that Theriot pay $11,000 and asks that all three defendants be enjoined from committing further violations. The civil litigation was stayed pending the outcome of criminal prosecutions against Kay and Murphy. Both were found guilty of, inter alia, violations of the FCPA. A consent judgment against Theriot, which enjoined him from future violations of the FCPA and imposed an $11,000 fine, was entered on December 30, 2004.

In addition, on January 30, 2003, the SEC issued an order against ARI, Joseph A. Schwartz, Jr., a former controller for Haiti operations, Joel R. Malebrance and Allen W. Sturdivant, former employees of ARI. The order found that Schwartz, Malebrance and Sturdivant had participated in the scheme to bribe Haitian customs officials in violation of the FCPA. In the order, ARI, Schwartz, Malebrance and Sturdivant agreed to cease-and-desist from committing or causing any violation and any future violation of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. ARI, Schwartz, Malebrance and Sturdivant consented to the order without admitting or denying its findings.

12. In the Matter of Chiquita Brands Int'l, Inc.³⁵⁷
SEC v. Chiquita Brands Int'l, Inc. (D.D.C. 2001)³⁵⁸

Nature of the Business. Chiquita Brands International, Inc. (“Chiquita”) is a New Jersey corporation with an indirectly wholly-owned subsidiary, C.I. Bananos de Exportación, S.A. (“Banadex”), in Colombia engaged in the import/export of bananas and operating a port facility.

Business Location. Colombia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $30,000.
2. Intermediary. Comercio Exterior Asesores Limitada (“CEA”), Banadex’s customs broker.
3. The foreign official. Colombian customs officials.

Influence to be Obtained. Renewing the Banadex port facility’s customs license.

Enforcement. Settled cease-and-desist order against Chiquita for violating the FCPA books and records and internal accounting controls provisions. Consent order entered in federal court requiring Chiquita to pay a $100,000 civil penalty.

The administrative order finds that, in breach of Chiquita’s strict policies and procedures and without the knowledge or consent of any Chiquita employee, Banadex’s chief administrative officer authorized Banadex’s agent, CEA, to pay Colombian customs officials to obtain the port facility license renewal and instructed Banadex’s security officer and controller to make the payments from a Banadex account for discretionary expenses. The payments were incorrectly identified in Banadex’s books and records.

The order further finds that Chiquita’s internal audit staff discovered the payments during an audit review, and after conducting an internal review, Chiquita took corrective action, including terminating the responsible Banadex employees and reinforcing internal controls in its Colombian operations. According to the order, Chiquita audit staff had previously made management aware of a number of instances in which Banadex had not provided required documentation regarding discretionary payments.

SEC v. KPMG Siddharta Siddharta & Harsono, and Sonny Harsono (S.D. Tex. 2001)³⁶⁰
SEC v. Eric L. Mattson and James W. Harris (S.D. Tex. 2001)³⁶¹

Nature of the Business. KPMG Siddharta Siddharta & Harsono, a public accounting firm in Indonesia (“KPMG”), and Sonny Harsono (“Harsono”), a partner of KPMG, which is an affiliate firm of KPMG International. KPMG was the accountant and agent for Baker Hughes Incorporated (“Baker Hughes”), a Texas oilfield services company. Eric Mattson was Baker Hughes’s former chief financial officer and James Harris was Baker Hughes’s former controller.

Business Location. Indonesia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $75,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. $2.93 million.
3. Intermediary. KPMG-SSH.
4. The foreign official. Indonesian tax official.

Influence to be Obtained. Reduction of tax assessment for PT Eastman Christensen (“PTEC”), an Indonesian company beneficially owned by BHI, from $3.2 million to $270,000.

Enforcement. Action against KPMG and Harsono was the first joint civil injunctive action by the SEC and DOJ. Eric Mattson and James Harris authorized Harsono and KPMG to pay the bribe to significantly reduce the tax assessment against PTEC. The amount of the bribe was then included in an invoice to PTEC, which paid the invoice and improperly entered the transaction on its books and records as payment for professional services rendered. The defendants consented to the entry of a final judgment that permanently enjoins both defendants from violating and aiding and abetting the violation of the anti-bribery provisions of the FCPA and the internal controls and books and records provisions of the Exchange Act.

The administrative order against Baker Hughes also finds that Baker Hughes senior managers authorized payments to Baker Hughes’s agents in India and Brazil in 1998 and 1995, respectively, without making an adequate inquiry as to whether the agents might give all or part of the payments to foreign government officials in violation of the FCPA. Baker Hughes consented to a cease-and-desist order as to the internal controls and books and records provision of the Exchange Act, but did not impose a financial penalty.

Recent Activity. Mattson and Harris challenged the SEC alleging that the payment was not in contravention of the FCPA and claimed that the payment was due to extortion by a corrupt government official who threatened to peg the company with an excessive tax bill if not paid off. Relying on U.S. v. Kay (S.D. Tex. 2001) (see DOJ Digest Number 26), the court in this case ruled that because the payments to the Indonesian tax official did not help Baker Hughes “obtain or retain business,” the payments did not violate the FCPA. They claim that the payment was due to extortion by a corrupt government official. The SEC has appealed the District Court’s decision to the United States Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit. That appeal was stayed pending the decision by the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in the Kay case. Upon the issuance of the Kay decision reinstating the charges against that defendant, the Court of Appeals granted the SEC’s July 14, 2004 motion to dismiss its appeal.

SEC v. Joshua C. Cantor (S.D.N.Y. 2003)³⁶⁴

Nature of the Business. Origination, production, and marketing of mass-produced secure holograms by American Bank Note Holographics (“American Bank Note”), a Delaware corporation.

Business Location. Saudi Arabia.

Payment.

1. Amount of the value. $239,000.
2. Amount of business related to the payment. Approximately $597,500 (bribe was 40% of the contract’s value).
3. Intermediary. Foreign agent of American Bank Note.
4. The foreign official. Saudi Arabian government officials.

Influence to be Obtained. Awarding of contract to produce holograms for foreign government by depositing $239,000 into a Swiss bank account.

Enforcement. American Bank Note consented to a $75,000 civil penalty for violation of the anti-bribery provisions of the federal securities laws. American Bank Note consented to an order requiring it to cease-and-desist from committing or causing any violation, and any future violation, of the FCPA and other accounting controls in the SEC proceeding.

American Bank Note settled the SEC’s injunctive action consenting to the order permanently restraining it from violating the anti-fraud, periodic reporting, recordkeeping and internal controls provisions of the federal securities laws. Certain other officers of American Bank Note not directly involved in the FCPA violations settled SEC civil actions against them, consenting to permanent restraint orders prohibiting violations of anti-fraud, periodic reporting, recordkeeping, internal controls and lying to auditors provisions of the federal securities laws, and to injunctions suspending them from appearing or practicing before the Commission as accountants.

Two executive officers of an American Bank Note customer, Colorado Plasticard, consented to being permanently restrained and enjoined from violating and aiding and abetting violations of the anti-fraud, periodic reporting and lying to auditors provisions of the federal securities laws. The Colorado Plasticard officers each agreed to pay a $20,000 civil penalty.

Influence to be Obtained. Awarding of the systems integration contract to IBM Argentina.

Enforcement. The SEC alleged violation by IBM of the FCPA accounting provisions because IBM consolidated its subsidiaries' financial results in its SEC reports. The SEC did not allege IBM itself had inadequate accounting controls or that people at IBM knew of or authorized the payments or made false entries in IBM's books or records. Influence to be Obtained. To, among other things, (i) obtain a favorable decision from tax auditors reducing Triton Indonesia’s tax liability relating to technical service fees, (ii) obtain from auditors a favorable final report and cost certification for the 1988 and 1989 annual audits, (iii) obtain both a decision from the Indonesian government that Triton Indonesia was in a nontaxable position and a refund of a previously paid corporate tax, (iv) obtain a refund on previous value added tax payments, and (v) obtain a favorable decision to revise rates paid under a pipeline tariff and procure a refund of the purported overpayment.

Enforcement. The SEC filed a civil injunction action against Triton Energy Corp. and Philip Keever and Robert McAdoo, two former senior officers of Triton Indonesia. The SEC sought to enjoin Triton Energy Corp., Keever and McAdoo from future violations and to recover monetary penalties. Triton Energy Corp. consented to an injunction against future violations and to pay a $300,000 penalty. Keever consented to a similar injunction and to pay a $50,000 penalty. In addition, four other former Triton Energy Corp. executives consented to a cease-and-desist order enjoining them from causing any further violations.

On March 30, 2002, a settlement was entered into under which Montedison was ordered to pay a civil penalty of $3,000,000 for violating the anti-fraud, financial reporting and books and records provision of the federal securities law. Injunctive relief was not imposed.

E. Department of Justice FCPA Opinion Procedure Releases³⁷⁴

³⁷⁴ Although the SEC does not have an opinion procedure release process, it has declared its decision to follow the guidance announced through the DOJ's FCPA Opinion Release Procedure. SEC Release No. 34-17099 (Aug. 28, 1980) stated that, to encourage issuers to take advantage of the DOJ's FCPA Review Procedure that, as a matter of prosecutorial discretion, the SEC would "not commence an enforcement action alleging violations of Section 30A in any case in which a public company seeks clearance for a proposed transaction under the FCPA Review Procedure and receives a letter from the Department of Justice, prior to May 31, 1981, stating that the Department does not intend to take enforcement action based on the facts and circumstances presented." The release further noted that it would revisit this policy once the DOJ had evaluated the results of the FCPA Review Procedure after its first year of operation. A second SEC Release, No. 34-18255 (Nov. 12, 1981) held that the SEC would continue to adhere to the policy announced in Release No. 34-17099.

E. Department of Justice FCPA Opinion Procedure Releases

57. FCPA Review Opinion Procedure Release 13-01 (December 19, 2013)

Nature of the Business. Partner at unspecified U.S. law firm, which represents a foreign country in various international arbitrations.

Business Location. Unspecified.

Proposed Arrangement. The requestor proposes to pay for the medical treatment of the daughter of an official who works in a foreign country's Office of the Attorney General. The requestor will make all payments directly to the facility where the foreign official's daughter will receive treatment. The funds used to pay for the medical treatment will be the requestor's own personal funds, for which the requestor will not seek nor receive reimbursement from his law firm. The decision by the requestor to pay for or not to pay for this medical treatment will have no impact on any current or future decisions of the Office of the Attorney General in deciding on the hiring of international legal counsel. The Attorney General of the foreign country provided an opinion stating that the payment of medical expenses for the foreign official's daughter under these circumstances would not violate the laws of the foreign country. Further, the foreign official represented and warranted in writing that he has not had, does not have, and will not have any influence in the contracting of international lawyers to represent the foreign country; he will not attempt to assist the requestor or the requestor's law firm in the award of future work; and he will not become involved in any decision that the Office of the Attorney General might make in the future in this regard.

1. Amount of payment. Approximately between $13,500 and $20,500.
2. Intended recipients. A foreign official, via payment to the treatment facility for the official's daughter.

Reason for Payment. Humanitarian reasons.

Opinion. Department of Justice does not does not presently intend to make any enforcement action with respect to the proposed payment of approximately $13,500 to $20,500, based upon all the facts and circumstances as represented by the requestor, the foreign country's Attorney General, and the foreign official. The DOJ, however, did reiterate that "[a] person may violate the FCPA by making a payment or gift to a foreign official's family member as an indirect way of corruptly influencing that foreign official."

E. Department of Justice FCPA Opinion Procedure Releases

56. FCPA Review Opinion Procedure Release 12-02 (October 18, 2012)

Nature of the Business. Nineteen non-profit adoption agencies.

Business Location. United States.

Proposed Arrangement. The nineteen adoption agencies (“Requestors”) seek to host eighteen government officials from an unspecified Foreign Country during visits to the United States. The purpose of the officials’ trip is to learn more about the Requestors’ work, which includes processing adoptions in the Foreign Country. The trip will consist of approximately two days of meetings, not including travel. The officials will be selected by the Foreign Country, and the Requestors have no role in selecting them. The Requestors will pay for business class airfare on international portions of flights for high ranking officials, coach airfare for international portions of flights for other officials, coach airfare for all officials for domestic flights, two or three nights of hotel stay at a business-class hotel, meals during the officials’ stay, transportation between agencies, and local transportation. The Requestors will pay all expenses directly to the providers and will not give any money, including per diems, to the government officials.

1. Amount of payment. Unspecified, but the amount spent on hotels and meals will not exceed General Services Administration (“GSA”) rates.
2. Intended recipients. Eighteen government officials from an unspecified Foreign Country.

Reason for Payment. The visit is intended to educate the visiting officials about the operations and services of U.S. adoption providers.

Opinion. The Department of Justice does not presently intend to take any enforcement action with respect to the planned program and proposed payments. Because the Requestors are all classified as domestic concerns, since they are based in the United States, they are eligible to seek the FCPA’s affirmative defense covering “reasonable and bona fide expenditure[s].” Based upon all of the facts and circumstances, the expenses contemplated are reasonable under the circumstances and directly relate to “the promotion, demonstration, or explanation of [the Requestor’s] products or services.”

E. Department of Justice FCPA Opinion Procedure Releases

56. FCPA Opinion Procedure Release 12-01 (September 18, 2012)

Nature of the Business. An unspecified U.S. lobbying firm.

Business Location. Unspecified.

Proposed Arrangement. A U.S. lobbying firm (the “requestor”) represents a foreign country (the “foreign country”) that is interested in monitoring actions of the U.S. Congress and U.S. Administration. As part of this representation, the requestor has sought the services of a consulting company to address issues of cultural awareness, to serve as the requestor’s sponsor in the foreign country as required by its laws, and to introduce the requestor to the foreign country’s embassy. A partner of the consulting company is also a member of the foreign country’s royal family (the “royal family member”). Pursuant to the terms of the proposed retainer agreement, the foreign country would pay the requestor for services rendered and the requestor would in turn pay the consulting company in the same manner. The royal family member would receive a pro-rata share of the payment made to the consulting company.

1. Amount of payment. Approximately $2,000 a month for the life of the consultancy agreement.
2. Intended recipients. Member of the royal family of the foreign country.

Reason for Payment. The proposed transaction is part of a consulting agreement where the royal family member would receive payments for services rendered to the U.S. lobbying firm.

Opinion. The Department of Justice does not presently intend to take any enforcement action with respect to the consultancy arrangement and proposed payments. The DOJ reiterated that the question of whether a member of the royal family of a foreign country is a “foreign official” is a “fact-intensive, case-by-case determination” that will turn on a number of factors including: “(i) how much control or influence the individual has over the levers of governmental power, execution, administration, finances, and the like; (ii) whether a foreign government characterizes an individual or entity as having governmental power; and (iii) whether and under the circumstances an individual (or entity) may act on behalf of, or bind, a government.” In light of these factors the DOJ concluded that the royal family member is not a “foreign” official because he received no benefits or privileges within the foreign government on account of his royal family member status, was acting in on his personal account and not that of the royal family or foreign country, and was otherwise unconnected to the foreign country’s government. The DOJ also highlighted the extent to which the U.S. lobbying firm arranged the transaction to avoid any potential FCPA violations including contractual representations of FCPA compliance and a pro-rata fee arrangement based upon services rendered.

E. Department of Justice FCPA Opinion Procedure Releases

55. FCPA Review Opinion Procedure Release 11-01 (June 30, 2011)

Nature of the Business. An unspecified U.S. adoption service provider.

Business Location. Unspecified.

Proposed Arrangement. The requestor proposes to pay certain expenses for a trip to the United States by one official from each of two foreign government agencies to learn more about the services provided by the requestor. The two officials will be selected by their agencies, without the involvement of the requestor, and the requestor has no non-routine business pending before the foreign government agencies that employ these officials. The sponsored program will last for approximately two days (not including travel time). The requestor intends to pay for economy class air fare, domestic lodging, local transport, and meals. The requestor invited another adoption service provider to participate in the visit.

1. Amount of payment. Unspecified.
2. Intended recipients. Officials from two foreign governments.

Reason for Payment. The visit is intended to educate the visiting officials about the operations and services of U.S. adoption providers.

Opinion. The Department of Justice does not presently intend to take any enforcement action with respect to the planned program and proposed payments. Based upon all of the facts and circumstances, the expenses contemplated are reasonable under the circumstances and directly relate to “the promotion, demonstration, or explanation of [the Requestor’s] products or services.”

E. Department of Justice FCPA Opinion Procedure Releases

54. FCPA Review Opinion Procedure Release 10-02 (July 16, 2010)

Nature of the Business. An unspecified non-profit, U.S.-based microfinance institution (“MFI”) provides loans and other basic financial services to the world’s lowest-income entrepreneurs. It is in the process of converting all of its local operations to commercial entities that are licensed as financial institutions able to attract capital and expand their services.

Business Location. Unspecified Eurasian country.

Proposed Arrangement. One of the requestor’s subsidiaries, located in a Eurasian country, is seeking to acquire a banking license. Originally established with grant funding, the Eurasian subsidiary is now self-sustaining. A regulating agency, concerned that the transition of the subsidiary from an MFI to a banking entity will result in the original grant capital no longer serving humanitarian assistance goals, has pressed the subsidiary to “localize” its grant capital by giving 33% of the original grant capital to local MFIs in the Eurasian country. The regulating agency has provided a list of MFIs from which it is asking the subsidiary to select one or more MFI to receive the grant capital.

The subsidiary undertook a three stage due diligence process to vet potential recipients, including examination of each MFIs relationship with the government. The subsidiary settled on one MFI as the proposed grantee, although it found that one of the MFI’s board members is a sitting government official in the Eurasian country and other board members are former government officials.

1. Amount of payment. $1.42 million.
2. Intended recipients. A local microfinance institution in the Eurasian country.

Reason for Payment. The regulating agency is directing the Eurasian subsidiary to give 33% of its original grant capital to one or more local MFIs to ensure that the grant capital remains in the country and continues to serve the purpose of providing financial opportunities to low-income entrepreneurs in that country.

Opinion. The Department of Justice does not presently intend to take any enforcement action with respect to the proposed transaction, being satisfied that the due diligence that the Eurasian subsidiary undertook and the controls it has stated it will put in place make it unlikely that the MFI will transfer things of value to officials of the Eurasian country. Specifically, the subsidiary will ensure that the grant funds are made in staggered payments; carry out ongoing monitoring and auditing of the use of the grant by the MFI; earmark funds for capacity building; prohibit the compensation of board members with the funds; and require the institution of an anti-corruption compliance program.

E. Department of Justice FCPA Opinion Procedure Releases

53. FCPA Review Opinion Procedure Release 10-01 (April 19, 2010)

Nature of the Business. An unspecified U.S. company contracted with an unspecified agency of the U.S. government to design, develop, and construct a particular facility in a foreign country pursuant to a contract between the U.S. agency and the foreign country. Under the contractual terms, the company was required to hire an individual as facility director who was selected by the foreign government and who also serves as an official of the foreign country.

Business Location. Unspecified.

Proposed Arrangement. The company has hired an individual as facility director at the direction of the U.S. government agency. The foreign country is in the process of selecting other individuals to fill additional positions.

1. Amount of payment. $60,000 (employment salary of $5,000 per month for one year).
2. Intended recipients. Foreign government official.

Reason for Payment. In exchange for the salary of $5,000 per month for one year, the facility director will provide services as directed by the foreign country. The same individual also serves as a paid officer of an agency of the foreign country; however, that position does not relate to the facility and the services he will perform as facility director are apart from his government job. In neither position, will the individual have any decision making authority affecting the company requesting an opinion from the DOJ.

Opinion. The Department of Justice does not presently intend to take any enforcement action with respect to the proposed service contract for the facility director because the individual will not be in a position to influence any act or decision affecting the company, including procurement and contracting decisions.

E. Department of Justice FCPA Opinion Procedure Releases

52. FCPA Review Opinion Procedure Release 09-01 (August 3, 2009)

Nature of the Business. A U.S. Company (the “Company”), which is a global designer and manufacturer of a specific type of medical device, proposes to provide 100 units of its medical device to a foreign government agency.

Business Location. Unspecified.

Proposed Arrangement. The foreign government plans to provide a specific type of medical device, which the Company designs and manufactures, to patients in need around the country at a lower price by purchasing the device and subsidizing the cost of the device when it resells to patients. A senior official of the foreign government agency requested that the Company provide 100 sample units for an objective evaluation of the device. The government’s decision on whether to endorse the Company’s device will be based on that evaluation. The 100 sample units would be distributed equally among 10 different participating medical centers. The medical centers, in turn, will choose the recipients of the device from a list of candidates selected based on objective criteria, including their financial circumstances. The Company represents that it has no reason to believe that the senior officer who requested the samples would personally benefit from the provision of devices, and that no single brand will be promoted by the foreign government above any other qualified devices.

1. Amount of payment. 100 units of the medical device, accessories and services, valued at a total of $ 1.9 million.
2. Intended recipients. Medical centers participating in the foreign government’s program, who in turn will distribute to end-user patients.

Reason for Payment. To be evaluated and considered for government endorsement in tenders for government purchases of the medical device.

Opinion. The Department of Justice does not presently intend to take any enforcement action with respect to the provision of medical devices and related items and services. The donation falls outside of the scope of the FCPA because it is provided to the foreign government for ultimate use by patient recipients, and in accordance with specific guidelines as opposed to being provided to an individual government official.

E. Department of Justice FCPA Opinion Procedure Releases

51. FCPA Review Opinion Procedure Release 08-03 (July 11, 2008)

Nature of the Business. TRACE International, Inc., a domestic concern organized under the laws of the District of Columbia, proposes to pay certain expenses for employees of state-owned media outlets in China to attend a press conference it intends to hold in Shanghai, China.

Business Location. China.

Proposed Arrangement. TRACE proposes to pay stipends and lodging and travel expenses for 20 journalists, most of whom are employed by state-owned media outlets to attend a press conference that will promote TRACE's business. Out of town journalists who are traveling to Shanghai will receive a stipend of approximately $62, lodging costs not to exceed $229, and reimbursement of economy class travel with a receipt. Local journalists will receive a stipend of approximately $28. TRACE represents that it will make these payments irrespective of whether the journalist provides any coverage or the nature of the coverage. TRACE also represents that it has no business pending with any government entity in China, that it has obtained an opinion of local counsel that such payments would not violate Chinese law, and that it will accurately record these payments in its books and records.

1. Amount of payment. Travel and per diem expenses.
2. Intended recipients. Journalists employed by state-owned media outlets.

Reason for Payment. To provide stipends and lodging and travel expenses for journalists.

Opinion. The Department of Justice does not presently intend to take any enforcement action with respect to the payment of these expenses to journalists by TRACE. The payments fall within the FCPA's promotional expenses affirmative defense in that they are reasonable and directly relate to the promotion, demonstration, or explanation of TRACE's products or services.

E. Department of Justice FCPA Opinion Procedure Releases

50. FCPA Review Opinion Procedure Release 08-02 (June 13, 2008)

Nature of the Business. Halliburton Company and its subsidiaries (“Halliburton”), a U.S. issuer, proposes to acquire the entire share capital of a U.K.-based public company with overseas operations.

Business Location. United States, United Kingdom, and various other countries.

Proposed Arrangement. Halliburton intends to acquire a U.K.-based target company listed on the London Stock Exchange. Pursuant to U.K. law, Halliburton does not have adequate time or access to information to conduct pre-closing due diligence and might lose its bid to a competitor if it seeks due diligence as a condition for closing. Halliburton proposes a post-closing plan that includes post-closing due diligence and numerous remediation measures.

Halliburton proposes to (i) meet with government officials to discuss any FCPA issues discovered pre-closing; (ii) create a post-closing risk-based due diligence work plan; (iii) retain outside counsel and forensic accountants to conduct the review, including e-mail review and transaction testing; (iv) report to the government about the findings of the due diligence at 90, 120, and 180 days for high, medium, and low risk due diligence topics; (v) remediate any issues identified within a year of closing; (vi) execute new contracts with all agents and terminate some agents; (vii) train all target employees on the FCPA within 90 days; and (viii) maintain the target as a wholly-owned subsidiary until the government ceases any investigations of the target.

1. Amount of payment. Unspecified.
2. Intended recipients. Unspecified.

Reason for Payment. To acquire the entire share capital of a U.K.-based public target company.

Opinion. The Department of Justice does not presently intend to take any enforcement action with respect to the acquisition itself, nor will it undertake an enforcement action with respect to any pre-closing acts of the target for any post-closing acts of the target disclosed by Halliburton within 180 days of closing that did not then continue. Although the Department disapproved of a confidentiality clause that restricted pre-acquisition disclosure of relevant facts to the authorities, it agreed to take no enforcement action with respect to pre-acquisition conduct or, with some caveats, post-acquisition conduct provided Halliburton proceeded in accordance with its post-closing plan, in light of the fact that U.K. law and the circumstances of the transaction had prevented Halliburton from conducting meaningful pre-acquisition due diligence.

N.B. In the end, Halliburton did not acquire the target.

E. Department of Justice FCPA Opinion Procedure Releases

49. FCPA Review Opinion Procedure Release 08-01 (January 15, 2008)

Nature of the Business. U.S. Fortune 500 issuer with operations in 35 countries proposes to make a majority investment in a foreign target, currently majority-owned by a foreign government.

Business Location. Unspecified.

Proposed Arrangement. The foreign government decided to privatize the foreign target by selling its 56% share. The Requestor agreed with the 44% minority private owner of the foreign target that the private owner would purchase the government's 56% share and form a new company and then sell a 56% majority share of that new company to Requestor.

Requestor considered the minority private owner a public official under the FCPA as a result of its status as General Manager of the foreign target. Requestor undertook due diligence to gain comfort that any payments to the private owner to purchase shares of the new company would not be in violation of the FCPA and that the new company would not acquire its shares from the foreign target improperly under foreign law. Various disclosures were also made to the foreign government regarding the proposed business arrangement and the premium Requestor would pay to the private owner.

1. Amount of payment. Unspecified.
2. Intended recipients. Foreign company with a minority stake in a majority government-owned company.

Reason for Payment. To purchase a majority stake in the government-owned company from the foreign company, once it has been privatized.

Opinion. Department of Justice does not presently intend to take any enforcement action with respect to this proposal. The opinion was based on several factors: (i) the due diligence conducted by Requestor and the maintenance of such files in the U.S.; (ii) the multiple disclosures made by Requestor to the foreign government regarding the premium it would provide to the private owner; (iii) the various representations and warranties Requestor will secure from private owner regarding corruption compliance; and (iv) Requestor having rights of termination in the event of a breach of the agreement with private owner, including the violation of anti-corruption laws.

E. Department of Justice FCPA Opinion Procedure Releases

48. FCPA Review Opinion Procedure Release 07-03 (December 21, 2007)

Nature of the Business. Unspecified U.S. lawful permanent resident proposes to make a payment required by a family court judge to cover certain litigation-related costs.

Business Location. Unspecified Asian country.

Proposed Arrangement. The person is a party to disputed judicial proceedings in the Asian country relating to the disposition of an estate. The person submitted an application for the court to appoint an estate administrator and the court requested an advance payment to cover the administrator's expenses. The person withdrew the application pending review of the opinion request.

The person represented that the requested payment was not sought for purposes of influencing the court, the judge, or the administrator and that the payment will be made to the court clerk's office and a receipt will be requested. The person obtained written assurance from an experienced lawyer in the Asian country that the proposed payment is lawful under the written law of the foreign country.

1. Amount of payment. Approximately $9,000.

47. FCPA Review Opinion Procedure Release 07-02 (September 11, 2007)

Nature of the Business. Unspecified U.S. insurance company proposes to cover the domestic expenses for a six-day trip within the United States by approximately six junior to mid-level foreign governmental officials for an educational program at the U.S. company's headquarters.

Business Location. Unspecified.

Proposed Arrangement. The company intends to pay for domestic economy class airfare, lodging, transportation, meals, and a fixed amount of incidental expenses of the foreign governmental delegation during their visit to the company's headquarters. The company also intends to provide the officials a modest four-hour sightseeing tour of the city. The officials, who were selected by their government without the influence of the company, are scheduled to participate in a six-week internship program for foreign insurance regulators sponsored by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners ("NAIC"). The company seeks to dovetail its own educational program with this NAIC program, bringing the foreign officials to its headquarters after the conclusion of the NAIC program.

The company represented that it has no non-routine business pending before the foreign agency of which these officials are part and that it conducts no business with other agencies of the foreign government except for collaboration on insurance-related research, studies, and training. It further represented that it will not pay for the officials' international airfare or participation in the NAIC program, will not host family members, spouses, or guests of the officials and will pay all costs directly to the service provider (except for the modest per diem allowance, which will be paid only upon presentation of a receipt).

1. Amount of payment. Unspecified, but including domestic economy class airfare, lodging, transportation, meals, and a fixed per diem amount for incidental expenses.
2. Intended recipients. Foreign government officials.

Reason for Payment. To familiarize the officials with the operations of a U.S. insurance company.

Opinion. Department of Justice does not presently intend to take any enforcement action with respect to this proposal.

46. FCPA Review Opinion Procedure Release 07-01 (July 24, 2007)

Nature of the Business. Unspecified U.S. company proposes to cover the domestic expenses for a four-day trip to the United States by a six-person delegation of an Asian government for an educational and promotional tour of one of the U.S. company's sites of operation.

Business Location. Unspecified.

Proposed Arrangement. The company intends to pay for domestic economy class airfare, lodging, transportation, and meal expenses of the foreign governmental delegation during their visit to a single site of operations. The foreign government will pay its officials' international airfare. The company obtained a written assurance from an established law firm with offices both in the U.S. and the foreign country that this proposal does not violate the applicable law of the foreign country. The company represented that it did not select the government delegates for the visit and that the delegates have no direct authority over decisions regarding government contracts or requisite licenses in the foreign country. The company further represented that it will only host the officials themselves and one private government consultant (i.e., no other private parties or guests, including spouses and children), will pay expenses directly to the providers, with no cash passing through the delegates, and will record such payments appropriately.

1. Amount of payment. Unspecified, but including domestic economy class airfare, lodging, transportation, and meals.
2. Intended recipients. Foreign government officials.

Reason for Payment. To familiarize the delegates with the nature and extent of the company's operations and capabilities and to help establish the company's business credibility. Although the company does not currently do business in the Asian country in question, it is interested in doing business there in the future.

Opinion. Department of Justice does not presently intend to take any enforcement action with respect to this proposal.

45. FCPA Review Opinion Procedure Release 06-02 (December 31, 2006)

Nature of the Business. Unspecified wholly-owned subsidiary of a U.S. issuer proposes that one of its foreign subsidiaries retain a law firm in that country to prepare applications for foreign exchange with a government agency.

Business Location. Unspecified.

Proposed Arrangement. Law firm will prepare foreign exchange applications on behalf of the foreign subsidiary for substantial remuneration. The foreign subsidiary has worked with the principal attorney at the law firm in the past, who comes highly recommended and who has been interviewed by the general counsel of the foreign subsidiary's immediate parent company and outside U.S. counsel.

All employees of the law firm and any third parties retained on the matter will be required to sign forms confirming FCPA compliance and that they have not been, and are not related to anyone who has been, a governmental official in the last three years. The agreement between the law firm and the foreign subsidiary would also contain extensive compliance provisions relating to, inter alia, the FCPA and the U.S. issuer parent's Government Relations Policy, require at least weekly progress reports, and give the foreign subsidiary audit access to relevant records of the law firm.

1. Amount of payment. Unspecified, but approximately 0.6% of the total value of the foreign exchange sought each month.
2. Intended recipients. Local law firm.

Reason for Payment. To ensure the elimination of any technical errors in the foreign exchange applications that may lead to their rejection by the government agency, which has become increasingly frequent in recent months.

Opinion. Department of Justice does not presently intend to take any enforcement action with respect to the proposed retention of the law firm.

44. FCPA Opinion Procedure Release 06-01 (October 16, 2006)

Nature of the Business. Unspecified U.S. company with headquarters in Switzerland proposes to contribute money to a regional Customs department or Ministry of Finance in an African country to fund a pilot program to provide local customs officials with financial awards to help improve local enforcement of anti-counterfeiting laws. The unspecified country is described as a major transit point for trade in counterfeit goods including counterfeit goods bearing the trademark of the U.S. company.

Business Location. Unspecified.

Proposed Arrangement. U.S. company will execute a formal memorandum of understanding with the foreign government agency to establish procedures for the selection of award recipients and payment of awards to local customs officials. Contributions by the U.S. company will be made directly to an official government bank account, subject to periodic internal audit by the government authorities. The U.S. company will be notified of any seizure of counterfeit goods and will examine such goods and receive written confirmation of the destruction of the goods. The U.S. company will play no role in selecting award recipients or disbursing awards, but will monitor the program through periodic reviews. The foreign government will be required to maintain records for the program for five years and shall permit inspection of such records.

1. Amount of payment. $25,000.
2. Intended recipients. Foreign Customs department or Ministry of Finance.

Reason for Payment. To assist foreign officials in funding incentive awards for customs officials to promote seizure of counterfeit products bearing the trademark of the requesting U.S. company.

Opinion. Department of Justice does not presently intend to take any enforcement action with respect to the proposed $25,000 payment described.

43. FCPA Review Opinion Procedure Release 04-04 (September 3, 2004)

Nature of the Business. Unspecified U.S. company proposes to fund a “Study Tour” of five foreign officials who are members of a committee drafting a new law on mutual insurance, an industry in which the U.S. company conducts business. The U.S. company represents that it does not have, nor does it plan to organize, a mutual insurance company in the foreign country.

Business Location. Unspecified.

Proposed Arrangement. All committee members chosen to participate will be selected by the foreign government and none will have any direct decision-making power over the licensing process. “Study Tour” would include visits to U.S. company’s offices, as well as meetings with state insurance regulators, insurance industry groups, and other insurance companies. U.S. company will pay all costs associated with “Study Tour,” but all payments will be made directly to providers of services, not to foreign officials. U.S. company acknowledges that it does intend, at some point, to apply for a non-life insurance license and that, under current practice, an applicant for such a license must demonstrate that it has been “supportive of the country’s socio-economic needs, proactive in the development of the insurance industry, and active in promoting foreign investment.” Sponsorship of the “Study Tour” is intended, at least in part, to satisfy this criteria.

1. Amount of payment. Approximately $16,875.
2. Intended recipients. Foreign officials responsible for lawmaking.

Reason for Payment. To assist foreign officials in developing a practical understanding of how mutual insurance companies are managed and regulated.

Opinion. Department of Justice does not presently intend to take any enforcement action with respect to the proposed “Study Tour.”

42. FCPA Review Opinion Procedure Release 04-03 (June 14, 2004)

Nature of the Business. Unspecified American law firm proposes to sponsor a 10-day trip to the United States by 12 officials of a ministry of the People's Republic of China for the purpose of permitting the ministry officials the opportunity to meet with U.S. public-sector officials to discuss: 1) U.S. regulation of employment issues, labor unions, and workforce safety; and 2) the institutions and procedures through which legal conflicts in the workplace are resolved.

Business Location. Beijing, China.

Proposed Arrangement. The law firm would pay for various costs associated with the travel, lodging, meals, and insurance for the officials and one translator. Among other things, the law firm represented that it has no current or anticipated business with the ministry officials, that the visit does not violate Chinese law, that it would have no hand in determining which officials would participate in the visit, that all costs will be paid directly to the providers, and that the participants will not receive any gifts, stipends or other payments.

1. Amount of payment. Unspecified.
2. Intended recipients. Ministry officials.

Reason for Payment. To educate legal and human resource professionals from both China and America about labor and employment laws.

Opinion. Department of Justice does not presently intend to take any enforcement action with respect to the proposed seminar.

E. Department of Justice FCPA Opinion Procedure Releases

41. FCPA Review Opinion Procedure Release 04-02 (July 12, 2004)

Nature of the Business. JPMorgan Partners Global Fund, Candover 2001 Fund, and 3i Investments plc (“Purchasers”) sought to acquire certain companies and assets from ABB Ltd. (“ABB”), relating to ABB’s upstream oil, gas, and petrochemical businesses.

Business Location. Nigeria, Angola, and Kazakhstan.

Proposed Arrangement. Purchasers sought to acquire several subsidiaries of ABB. Upon conducting an FCPA compliance review in advance of the sale, violations of the FCPA by two of the subsidiaries were identified. Both Purchasers and ABB hired outside counsel and conducted a comprehensive internal review consisting of, among other things, the manual review of over 1,600 boxes of documents, and in excess of 165 interviews of current and former employees. In addition, forensic accountants were employed and visited 21 countries to review and analyze hundreds of thousands of transactions with a staff of over 100 assistants. All told, over 115 lawyers worked over 44,700 man-hours to conduct this review. At all times, both the SEC and DOJ were apprised of the status of the investigation and were given 22 analytical reports of the subsidiaries with supporting evidence. On July 6, 2004, the subsidiaries plead guilty to violations of the FCPA. ABB also settled a parallel civil matter with the SEC.

In addition to the comprehensive investigation, the Purchasers represented to DOJ that they have taken, and will continue to undertake, a number of precautions to avoid future violations of the FCPA. Among the precautions the Purchasers agreed to take were: (1) continuing to cooperate with the government with respect to the investigations of past conduct; (2) ensuring that any employee found to have engaged in unlawful or questionable conduct in the past will be disciplined; (3) ensuring that the newly acquired entities will have in place a system of internal accounting controls designed to ensure the making and keeping of accurate books and records as well as adopting a rigorous anti-corruption compliance code to detect and deter future violations of the FCPA.

1. Amount of payment. Unspecified.
2. Intended recipients. Purchasers of subsidiaries convicted of FCPA violations.

Reason for Payment. N/A.

Opinion. Department of Justice does not presently intend to take any enforcement action against the Purchasers or their recently acquired entities for violations of the FCPA committed prior to their acquisition from ABB. However, DOJ specifically noted that while they view the Purchasers’ representations to be a significant precaution against future violations, this opinion release “should not be deemed to endorse any specific aspect of the [purchasers’] program.” In addition, the opinion does not speak to any conduct either by the Purchasers or the recently acquired entities which occurs post-acquisition.

39. FCPA Opinion Procedure Release 03-01 (January 15, 2003)

Nature of the Business. Unspecified American company (“U.S. Co.”) intends to purchase the stock of another unspecified American company (“Target Co.”) and thereafter operate it as a subsidiary (the “Proposed Transaction”). Target Co. has both U.S. and foreign subsidiaries.

Business Location. Unspecified.

Proposed Arrangement. Upon conducting due diligence in advance of acquisition of Target Co.’s shares, U.S. Co. discovered payments to foreign officials. U.S. Co. informed Target Co. and both companies conducted extensive investigations. The results of these investigations were turned over to the Department of Justice and the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. Target Co. undertook certain remedial actions, including informing the investing public, issuing instructions to each of its foreign subsidiaries to cease all payments to foreign officials, and suspending the most senior officers and employees implicated in the payments pending the conclusion of its investigation. Both U.S. Co. and Target Co. wished to proceed with the acquisition. U.S. Co. was concerned that the acquisition of Target Co.’s shares would confer criminal and civil liability under the FCPA for Target Co.’s prior acts. Upon closing of the transaction, U.S. Co. proposed to: (1) continue to cooperate with DOJ and the SEC in their respective investigations of the past payments and will similarly cooperate with foreign law enforcement officials; (2) ensure that any employees or officers of Target Co. found to have made or authorized unlawful payments to foreign officials are appropriately disciplined; (3) disclose to DOJ any additional pre-acquisition payments to foreign officials made by Target Co. or its subsidiaries that it discovers after the acquisition; (4) extend to Target Co. its existing compliance program and that such compliance program will, if necessary, be modified to insure that it is reasonably designed to detect and deter, through training and reporting, violations of the FCPA and foreign bribery laws; and (5) ensure that Target Co. implements a system of internal controls and makes and keeps accurate books and records.

1. Amount of payment. Unspecified.
2. Intended recipients. Foreign individuals employed by state-owned entities.

Reason for Payment. See above.

Opinion. Department of Justice does not presently intend to take any enforcement action with respect to the pre-acquisition conduct of Target Co. based on all the facts and circumstances as represented by the U.S. Co.

Proposed Arrangement. U.S. Co. will review its agreement with Dealer following remarks to U.S. Co. employee (“Employee”) by Dealer’s president and principal owner that Employee understood to mean that Dealer would make or had made payments to government officials so that the bid would be accepted (“Payments”). 1. Amount of payment. Unspecified.
2. Intended recipients. Officials of foreign government.

37. FCPA Opinion Procedure Release 01-02 (July 18, 2001)

Nature of the Business. American company (“U.S. Co.”) and foreign company (“Foreign Co.”) seek to enter into a consortium to bid on and engage in a business relationship with the government of Foreign Co.’s home country.

Business Location. Unspecified foreign country.

Proposed Arrangement.

1. Amount of the value. Unspecified.
2. Intended recipients. Foreign Co.’s chairman and shareholder (“Foreign Official”) acts as an advisor to one of his country’s senior government officials and is a senior official in public education in that country.

Reason for Payment. See above.

Opinion. 36. FCPA Opinion Procedure Release 01-01 (May 24, 2001)

Nature of the Business. Unspecified American company (“U.S. Co.”) to enter into 50/50 joint venture with a French company (“French Co.”).

Business Location. Unspecified foreign country.

Proposed Arrangement. U.S. Co. and French Co. will each contribute pre-existing contracts and transactions to the joint venture, including contracts contributed by French Co. that were obtained prior to the French Law Against Corrupt Practices. U.S. Co. represented the following: (i) French Co. represented that none of its contributed contracts or transactions violated any applicable anti-bribery law; (ii) U.S. Co. may terminate the joint venture agreement or refuse to undertake its obligations if French Co. has breached its representations or violated any anti-bribery law; (iii) no funds contributed by U.S. Co. nor funds of the joint venture will be used to pay any compensation to any agent of French Co. in connection with contracts contributed to the joint venture; and (iv) the joint venture will enter into a new agent agreement in accordance with rigorous compliance program.

1. Amount of payment. Unspecified.
2. Intended recipients. Unspecified.

Reason for Payment. See above.

Opinion. Joint venture does not implicate FCPA based on the representations by U.S. Co. and the covenants not to undertake any knowing act in the future in furtherance of a prior act of bribery concerning contracts contributed by French Co. to joint venture. The Department of Justice made the following clarifications: (i) it interpreted French Co.’s no-violation representation to include the laws of the jurisdictions of the government officials with the ability to have influenced the decisions of their governments to enter into the contracts contributed by French Co. to the joint venture; thus, U.S. Co. may face FCPA liability if the joint venture takes any action in furtherance of a payment to a foreign official with respect to a previously existing contract, irrespective of whether the agreement to make such payments was lawful under French law at the time the contract was entered into; and (ii) it declined to endorse the “materially adverse effect” standard for U.S. Co.’s ability to terminate the joint venture agreement in the event of a previous act of bribery.

35. FCPA Opinion Procedure Release 00-01 (March 29, 2000)

Nature of the Business. American law firm (the “Law Firm”) and a foreign partner of the Requestor (“Foreign Government Official”). Note that ordinarily, foreign officials are not covered by the FCPA, see United States v. Castle, 925 F.2d 831 (5th Cir. 1991), and cannot be the recipient of an FCPA opinion. In this matter, however, the foreign official in question is also a director of an American law firm and is therefore a domestic concern in his own right. See 15 U.S.C. § 78dd-2(h)(1).

Business Location. Unspecified foreign country (“Country X”).

Proposed Arrangement. Law Firm seeks to maintain insurance benefits for Foreign Government Official and his family while he is in office and on leave from the Law Firm. In addition, Law Firm proposes to pay Foreign Government Official the interest due on his partnership contribution as well as an estimated lump sum “client credit”, discounted to present value, that would be due to Foreign Government Official under the Law Firm’s standard leave policy. Finally, Law Firm is guaranteeing Foreign Government Official a return to full partnership and its attendant privileges and profits when he leaves public office.

1. Amount of the value. The insurance benefits will be paid by Foreign Government Official at the discounted rate available to all of Law Firm’s partners currently on leave. Interest on partnership contribution will be paid at a widely available bank rate and identical to rate paid to all Law Firm’s partners. The amount of the other value is not specified.
2. Intended recipient. Foreign Government Official.

Reason for Payment. See above.

Opinion. No enforcement action under the FCPA will be taken against the Law Firm or Foreign Government Official where: (i) the proposed arrangement does not violate local law; (ii) the Law Firm undertakes to (1) not represent clients before the Foreign Government Official’s ministry; (2) maintain a list of all clients previously represented by the Foreign Government Official or for which the Foreign Government Official is entitled to client credit; (3) not advise or represent such clients in any matter involving doing business with, including lobbying, the government of Country X, its ministries, agencies and legislative bodies; and (4) inform the Foreign Government Official whenever he should recuse himself in a matter involving the Law Firm or a client of the Law Firm; and (iii) Foreign Government Official undertakes to recuse himself and refrain from directly or indirectly participating or taking any action to affect decisions by the government of Country X relating to (1) the retention of the Law Firm; (2) any government business with any current or former client of the Law Firm or of the Foreign Government Official while a partner of the Law Firm or for which he is entitled a client credit; or (3) any matter in which the Law Firm or a client of the firm has lobbied the government.

33. FCPA Review Opinion Procedure Release 98-01 (February 23, 1998)

Nature of the Business. U.S.-based industrial and service company.

Business Location. Nigeria.

Proposed Arrangement. A Nigerian government agency levied a $50,000 fine on the company for the contamination cleanup of a site formerly leased by the company's subsidiary. To clean up the environmental contamination, the company retained a Nigerian contractor experienced in removing environmental contaminants and recommended by Nigerian Federal Environmental Protection Agency ("FEPA") officials. Upon drafting a proposal for the contaminant's removal, the contractor advised the company to take the following actions to ensure Nigerian government approval of the cleanup: (i) pay the $50,000 fine to the Nigerian government through the contractor, and (ii) pay $30,000 in "community compensation and modalities" to Nigerian FEPA and Ports Authority officials through the contractor.

1. Amount of the value. $30,000.
2. Intended recipients. Nigerian FEPA and Ports Authority officials.

Reason for Payment. See above.

Opinion. If the company pays the requested fine and community compensation and modalities to the contractor for the benefit of the Nigerian government agencies, the Department of Justice will further investigate whether criminal prosecution is merited. Conversely, the Department of Justice will reconsider taking enforcement action if the company pays the fine and contractor's fee directly to an appropriate Nigerian government agency, provided that when the environmental cleanup is completed to the satisfaction of the Nigerian government, the government will pay the contractor its fee.

Arrangement is permissible where joint venture partner agrees to a series of detailed restrictions designed to prevent any FCPA violations, including, for example; (i) no payments from the American company may be used for any purpose that would constitute a violation of the laws of the foreign country or of the FCPA; (ii) if the joint venture partner’s official duties change so that he makes decisions affecting the joint venture, he will notify the other partners so that appropriate actions may be taken; (iii) the joint venture partner will initiate no meetings with government officials; and (iv) in connection with any meeting with government officials, the joint venture partner will provide a letter to the most senior relevant official stating that the joint venture partner is acting solely in a private capacity.

Nature of the Business. Castle & Cooke, Inc. (“Castle & Cooke”) and two subsidiaries.

14. BearingPoint Inc.

Background. BearingPoint Inc., a U.S. corporation, provides strategic consulting application services, technology solutions, and managed services to global companies and government organizations.

The Investigation. BearingPoint revealed in documents filed with the SEC in January 2006 that it faces potential exposure to liability under the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act because of internal control issues related to the Company's China operations.

In the filing, BearingPoint states that BearingPoint China formerly maintained a subcontractor relationship with an entity that may have made inappropriate payments to current and former employees of state-owned enterprises in China. According to their statement, the relationship was terminated in October 2005, and the details of the relationship have been communicated to government authorities. The investigation also revealed other potential FCPA issues stemming from expenditures approved by senior employees of BearingPoint China for gifts, entertainment, and international travel provided to employees of state-owned entities. The Company disclosed that an internal investigation conducted by its Audit Committee did not conclude that the Company had engaged in any violations of the FCPA's anti-bribery provisions. However, the Company disclosed that its internal controls presented an unacceptable risk of exposure to FCPA violations. On March 27, 2006, the Company received a subpoena from the SEC regarding these matters. According to a June 2009 SEC filing, although BearingPoint has not received any additional requests for documents, the SEC investigation is ongoing.

13. Avery Dennison Corp.

Background. Avery Dennison Corporation, a U.S. corporation, is a global leader in pressure-sensitive technology, self-adhesive base materials and self-adhesive consumer and office products.

The Investigation. According to a Company filing dated November 2005, the Company contacted U.S. authorities with respect to preliminary results of an internal investigation of potential violations of the FCPA. The transactions at issue occurred with regard to business in the People's Republic of China and involved, among other things, impermissible payments or attempted impermissible payments. The Company has voluntarily disclosed these matters to authorities. According to a 2008 10-Q, the Company reported that the payments in question appeared to be relatively minor in amount and of limited duration and that it has taken corrective and disciplinary actions.

Furthermore, in a 2009 10-K filing, Avery Dennison disclosed that, on or about October 10, 2008, the Company notified relevant authorities that it had discovered additional questionable payments to certain foreign customs and other regulatory officials by some employees of its recently acquired companies. While the Company does not believe that these payments were made for the purpose of obtaining business from a governmental entity, the Company is currently conducting an internal review and taking remedial measures to comply with the FCPA. Avery Dennison settled a civil enforcement action with the SEC in July 2009.

According to a 10-Q filed on May 10, 2011, Avery Dennison is also investigating payments made to customs officials in Indonesia by personnel employed by Paxel, a company which was acquired by Avery Dennison. This investigation is ongoing.

12. Bristol Myers Squibb Co.

Background. Bristol Myers Squibb Company, a U.S. corporation, is a manufacturer of pharmaceuticals and healthcare products.

The Investigation. On October 25, 2004, the SEC notified Bristol Myers that it was conducting an informal inquiry into the activities of certain of the Company's German pharmaceutical subsidiaries and its employees and agents. 11. Alltel Corp. Fidelity National Financial, Inc.

Background. Alltel Corporation is a U.S.-based communications company. Alltel Information Services (“Alltel Information”) was Alltel’s international services subsidiary, which in 2003 was sold to Fidelity National Financial, Inc., a U.S.-based provider of products, services, and solutions in the real estate and financial services industry. Grace & Digital Information Technology Co. Ltd. is a Chinese consulting firm.

The Investigation. In May 2005, Alltel informed the SEC and DOJ that it had launched an internal investigation into possible violations of the FCPA by Alltel Information. Alltel became aware of these possible violations as a result of a lawsuit filed in California in December 2004 by Grace & Digital Information, a Chinese consulting firm, against Fidelity. The lawsuit alleged that, prior to its sale to Fidelity, Alltel Information had failed to pay Grace its share of two contracts awarded to Alltel Information for services rendered in the marketing of software products to the China Construction Bank in 2000 and 2001. The lawsuit included allegations of improper business conduct by Alltel and China Construction Bank executives who allegedly engaged in unlawful bribes and payouts. In the course of business, it is alleged that Alltel Information executives made inappropriate payments in the form of travel expenses, lump sums disguised as consulting fees, and other miscellaneous expenses to Zhang Enzhao and others. At the time, Zhang was the chairman of the China Construction Bank, though he has subsequently resigned in connection with these allegations. Alltel is not a party to the lawsuit.

As a result of the disclosure by Alltel, the SEC and DOJ began investigations with which Alltel is cooperating. In a 10-Q filing dated November 2005, Alltel reported that it had retained independent legal counsel to conduct an internal investigation and to facilitate cooperation with government inquiries. The SEC staff informed the counsel that it had opened an informal inquiry relating to the alleged improper payments. The DOJ also conducted an interview with a former employee in connection with this matter. Alltel’s internal investigation was reported as being complete, the findings of which were reported to the SEC and DOJ. According to a May 2008 SEC filing, the DOJ closed its investigation with no action being taken against the company. The company is awaiting final determination by the SEC.

In documents filed with the SEC in May 2006, Fidelity disclosed that the California lawsuit brought by Grace was dismissed on forum non conveniens grounds in December 2005. Grace filed a new lawsuit in the Middle District of Florida on March 6, 2006, adding a RICO claim to the FCPA and other claims of the original lawsuit. The company has reported that the court dismissed the RICO claims with prejudice and struck the FCPA allegations in March 2007, and the parties settled the remaining breach of contract claim in mediation in April 2007.

10. Total, S.A. Norsk Hydro ASA

Background. Total, S.A., a French company and U.S. issuer, explores for, develops, and produces crude oil and natural gas. Total also refines and markets oil and trades and transports both crude oil and finished products. Norsk Hydro ASA, a Norwegian company, is a producer of oil and gas and is the third largest supplier of aluminum in the world.

The Investigation. According to press reports, the SEC has asked Total SA and Norsk Hydro ASA to disclose any commissions that may have been paid to government officials during the course of business in Iran. These inquiries are part of a general inquiry by the SEC into activities of oil companies in Iran between December 2004 and February 2005. Under the Iran and Libya Sanctions Act of 1996, the SEC monitors activities of companies engaged in business in Iran to ensure that anti-corruption regulations have not been violated. As of an SEC filing dated April 2006, Total SA disclosed that the SEC has issued a non-public formal order directing a private investigation into certain oil companies (including, among others, Total SA) in connection with their pursuit of business in Iran. Press reports in April 2007 stated that the U.S. investigation into Total also extended into its operations in Iraq under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program and that the authorities intended to interview the chief executive of Total.

In May 2013, Total settled the allegations by entering into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ and receiving a cease-and-desist order from the SEC.

The Investigation. In late 2004, Wyeth, Tyco, Valero and El Paso all received subpoenas from the SEC seeking documents relating to the United Nations' now-defunct Oil-for-Food Program in Iraq. The SEC's inquiry is parallel to, but independent of, other investigations being conducted by, among others, the U.N., a federal grand jury in Manhattan, several Congressional committees, a government inquiry in Australia into the Australian Wheat Board, and other reported investigations in India and South Africa. It is believed that the SEC is investigating whether companies paid illegal kickbacks or bribes to politicians or businessmen to get Iraqi business or dealt with companies that may have committed such violations.

According to a 10-Q filed November 10, 2011, Wyeth disclosed that they have voluntarily provided information regarding improper payments to the SEC and DOJ between subsidiaries. In August 2012,

F. Ongoing Investigations under the FCPA

Wyeth entered into a settlement agreement with the SEC regarding improper payment allegedly made in China, Indonesia, Pakistan, and Saudi Arabia.

After the production of responsive documents to the SEC on January 10, 2005, November 8, 2005, and again on January 31, 2005, the SEC notified Tyco that, as of June 7, 2006, it was dismissing Tyco from the SEC's investigation of the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program. According to a 10-Q filing dated February 5, 2008, however, Tyco has recently discovered additional product sales that may be responsive to the SEC's order and have notified the SEC staff that the company intends to investigate the transactions. According to a 10-Q filed July 28, 2011, the Company began mediation discussions with the SEC and DOJ following the conclusion of a baseline review revealing certain violations of the FCPA. In September 2012, Tyco and its subsidiaries settled allegations regarding improper payments in several countries. Tyco International entered into a deferred prosecution agreement and a settlement agreement with the SEC, and one of Tyco's subsidiaries, Tyco Valves and Controls Middle East, Inc. pleaded guilty.

In July 2005, the SEC supplemented the formal order of investigation to add DaimlerChrysler to the list of named companies. DaimlerChrysler also reports to have received an order from the SEC to provide a written statement and to produce certain documents regarding transactions with the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program and that it is cooperating with this request. The company also reports that the DOJ has requested information in this regard. According to a February 2008 SEC filing, a German prosecutor also commenced an investigation into Daimler's involvement in the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program. In March 2010, Daimler and its Chinese subsidiary entered into a deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ, and Daimler's Russian subsidiary and finance subsidiary each entered a guilty plea. In April 2010, Daimler also settled a related action with the SEC.

In February 2006, AGCO received a subpoena from the SEC in connection with its investigation of the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program and was contacted by the DOJ in connection with the same matter thereafter, although no subpoena or other formal process has since been initiated by the DOJ. Similar inquiries have been initiated by the Danish and French governments regarding two of AGCO's subsidiaries. The inquiries arose from sales of approximately $58 million in farm equipment to the Iraq ministry of agriculture between 2000 and 2002. In September 2009, AGCO entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ. AGCO also settled related civil charges with the SEC and other OFF-related charges brought by the Danish State Prosecutor for Serious Economic Crimes related to contracts executed by AGCO's Danish subsidiary.

On February 7, 2006, Innospec disclosed in an 8-K that the SEC informed the company that it had commenced an investigation regarding the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program activities of the company and its Swiss indirect subsidiary, Alcor Chemie Vertriebs GmbH. A former agent of Innospec, Ousama M. Naaman, was indicted in August 2008 for FCPA violations. In a 10-Q filing dated August 5, 2009, the company, as well as its officers and directors, reasserted its commitment to cooperating with all authorities. According to a 10-Q dated November 1, 2012, Innospec noted that it had settled matters relating to investigations by U.S. and U.K. regulatory agencies under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program, the FCPA, the U.S. Cuban Assets Control Regulations and United Kingdom anti-bribery laws.

F. Ongoing Investigations under the FCPA

In a 6-F filing dated February 21, 2006, Novo Nordisk disclosed that it had also received a subpoena from the SEC to produce documents related to the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program and that it intended to fully cooperate with the investigation. Novo Nordisk consented to entry of judgment against it in May 2009. In April 2006, Novo Nordisk disclosed that the Danish Public Prosecutor had instituted proceedings against the company in this connection. In May 2009, Novo Nordisk entered into a deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ for certain actions by the company in the Iraq Oil-for-Food Program.

GlaxoSmithKline, Johnson & Johnson, St. Jude Medical, and Weatherford also received subpoenas from the SEC in February 2006 requiring the production of certain documents relating to the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program. GlaxoSmithKline is also under investigation by the U.K. Serious Fraud Office for the same allegations. All of the companies have stated that they are cooperating with the various investigations. GlaxoSmithKline's Annual Report filed March 4, 2011 states that the investigation is ongoing. In January 2011, Johnson & Johnson and its subsidiaries settled the allegations by entering into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ and a settlement agreement with the SEC. In November 2013, Weatherford entered into a three-year deferred prosecution with the DOJ and a settlement agreement with the SEC. In a related settlement, Weatherfield subsidiary Weatherfield Services, Ltd. pleaded guilty to one count of violating the FCPA.

In addition, ABB also stated in its January 2006 filing that, as part of the United Nations Independent Inquiry Committee investigation of the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program, certain ABB subsidiaries are alleged to have made illicit payments to the Iraqi government under contracts for humanitarian goods. In 2010, ABB entered into a deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ and settled civil matters with the SEC.

In December 2006, Beckman Coulter, Inc., a U.S. corporation, reported that one of its subsidiaries, Immunotech, S.A.S., had made an illicit payment to the Iraqi government and that it has reported the matter to the DOJ and SEC. According to a February 2007 SEC filing, Beckman had conducted a preliminary investigation into the allegations and had reported the matter to representatives of the DOJ and SEC. The company states that it continues to cooperate in the matter.

According to press reports in April 2007, Total SA is under investigation for improper payments involving Iraq and the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program, in addition to allegations regarding bribes in Iran. In May 2013, Total entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ and settled civil matters with the SEC regarding the bribes in Iran; however, the Oil-for-Food allegations were not included in the settlement. In July 2013, a French court acquitted Total and its chief executive of corruption-related charges linked to the Oil-for-Food Program.

According to a 2008 SEC filing, Ingersoll-Rand began investigating potential FCPA violations involving the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program with respect to Trane, Inc., promptly after its acquisition of Trane on June 5, 2008. The company has reported this matter and the ensuing investigation to the DOJ and SEC. The company consented to the entry of a civil injunction in the SEC action and entered into a three-year deferred prosecution agreement with the DOJ, which expired October 31, 2010. On February 16, 2011, the DOJ filed a motion to dismiss the Oil for Food charges against the Company. On March 11, 2011, the U.S. District Court dismissed the charges.

F. Ongoing Investigations under the FCPA

According to press reports, several other companies based in the U.S. and abroad have also been named in related investigations or have received subpoenas directly from the SEC requesting documents and information.

Related Cases. In a federal indictment in April 2005, Bay Oil U.S.A. Inc. and several individuals, including the president of Houston-based Bay Oil, David B. Chalmers, were charged with conspiracy to commit wire fraud and to engage in prohibited financial transactions with Iraq.³⁷⁵ In total, it is reported that eleven people have been charged in relation to the federal investigation of the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program. These include Chalmers, the Russian diplomat Vladimir Kuznetsove, a former U.N. procurement officer Alexander Yakovlev, and Texas oilman Oscar S. Wyatt. In an October 2005 superseding indictment, Wyatt, founder of Coastal Corporation, was charged with conspiracy, wire fraud, and violations of U.S. economic sanctions against Iraq. These activities were allegedly committed in connection with David B. Chalmers of Bay Oil.³⁷⁶ On October 1, 2007, Wyatt pleaded guilty to one count of wire fraud and faces up to two years in prison and was sentenced to one year in prison and ordered to pay $11 million in restitution. Also named in Wyatt's indictment were two Swiss business associates, Cathy Miguel and Mohameed Saidji, and the Nafta Petroleum Company, the Mednafta Trading Company Ltd., and Serenco, S.A. As of January 2006, Tongsun Park, a South Korean businessman, was added to this indictment. As yet, none of the companies or individuals have been charged under the FCPA.

In another case connected to the oil-for-food investigation, Midway Trading, a Virginia-based company, pleaded guilty in N.Y. State Court to scheming to pay more than $400,000 in kickbacks to Iraq for oil purchases made under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program. In the October 2005 plea deal, Midway Trading agreed to pay $250,000.³⁷⁷ This scheme also involved one of its trading partners, Gulf Oil; however, details of any indictments against this company are not known. This case is of particular note because it took place in a state, rather than federal, jurisdiction.

Additionally, press statements report that Manhattan's District Attorney, Robert Morgenthau, has opened a criminal investigation into Benon Sevan, the former U.N. head of the Oil-for-Food Program. Benon Sevan resigned in August 2005 as chief of the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program amidst accusations of taking approximately $150,000 in kickbacks.

8. Xerox Corp.

Background. Xerox Corp., a U.S. corporation, develops, services, and finances document equipment and software.

The Investigation. In August 2003, Xerox disclosed in an SEC filing that it had discovered certain improper payments made over a period of years in connection with sales to government customers by employees of its majority-owned subsidiary in India, Xerox ModiCorp, Ltd, now Xerox India, Ltd. Xerox conducted an internal investigation and voluntarily reported the payments to the SEC and DOJ.

In January 2005, an Indian government probe determined that the Xerox subsidiary was guilty of violating Indian law when it made the improper payments. The Indian government ordered the formation of an inter-agency group to determine the future course of action. In a June 30, 2005 report, Xerox stated that a private Indian investigator engaged by the Indian Ministry of Company Affairs had completed an investigation into this matter. The report asserted that Xerox senior officials were aware of certain violations and suggested that further investigations into possible criminal activities were necessary. Xerox reported these developments and made available a copy of this report to the SEC and DOJ.

In November 2005, Xerox replied to these allegations, provided a copy of their reply to the SEC and DOJ, and expects a ruling from the Indian ministry in charge of the investigation in the coming months. According to an October 2008 SEC filing, the report is still pending in the Indian Ministry of Company Affairs.

Marathon Oil Corp.
Amerada Hess Corp.
ChevronTexaco Corp.
Devon Energy Corp.

Background. Exxon Mobil Corp., Marathon Oil Corp., Amerada Hess Corp., ChevronTexaco Corp., and Devon Energy Corp., all U.S. corporations, are the subject of an inquiry by the SEC for alleged unlawful payments to government and senior officials of Equatorial Guinea.

The Investigation. In July 2004, the SEC began a preliminary investigation into potential bribes paid to government officials to secure petroleum sources outside the Middle East. According to published reports, even before the SEC inquiry began, other federal regulators and investigators were examining whether $700 million in Equatorial Guinean bank accounts at Riggs Bank in Washington (a subsidiary of Riggs National Corporation) were tied to possible corruption. Each of the oil companies states that it is cooperating with the SEC in its investigation.

A Senate subcommittee held a hearing on the Riggs issues and disclosed in a subsequent report that Riggs' records showed large payments by U.S. oil companies into accounts controlled by Equatorial Guinean officials and their relatives, sometimes in increments exceeding $1 million. Other payments made by oil companies pertained to land leases and purchases for government officials, expenses for the Equatorial Guinean Embassy in Washington, and educational expenses for the children of Equatorial Guinean officials studying abroad.

Marathon disclosed the SEC inquiry in a 2004 regulatory filing and noted that there "was no finding in the subcommittee's report that Marathon violated" the FCPA. As of August 1, 2005, Marathon reported receiving an SEC subpoena pursuant to a formal investigation of this issue. Amerada Hess also reported in July 2005 that the SEC had commenced a formal investigation, requesting documents and information. According to a December 2006 SEC filing, the company continues to cooperate with the SEC in this investigation.

According to the company's August 2005 10-Q, Amerada Hess was notified that, on July 21, 2005, the SEC had commenced a private investigation into payments related to the aforementioned issue. The SEC has requested documents and information related to its operations and interests in Equatorial Guinea. Up until that point, the investigation had been conducted as an informal inquiry. Amerada Hess states that it is continuing to cooperate with the SEC investigation.

In press reports and the company's November 2005 10-Q filing, Devon Energy Corp., based in Oklahoma City, reported that it was also an additional target of the SEC investigation. On August 9, 2005, Devon Energy received a subpoena issued by the SEC pursuant to a formal order of investigation. 1. Gtech Holdings Corp.

Background. Gtech Holdings Corp., based in West Greenwich, R.I., provides computer programming and data processing services.

The Investigation. In an SEC filing in May 2004, Gtech disclosed that the SEC had begun an investigation into allegations that Gtech's former President and Marketing Director of Gtech Brazil offered an inducement in connection with the negotiation of an extension of Gtech's contract with Brazil's official lottery contractor. Gtech secured a contract extension in 2003, from which Gtech allegedly earned $650 million in revenue. At the time of this filing, the SEC announced an informal inquiry into the bribery allegations, with which Gtech cooperated. At some point in 2004, the SEC inquiry was upgraded to a formal investigation. The Company states that it is continuing to cooperate, and a comprehensive internal investigation is also ongoing.

Similar criminal and civil actions have commenced in Brazil. According to Gtech, in late March 2004, Brazilian prosecutors recommended criminal charges be brought against nine individuals, including senior officers and the former president of Gtech Brazil, Antonio Carlos Rocha. In December 2004, the presiding judge rejected the prosecution's request to charge the individuals on procedural grounds. In January 2005, the prosecution re-opened the investigation. 15. Avery v. Juniper Networks, Inc. et al. (C.D. Cal. 2013)³⁷⁸

Background. On August 12, 2013, shareholder plaintiffs, led by plaintiff Warren Avery, filed a class action complaint against Juniper Networks, Inc. alleging violations of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. The complaint alleges that Juniper misled shareholders when it published its reports, filings, releases and statements because they failed to disclose that the Company knowingly (1) violated the FCPA, (2) derived its revenues in part by violating the FCPA, and (3) lacked effective internal controls over financial reporting. The plaintiffs believe they were negatively impacted when the public learned of the SEC and DOJ's investigation into Juniper's violation of the FCPA. The plaintiffs further allege artificial stock price inflation due to the false and misleading statements in the public filings.

Status. On October 30, 2013, the Court extended the defendants' time to respond to the complaint. On November 22, 2013 the Court extended the plaintiffs' time to file an amended complaint. On December 10, 2013 the Court granted the plaintiffs' administrative motion to relate cases. The litigation is pending.

14. City of Pontiac General Employees Retirement System v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (W.D. Ark. 2012)³⁷⁹
Egleston v. Vega (S.D.N.Y. 2013)³⁸⁰

Background. Wal-Mart is currently the subject of an FCPA investigation after an exposé was published in the New York Times on April 21, 2012 regarding alleged foreign bribery by senior Wal-Mart managers in Mexico. Several lawsuits have been filed, both derivatively and individually, in response to the allegations of foreign bribery.

The plaintiffs in Pontiac filed a securities class action on behalf of shareholders alleging that certain Wal-Mart officers and directors violated the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. They charged that the defendants issued materially false and misleading statements regarding Wal-Mart's rules and practices with respect to ethics by failing to disclose that it had been involved in a multi-million dollar bribery scheme at Wal-Mart's Mexican subsidiary, Wal-Mart de Mexico SAB de CV ("Walmex"), involving current and former executives. The plaintiffs charged that as a result of Wal-Mart's false statements regarding its ethics practices, the stock traded at an artificially high price and it plummeted after the news of foreign bribery came to light.

In April 2013, the plaintiffs in Egleston filed a securities class action on behalf of shareholders of purchasers of American Depositary Shares of Walmex against Walmex and Ernesto Vega, Chairman of the Walmex Board of Directors and Chairman of the Audit and Corporate Practices Committee of Walmex. The allegations are substantially similar to those brought in the Pontiac case.

Status. Pontiac was transferred from the Middle District of Tennessee to the Western District of Arkansas. On February 14, 2013, plaintiffs amended the complaint, limiting the defendants to Wal-Mart and the current CEO of Wal-Mart. The defendants filed a motion to dismiss the amended complaint on March 4, 2013.

13. City of Brokton Retirement System v. Avon Products, Inc. (D.N.J. 2011)³⁸¹

Background. On July 6, 2011, shareholder plaintiffs filed a class action complaint against Avon Products, Inc. alleging violations of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. The complaint alleged that Avon bribed foreign officials in several countries, in violation of the FCPA. In 2008, Avon conducted an internal investigation into allegations of bribery in its China office but assured shareholders that effective internal controls were in place. However, the internal investigations discovered more widespread wrongdoing, and the shareholders alleged that they were negatively impacted when the market learned of the internal investigation. They further alleged artificial stock price inflation due to the false and misleading statements as to the legitimacy of Avon's foreign practices.

Status. The plaintiffs amended the complaint on March 16, 2012, limiting the defendants to Avon and the CIO and former CFO of Avon. The defendants filed a motion to dismiss the amended complaint on October 12, 2012. The litigation is pending.

Background. On October 27, 2010 the district court consolidated two class action suits against SciClone Pharmaceuticals, Inc., Friedhem Blobel, the CEO and President of SciClone, and Gary S. Titus, the CFO, Senior Vice President of Finance, and Principal Accounting Officer of SciClone. Plaintiffs allege in two separate previously filed complaints that the defendants made false and misleading statements about SciClone's financial results because they failed to disclose that they were engaged in corrupt conduct and SciClone's success was due to this wrongful conduct. In August 2010, SciClone disclosed an SEC subpoena and a letter from the DOJ investigating the sale, licensing, and marketing of its products in foreign countries, including China.

11. Johnson v. Siemens AG (E.D.N.Y. 2009)³⁸³

Background. On December 3, 2009, plaintiff filed a securities class action against Siemens AG. One year earlier, Siemens had pleaded guilty to violations of the FCPA and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 based on bribery throughout the company's businesses. Siemens ultimately paid penalties of over $1.6 billion. Citing the plea agreements and other Siemens disclosures, the securities fraud class action alleges that from November 8, 2007 to March 17, 2008, Siemens falsely represented that it had cleaned up its business practices, when in reality its ability to generate revenue was still dependent on bribery. In the Amended Complaint filed by the newly appointed lead plaintiff on May 17, 2010, plaintiff changed its theory of liability and attempted to add control person claims against individual defendants. In the Amended Complaint, plaintiff alleged that statements made by Siemens and Siemens executives regarding Siemens's financial prospects were fraudulent because they failed to account for severe problems plaguing certain large scale "Legacy Projects."

Status. On May 10, 2011, the court dismissed the case for failure to plead a claim because the amended complaint failed to allege facts giving rise to a strong inference of scienter as required under the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act, and because an individual defendant cannot be held liable as a control person in the absence of an alleged violation of § 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act or Rule 10b-5 promulgated thereunder.

Plaintiffs allege fraudulent misrepresentations and omissions about Panalpina's work as a logistics provider and freight forwarder in the oil and gas industry. Specifically, the complaint alleges that Panalpina concealed that its lucrative business in Nigeria and depended on bribes to customs officials in violation of the FCPA resulting in artificial inflation of Panalpina's stock price until the company made partial disclosures about its Nigerian business practices during 2007 and 2008.

9. In re UTStarcom, Inc. Securities Litigation³⁸⁵

Background. A class of investors who acquired securities of UTStarcom, Inc. between February 21, 2003 and October 12, 2007 sued UTStarcom and the main officers of UTStarcom alleging violations of the federal securities laws.

The complaint alleges, inter alia, that UTStarcom possibly violated the FCPA by bribing foreign government officials to obtain sales in China, Mongolia, India and Southeast Asia. This resulted in the unwinding of certain joint ventures, financial restatements, and continuing investigations by the DOJ and SEC. The plaintiffs allege that individual defendants, the main officers of UTStarcom, knew there were insufficient controls in place to ensure UTStarcom was not recognizing revenues on sales that were obtained by bribing foreign government officials, which would not be permissible under GAAP. In addition, the plaintiffs noted that UTStarcom, in its securities filings, stated it had become aware a former employee of UTStarcom had made a payment to a Thailand government official in possible violation of the FCPA and that company disclosures strongly infer illegal payments were made to a Mongolian government official, all of which caused UTStarcom to report false financial results in 2005.

The plaintiffs allege that UTStarcom will likely have to report additional violations of the FCPA, incur additional charges to unwind transactions, and incur additional charges to resolve the SEC and DOJ investigations. They allege that each of the individual defendants was at least deliberately reckless in representing that UTStarcom's disclosure controls and procedures were effective and that the company's financial results were fairly presented.

Status. UTStarcom filed objections to the plaintiffs' fourth amended complaint on procedural grounds, arguing that the complaint did not conform to the court's rulings concerning the form of a complaint and that the complaint impermissibly added allegations of backdating and expanded the class period. On July 24, 2008, the Northern District of California court overruled the objections, noting that the Ninth Circuit advises leniency with procedural rules when an amendment adds allegations relating to events that occurred after the initial pleading was filed. The court also quoted language from the complaint stating that the SEC and DOJ are also investigating possible violations of the FCPA. The court stayed the case until after mediation, which took place in September 2009. On May 13, 2010, the court approved a settlement of the case.

7. In the Matter of InVision Techs. Securities Litigation (N.D. Cal. 2006)³⁸⁷

Background. On August 4, 2004, shareholders filed a class action complaint against InVision Technologies, Inc., a U.S. corporation, and certain of its officers and directors. Plaintiffs filed a consolidated complaint on December 9, 2004, which was subsequently amended on April 13, 2005 and February 22, 2006. Plaintiffs alleged that InVision and its CEO and CFO violated Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 when the defendants made misrepresentations and omissions in the company's financial statements. Specifically, plaintiffs alleged that InVision misrepresented in a merger agreement, attached to an SEC filing, that it was in compliance with all laws, including the FCPA and the books and records provision of section 13(b) of the Exchange Act, and failed to disclose that the company's foreign distributors made improper payments related to foreign sales activities in violation of the FCPA.

Status. On August 31, 2006, the court granted the defendants' motion to dismiss. On September 29, 2006, plaintiffs appealed. The Ninth Circuit issued an opinion on November 26, 2008 affirming the district court's ruling.

The Court of Appeals rejected InVision's argument that the alleged misrepresentations could not be considered communications to investors because they appeared in a private merger agreement, which expressly disavowed the creation of rights or remedies in other parties, attached to an SEC filing and not in the filing itself. Although the court considered the context of the statements relevant to scienter, it disagreed that it was a per se bar to securities law liability. Though not discussed in the opinion, the Ninth Circuit effectively adopts the SEC's interpretation in the Report of Investigation under 21(a) of the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934 issued in connection with Titan case. That Report warned that disclosure in an SEC transactional document must be accurate and complete even if the merger provisions are merely attached to the SEC filing or incorporated by reference.

The Court of Appeals next focused on whether the plaintiffs had adequately pled facts establishing InVision's representations to be false or misleading and establishing the element of scienter. On the first point, the Ninth Circuit disagreed with the district court, which had read a knowledge element into InVision's representations of legal compliance. The Ninth Circuit found that InVision warranted that it was "in compliance in all material respects with all laws," including section 13(b) of the Exchange Act. Because the SEC cease-and-desist order of February 14, 2005 specifically found a violation of section 13(b), the Court of Appeals concluded that the plaintiffs had satisfied the pleading requirements with respect to the issue of falsity.

Turning to scienter, the court refused to follow the Second and Seventh Circuits in adopting a theory of "collective scienter," which would hold the company as a whole responsible for the statements contained in the merger agreement. Although the court left open the possibility that a plaintiff might be able to plead scienter under a collective theory in certain circumstances, it found that such circumstances were not present in this case due to the limited nature and unique context of the alleged misstatements, which were made months before the company began an internal investigation into alleged FCPA violations. The court then concluded that the plaintiffs had pled insufficient facts to demonstrate that CEO Sergio Magistri, who had signed the merger agreement, possessed the requisite scienter, which the court defined as “deliberately reckless or conscious misconduct.”

H. Parallel Litigation

Plaintiffs had pointed to several factors to demonstrate scienter: (1) the nature of InVision’s business, described as a small company with an important overseas component; (2) the fact that Magistri signed a Sarbanes-Oxley certification; (3) the fact that GE discovered the FCPA violations relatively early in the merger due diligence process; (4) Magistri’s personal financial incentives to consummate the merger; and (5) the conclusions in the DOJ and SEC settlement documents, including InVision’s acceptance of responsibility. However, the court found that these five factors, individually or collectively, failed to create the required “strong inference” of scienter.

Finally, the Ninth Circuit held that the district court did not abuse its discretion when it refused the plaintiffs leave to file a third amended consolidated complaint naming the former senior vice president for sales and marketing, who oversaw the department in which the illegal conduct occurred.

Plaintiffs filed a petition for rehearing en banc on December 11, 2008, which the Court of Appeals denied on January 7, 2009.

Background. On February 2, 2006, a consolidated amended complaint was filed against Immucor, Inc., a U.S. corporation, and its officers on behalf of persons who purchased the common stock of Immucor. Plaintiffs alleged fraudulent misrepresentations and omissions about alleged bribery by the company's former president and CEO, Dr. Gioacchino De Chirico, and its Italian subsidiary.

Status. On October 4, 2006, the court denied Immucor's motion to dismiss, finding that the company had made material misrepresentations concerning its FCPA violations. On September 26, 2007, the court issued a final judgment granting the plaintiff's motion for final approval of class action settlement. Under the settlement, Immucor's insurance carrier will pay $2.5 million to the plaintiff class for an absolute and unconditional release of all claims against the defendants. Background. On November 6, 2006, plaintiffs filed an amended consolidated complaint against Nature's Sunshine Products, Inc., a U.S. corporation, and its officers on behalf of all persons who purchased the common stock of Nature's Sunshine. Plaintiffs alleged that defendants issued false and misleading financial statements, failed to maintain adequate internal controls, and failed to disclose the CEO's approval of a payment in violation of the FCPA.

Status. On May 21, 2007, the court dismissed plaintiffs' Rule 10b-5(a) and (c) claims as they relate to the class period before March 15, 2005, but denied defendants' motion to dismiss in all other respects. On September 23, 2008, the court granted defendants' motion to dismiss the plaintiffs' claim of scheme liability because defendants' alleged misrepresentations to KPMG to obtain a clean audit were not disclosed to the public. A July 10, 2009 mediation between the parties resulted in settlement in principle. On February 9, 2010, the district court entered an order and final judgment certifying the action as a class action on behalf of all persons who purchased Nature's Sunshine common stock between April 23, 2002 and April 5, 2006 and approving the settlement, settlement fund of $6 million, and award of attorney fees and expenses as fair and reasonable. Background. On May 16, 2006, a consolidated amended complaint was filed, subsequently further amended February 22, 2007, on behalf of all persons who purchased or acquired the securities of FARO Technologies, Inc., a U.S. corporation. Plaintiffs allege that FARO reported, and certain corporate officers caused the company to report, false and misleading sales, gross margin and profit calculations predicated upon alleged manipulation or improper reporting of inventory levels and selling administrative expenses. In addition, plaintiffs allege that FARO overstated its revenues by reporting revenues in violation of the FCPA due to suspicious payments in China and the Asia/Pacific region in 2004 and 2005.

Status. Status. Background. On November 18, 1999, the plaintiffs, a shareholders' committee of Saybolt International B.V., filed a complaint against an attorney and his law firm concerning the company's violation of the FCPA because of a $50,000 bribe to Panamanian officials for acquiring land in Panama. The plaintiffs alleged that the defendants committed malpractice because they failed to advise the company that its affiliate's payment of bribe in Panama could result in criminal liability. The company was prosecuted and pleaded guilty to the offense and its CEO was found guilty. On June 12, 2001, the District Court granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment. The plaintiffs appealed.

On April 21, 2003, the Second Circuit Court of Appeals vacated the District Court's judgment, finding that the company's guilty plea and the CEO's conviction did not collaterally estop the plaintiff from litigating the issue in its civil claim against the defendants. In addition, the Court of Appeals found that the definition of "corruptly" in the FCPA did not require the government to establish that the defendant in fact knew its conduct violated the FCPA to be guilty of such a violation. On remand, the District Court granted the defendants' motion to dismiss on grounds that the shareholders' committee was not a real party in interest and that the applicable law barred assignments of legal malpractice claims. After the plaintiffs appealed, the Court of Appeals certified certain questions of state law to the New York Court of Appeals.

Status. On August 12, 2005, the parties submitted a stipulation to withdraw their appeal with prejudice based on settlement of this case. The terms of settlement were not disclosed. The case is closed.

1. *In the Matter of Syncor ERISA Litigation (C.D. Cal. 2004)*³⁹⁴

Background. On February 24, 2004, participants in an employee stock ownership plan at Syncor International Corp., a Delaware corporation, filed a consolidated complaint against the company and individual defendants. Plaintiffs alleged that the company and certain board members violated their fiduciary duties under ERISA by investing in Syncor's stock while the company was engaged in a scheme to bribe foreign physicians and hospital officials in Taiwan and China to obtain business.

Status. On January 1, 2006, the District Court granted summary judgment for the defendants, finding that plaintiffs did not overcome the presumption that defendants did not breach their fiduciary duty. Plaintiffs appealed to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. The appeal was argued on November 9, 2007. On February 19, 2008, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the decision of the District Court, finding that genuine issues of material fact existed regarding whether the defendants breached their fiduciary duty, and remanded the case to the District Court. The District Court granted the plaintiffs' preliminary motion for a class action settlement, and it approved the notice of class action settlement on August 11, 2008. The notice states the Defendants will establish a $4,000,000 settlement fund.

The District Court held a hearing on the motion for final approval of the class action settlement on October 6, 2008. The court approved the settlement on October 22, 2008.

28. Wynn Resorts, Ltd. v. Okada \(D. Nev. Clark County 2012\)³⁹⁵
Okada v. Wynn Resorts, Ltd. \(D. Nev. 2013\)³⁹⁶

Background. On February 19, 2012, Wynn Resorts filed a complaint against Kazuo Okada, a member of its board of directors, for breach of fiduciary duties. The complaint alleges that Okada violated the FCPA in the course of his independent development of a casino in the Philippines. Wynn Resorts averred that by engaging in such conduct while he was a director of Wynn Resorts, Okada directly damaged the interests of Wynn Resorts. Specifically, Wynn Resorts alleged that Okada's alleged violations of the FCPA placed Wynn Resorts' casino license in jeopardy, and, by doing so, Okada breached his fiduciary duties by failing to protect and advance Wynn Resort's interests. Wynn Resorts also alleges that Okada independently breached his fiduciary duties when he (1) failed to disclose to and cooperate with Wynn Resort's investigators regarding his business activities in the Philippines and (2) when he refused to attend director training sessions on compliance with all applicable laws and avoidance of corruption.

On January 24, 2013, Okada filed a complaint against Wynn Resorts alleging violations of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. On January 3, 2013, Wynn Resorts issued a proxy statement to announce that the Board of Directors had called a Special Meeting of the Company's shareholders. The proxy statement sought the shareholder's approval to remove Okada from the board. The complaint alleges that in recommending that the shareholders vote to remove Okada, the proxy statement made numerous false and misleading statements and omitted material facts. The complaint further alleges that the false and misleading statements usurped the shareholders' right to make an informed decision regarding corporate governance and were a deliberate effort to deceive shareholders.

Status. On February 11, 2013, Okada's motion to dismiss was denied without prejudice. On April 8, 2013, the United States filed a motion in the Wynn Resorts case to intervene and for temporary and partial stay of discovery. The court granted the government's motion on May 2, 2013 for the limited purpose of requesting a stay of discovery. The jury trial for Wynn Resorts is scheduled for April 21, 2014.

The Okada litigation was terminated when, on March 4, 2013, Okada voluntarily dismissed his case without prejudice.

27. CONPROCA S.A. de C.V. v. Petróleos Mexicanos (S.D.N.Y. 2011)³⁹⁷
Petróleos Mexicanos, et al. v. CONPROCA S.A. de C.V., et al. (S.D.N.Y. 2012)³⁹⁸

Background. In 1997, Siemens Aktiengesellschaft (“Siemens”), SK Engineering & Construction Co. Ltd. (“SK”), by way of their joint venture entity and CONPROCA S.A. de C.V. (“CONPROCA”), were awarded an oil refinery modernization contract in the Cadereyta region of Mexico in exchange for allegedly making various illicit payments to officials at Petróleos Mexicanos and Pemex-Refinación (collectively “Pemex”). Over the course of the project, CONPROCA allegedly continued to bribe Pemex officials to maintain their engagement despite ongoing problems with the joint venture entity’s performance. As a result of these bribes, the continued engagement of CONPROCA allegedly cost Pemex millions of dollars in damages due to the selection of an inadequate contractor, the acceptance of harmful contractual terms, and the acceptance of significant cost overruns.

Beginning in 2001 CONPROCA initiated ICC arbitration in Mexico against Pemex, claiming that Pemex was responsible for millions in cost overruns and delays. In response, Pemex alleged that the costs overruns and delays were due CONPROCA’s own faulty management, which had been prolonged by its bribes to Pemex officials. In April 2012, the arbitral tribunal awarded CONPROCA approximately $530 million (disputed by the parties) in damages which CONPROCA sought to enforce in New York federal court. Pemex challenged the arbitral award in the Mexican Courts which entered an anti-suit injunction requiring CONPROCA to refrain from commencing any action aimed at enforcing the award in Mexico and abroad on December 11, 2012.

Thereafter, on December 12, 2012, Pemex filed a complaint against Siemens, SK, and CONPROCA for violations of the Travel Act and the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) resulting from the alleged acts of bribery by the defendants.

In April 2013, Pemex dismissed its claims against CONPROCA for unstated reasons, leaving Siemens and SK as the sole defendants in the matter. For their part, Siemens and SK filed a motion to dismiss which, in part, alleged that Pemex’s claims were extraterritorial in nature and therefore were beyond the authority of the two statutes. Pemex later filed an amended complaint, dropping the Travel Act claim and included details from the testimony of Siemens Mexico’s former general counsel confirming that the company paid $2.6 million to an unnamed official at Pemex.

Status.

On July 30, 2013, Judge Louis Stanton dismissed Pemex’s December 12, 2012 complaint on the grounds that Pemex had failed to demonstrate that the claims had sufficient contact with the United States and thus were beyond the scope of the statutes. According to Judge Stanton, “[t]he Rico claims here are Background. On July 23, 2010, Newmarket Corporation and Afton Chemical Corporation filed a complaint against Innospec Inc. and Alcor Chemie Vertriebs GmbH. Plaintiffs filed a second amended complaint on January 27, 2011. The action arose from Innospec's guilty pleas in which it admitted violations of the FCPA by bribing government officials in Iraq and Indonesia to ensure ongoing sales in those countries of tetraethyl lead, an octane-boosting fuel additive. Plaintiffs alleged that the defendants' actions harmed the plaintiffs' sale of a competing and alternative octane-boosting fuel additive, methylcyclopentadienyl manganese tricarbonyl. Plaintiffs alleged unlawful conspiracies in restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman Act, unlawful commercial bribery in violation of the Robinson-Patman Act, unlawful conspiracy in restraint of trade in violation of the Virginia Antitrust Act, unlawful commercial bribery in violation of the Virginia Antitrust Act, and unlawful conspiracy to injure another in its trade or business in violation of the Virginia Business Conspiracy Act.

25. Huck v. Pfizer (S.D. Cal. 2008)⁴⁰⁰

Background. On June 13, 2008, plaintiff James Huck filed a breach of contract and fraud action against Pfizer, Inc., based on human resources consulting services Huck provided to Pfizer. That action, originally filed in the Superior Court of California, San Diego County, was removed to federal court on July 16, 2008.

In its 10-K filed February 26, 2010, Pfizer disclosed that the company is voluntarily cooperating with the SEC and DOJ with investigations into the sales activities in certain countries outside the United States. While the complaint in this case did not initially refer to the FCPA, on February 22, 2010, plaintiff sought, and was granted, leave to amend his complaint to allege that his relationship with Pfizer was terminated by Pfizer because he had discovered and reported what he believed to be violations of the FCPA to Pfizer.

Status. On July 25, 2011, Pfizer was granted summary judgment as to some of the fraud claims (intentional misrepresentation and concealment) but summary judgment was denied in all other respects. Close of discovery was set for November 9, 2011, and a mandatory settlement conference was held on December 14, 2011.

Pursuant to a settlement agreement, the parties filed a joint motion to dismiss the case with prejudice. Their motion was granted on October 11, 2012.

24. Hidalgo, et al. v. Siemens Aktiengesellschaft, et al. (S.D. Fla. 2011)⁴⁰¹

Background. On January 11, 2011, plaintiffs Carlos A. Moran Hidalgo (“Hidalgo”) and Celina Liliana Moran filed a complaint against Siemens Aktiengesellschaft, Siemens S.A., and two Siemens officers, under the Alien Tort Statute of 1789, alleging attempted extrajudicial killing, torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, and crimes against humanity. Plaintiff alleged this claim derived from conduct forming the basis of the criminal convictions in United States v. Siemens Aktiengesellschaft, (D.D.C 2008). Plaintiffs alleged that Siemens conspired with or aided and abetted individuals with influence over Argentinean government officials to violate plaintiffs’ rights. Specifically, plaintiffs alleged that Hidalgo recommended to his employer, an independent “watchdog” agency, that the government of Argentina reject Siemens’s offer due to suspected corruption of government officials. Plaintiffs further alleged that Siemens employees physically assaulted Hidalgo, to dissuade him from disclosing his recommendation and findings.

On March 8, 2011, the Court conditionally granted plaintiffs’ counsel’s motion to withdraw and allowed plaintiffs until April 14, 2011 to obtain new counsel, which they never obtained. After granting the second extension, the Court notified plaintiffs that it would dismiss the action without prejudice as to each defendant not served by June 17, 2011.

Status. On July 28, 2011, the Court (1) denied plaintiffs’ third application for extension of time to obtain counsel and to file a joint scheduling report; and (2) dismissed the action without prejudice and closed the case, for failure to timely serve the defendants.

23. Omega Advisors v. Federal Insurance Company (D.N.J. 2010)⁴⁰²

Background. On February 22, 2010, Omega Advisors Inc. filed a complaint in the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey, alleging that Federal Insurance Company (“Federal Insurance”) breached a duty to indemnify Omega for losses covered under the Omega’s insurance policy. The policy insured against employee dishonesty for up to $5 million in losses. Omega alleged that the Federal Insurance denied coverage for at least $5 million in losses, resulting from misappropriation of funds by the plaintiff’s then-employee, Clayton Lewis. Omega’s claim arose in connection with its investment in privatization securities issued by the Republic of Azerbaijan in 1998 (the “Azeri Investment”). According to the Omega’s complaint, Lewis was involved in wrongdoing with Viktor Kozeny, a Czech businessman who promoted the Azeri Investment. The matter was subsequently investigated by the U.S. government, and Omega entered into a non-prosecution agreement with the Department of Justice, agreeing to pay a $500,000 fine. Omega then filed an action against Lewis in the Southern District of New York on February 2, 2006. On August 2, 2007, Omega notified Federal Insurance of a claim under the insurance policy, in connection with Lewis. Federal Insurance refused to pay the alleged covered losses, on the ground that Omega was obligated to provide sufficient facts in connection with the claim in 2006, when it filed the federal lawsuit against Lewis. Omega argued that they were not in possession of sufficient facts at the time that claim was made, and subsequently provided Federal Insurance with newly-learned facts relating to the insurance claim on February 26, 2009. On April 23, 2010, Federal Insurance moved to dismiss the case.

Status. On November 30, 2010, the Court granted the defendant’s motion to dismiss. The Court held that the plaintiff had more than a mere suspicion that Lewis was engaged in wrongdoing at the time the insurance claim was made to the defendant on August 2, 2007. On December 21, 2010, the plaintiff filed a notice of appeal to the United States Court of Appeal for the Third Circuit. The appeal was dismissed on April 15, 2011.

22. RSM Production Corporation, Jack J. Grynberg and Grynberg Petroleum Company v. Mikhail Fridman, Len Blavatnik, Lev Korchagin and Gregory Bowen (S.D.N.Y. 2009)⁴⁰³

Background. On November 1, 2006, RSM Production Company, a Texas corporation, Jack Grynberg and Grynberg Petroleum Company filed a complaint, subsequently amended on August 24, 2007, October 2, 2007, and February 28, 2008, alleging: (a) intentional tortious interference with prospective business advantages; (b) tortious interference with contract; and (c) civil conspiracy.

RSM and the nation of Grenada signed an exclusive agreement in July 1996 resulting in an oil and natural gas exploration, development and production license to be issued by Grenada in favor of RSM. As president and owner of GPC, Grynberg worked on behalf of RSM to advance these efforts. In September 2006, Gregory Bowen, Deputy Prime Minister in charge of Grenada's Energy affairs, advised Jack Grynberg that he expected significant bribe payments for plaintiffs to do business in Grenada. Plaintiffs allege that after RSM refused to pay such amounts, defendants developed and implemented a scheme to: (a) persuade Grenada to not issue the required license; (b) finance Grenada's defense of the non-issuance of the exclusive oil and natural gas exploration; (c) divert valuable petroleum rights that belong to RSM to Global Petroleum Group Ltd., an alleged front for defendants Blavatnik, Fridman, BP, p.l.c. and TNK-BP Limited (Russia's third largest oil company); and (d) misappropriate proprietary information concerning Grenada's offshore reserves. These actions were allegedly taken to substitute defendants (excluding Bowen) for RSM. Plaintiffs further allege that the defendants' wrongful conduct has included violations of the FCPA, the Travel Act, and the 1997 OECD Convention on Bribery of Foreign Public Officials in International Business Transactions. Specifically, the plaintiffs allege that Bowen has been the direct and indirect recipient of bribes from the other defendants. Plaintiffs allege damages of at $500 million.

Status. On February 19, 2009, the court issued an order granting the defendants' motion to dismiss the amended complaint in its entirety with prejudice. On July 21, 2010, the Second Circuit affirmed the dismissal.

Background. According to a 10Q filed by eLandia on May 19, 2009, the company filed an action on June 27, 2008 against Jorge Granados, individually, and Retail Americas VoIP, asserting claims for contractual indemnification, breach of contract, breach of the obligation of good faith and fair dealing, fraud, fraudulent inducement, unjust enrichment, and specific performance against the escrow agent. eLandia asserted that Granados and RAV failed to disclose as in the preferred stock purchase agreement, by which eLandia purchased 80% of Latin Node's equity, that Latin Node had made payments to various parties in violation of the FCPA.

Status. On February 12, 2009, the parties entered into a settlement agreement. Pursuant to that agreement, the defendants returned 375,000 shares of eLandia stock that were held in escrow as part of the sale agreement. The action was dismissed on March 13, 2009.

Background. On December 22, 2006, the plaintiffs filed a consolidated RICO class action complaint, and subsequently amended on June 15, 2007, on behalf of all Iraqi citizens who: (a) were specific intended beneficiaries of humanitarian benefits under the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program; (b) were qualified to receive program benefits; and (c) did not receive the full benefits of which they were entitled. Such persons include the subclass of citizens who were minors during any portion of the program. Plaintiffs allege that the defendants conspired with various other entities, including certain agencies of the Iraqi government, front companies, and international shipping companies to form an enterprise that bribed the Iraqi government with money illegally siphoned from the U.N. Oil-For-Food Program through bank accounts in the United States. It is alleged that, through this scheme, escrow account funds earmarked for the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program were improperly transferred into the coffers of the Hussein Regime or used to indemnify good suppliers, including AWB, for the bribes they had paid to Iraq. Plaintiffs allege four claims for relief: (a) violation of RICO; (b) conspiracy to violate RICO; (c) unjust enrichment; and (d) an accounting as to the disposition of all funds received by defendants. Specifically, plaintiffs allege that the defendants engaged in a pattern of racketeering activity and committed numerous RICO “predicate acts” by repeatedly violating several statutes, including the FCPA.

Status. On October 9, 2008, the court issued an order granting the defendants’ motion to dismiss the amended complaint in its entirety. On October 22, 2008, plaintiffs filed an appeal with the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. On October 2, 2009, the court of appeals affirmed the judgment of the district court, stating the plaintiffs failed to allege an injury-in-fact that is fairly traceable to the defendants’ conduct.

The Nigerian government detained the goods from August 2004 through January 2005. Shoaga refused to pay the contract charges for the extended use of the cargo container. An initial complaint filed by Shoaga, which did not include FCPA claims, was dismissed for non-prosecution. In the complaint filed on February 4, 2008, Shoaga alleged breach of contract, fraud, interference with commerce, and an FCPA violation. 18. Supreme Fuels Trading FZE v. Harry Sargeant III, Mustafa Abu-Nana'a, Int'l Oil Trading Company, LLC and Int'l Oil Trade Center \(S.D. Fla. 2008\)⁴⁰⁷

Background. On October 21, 2008, plaintiff Supreme Fuels Trading FZE, a United Arab Emirates corporation and a global provider of support to both military and non-military customers, filed a complaint against International Oil Trading Company (“IOTC”), a U.S. corporation, its Jordanian subsidiary, and its two owners. That complaint was amended on November 19, 2008. The amended complaint alleges that, in 2004, defendants began bribing key Jordanian government officials to ensure that IOTC would be the sole recipients of more than $1 billion worth of U.S. government contracts for the supply of fuels to the U.S. military in Iraq. The U.S. government will award these contracts to a company only if it possesses a Letter of Authorization (“LOA”) from the Jordanian government authorizing the transport of fuel across Jordan into Iraq. The complaint alleges that the defendants have bribed Jordanian government officials to prevent them from issuing a LOA to any other company, including lower bidders such as plaintiff, thus securing for IOTC every contract tendered since 2004. Furthermore, plaintiff alleges that defendants have consistently overcharged the U.S. government for fuel, resulting in a profit of $210 million, $70 million of which was personally procured by defendant Sargeant, and unnecessary charges to taxpayers in excess of $180 million.

Status. On January 9, 2009, defendants filed a motion to dismiss plaintiffs’ amended complaint. Defendant Mustafa Abu-Nana’a moved to dismiss the action on the basis of insufficiency of service and lack of in personam jurisdiction, and all defendants moved to dismiss on the grounds of forum non conveniens and the act of state doctrine (that the court should not declare invalid the actions of a sovereign government taken within its own territory). The court denied the motion to dismiss on December 18, 2009. On May 6, 2011, an Amended Final Judgment was filed in favor of the plaintiff, in the amount of $5 million.

Background. On February 21, 2008, plaintiffs filed a complaint alleging various claims, including RICO, common law fraud and theft/conversion. The plaintiffs seek to recover their proportional share of approximately $40.5 million in bribes allegedly paid to foreign nationals in Kazakhstan to secure various oil rights for a joint venture consortium between plaintiffs and defendants. The plaintiffs allege that the defendants engaged in bribery and lied to the plaintiffs and paid a portion of the illegal bribes out of the profits owed to the plaintiffs, thereby financially harming the plaintiffs and harming their reputation.

Status. A default judgment was entered against the defendants on July 30, 2008, for failure to plead or otherwise defend the action. In a November 12, 2008 opinion, the court granted motions by BP and Statoil to compel arbitration. Plaintiffs' complaint was thereby dismissed against BP, individual BP defendants, and Statoil with prejudice. On February 9, 2009, the court granted BG Group P.L.C.'s motion to set aside the default judgment and compel arbitration. On March 2, 2009, the plaintiffs filed a notice of appeal to the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. 16. Argo-Tech Corp. v. Yamada Corp. and Upsilon Int'l Corp. (N.D. Oh. 2008)⁴⁰⁹

Background. On March 24, 2008, plaintiff Argo-Tech Corporation, a Delaware corporation, which manufactures high performance commercial and military aerospace equipment, filed a complaint against Yamada Corporation, a Japanese defense equipment trading corporation, and its indirect subsidiary, Upsilon International Corporation, for declaratory relief finding Yamada in breach of a distributorship agreement between Argo-Tech and Yamada (“the Agreement”), which designates Upsilon as distributor and sales agent of Argo-Tech products.

The complaint alleges that Yamada engaged in unethical conduct, in violation of the Agreement’s provisions requiring Yamada to use “legal and ethical means” to sell Argo-Tech products “in strict compliance” with applicable laws, including the FCPA. Specifically, the complaint avers that Upsilon and its parent company funneled approximately $900,000 in corrupt payments through a charitable organization to help secure a Japanese military hazardous clean-up project.

Upsilon and Yamada have counterclaimed for breach of contract asserting that Argo-Tech anticipatorily repudiated the Agreement without a material basis. Defendants’ principal argument is that none of the corruption allegations are related to Upsilon or Argo-Tech products and activities. Defendants allege that Argo-Tech is attempting to wrongfully terminate the Agreement, which has a remaining term of 35 years. Finally, Defendants contend that the relevant terms of the Agreement apply to Yamada’s activities as a sales agent, not as a distributor, so there are no grounds for termination of the distributorship portion of the Agreement.

Status. The parties answered and cross-answered in July 2008 and initiated fact discovery. Mediation was ordered on September 30, 2009 and held in October 2009. 15. Hijazi Medical Supplies v. AGA Medical Corp. (D. Minn. 2007)⁴¹⁰

Background. On July 23, 2007, plaintiff filed a complaint to recover losses associated with its termination by defendant. The complaint alleged that, on October 20, 2004, plaintiff and defendant had entered into an agreement whereby plaintiff would act as the exclusive distributor for defendant's medical devices throughout the Middle East. In 2005, defendant allegedly discovered that its distributor to China had likely violated the FCPA by bribing doctors in government-owned hospitals to secure contracts with those hospitals and bribing Chinese government patent officials to influence them to approve AGA's patent applications. The complaint alleges that the defendant terminated the relationship with that distributor and self-disclosed the matter to the DOJ and informed the plaintiff of its decision to terminate the Chinese distributor.

The plaintiff thereafter allegedly requested to be appointed as the defendant's new distributor to China. The request was denied. The complaint alleges that, at that point, plaintiff had already shipped defendant's products to China and continued to do so even after the request for appointment was denied. On April 13, 2007, the defendant allegedly terminated the relationship with the plaintiff citing that the plaintiff had breached its agreement with the defendant by shipping products to China.

On August 3, 2007, defendants filed a counterclaim against the plaintiffs, including claims alleging breach, conversion, fraud, and account stated.

Status. On September 26, 2008, the court heard argument on 1) the defendant's motion for partial summary judgment, seeking a damages limitation on plaintiffs' breach of contract claim and judgment on AGA's account stated counterclaim and 2) plaintiffs' opposition to defendants' motion for partial summary judgment, as to AGA's liability on plaintiffs' breach of contract claim. On November 10, 2008, the court denied plaintiff's motion and granted in part defendant's motion for partial summary judgment. The case was set to go to trial on February 9, 2009, but on January 30, 2009, the court ordered the case dismissed having been advised by counsel that it was in the process of settlement. On March 9, 2009, the parties stipulated to the dismissal with prejudice of all claims and counterclaims, except the defendant's account stated counterclaim. On that claim, the parties agreed to a judgment of $500,000 to be paid by the plaintiffs. On April 7, 2009, the court entered judgments in accordance with the parties' stipulation.

14. Castellanos, et al. v. Pfizer, Inc., et al. (S.D. Fla. 2007)⁴¹¹

Background. On May 7, 2007, plaintiffs, members of a legal and economic services firm representing Acromax, an Ecuadorian drug manufacturer, along with Vera Castellanos, an Ecuadorian patent court judge, who was allegedly defamed by the defendants, filed a complaint against Pfizer, Acromax's competitor, and members of the United States Department of State. The complaint alleged that Acromax had appeared before the Ecuadorian patent judge to petition for a license to distribute a drug similar to Viagra. The complaint alleged that defendants offered a bribe to Judge Castellanos to influence him to deny Acromax's petition. The complaint also alleged that the individual defendants conspired with Pfizer to authorize the payment of a gift to influence Judge Castellanos to rule in Pfizer's favor.

The complaints then alleged that the defendant members of the United States Department of State conspired with Pfizer to defame Judge Castellanos and revoke his United States visa without cause, which resulted in the judge being fired and branded corrupt. The plaintiffs filed an Amended Complaint on August 9, 2007 reiterating the previous allegations and alleging violations of the FCPA and conspiracy and attempt to violate the Act. Plaintiffs filed a Second Amended Complaint on September 10, 2007.

Status. On June 30, 2008, the case was dismissed without prejudice for plaintiffs' failure to establish diversity jurisdiction.

Background. On March 6, 2006, the plaintiff, a Chinese company that provides consultation and information technology solutions to financial institutions, filed a lawsuit against Fidelity National Financial, Inc., a U.S. corporation, and its officers. The plaintiff alleged that the defendants violated the RICO and the FCPA because the bank terminated procurement contracts, originally obtained through the efforts of the plaintiff, due to the defendants' bribery of Chinese bank officials. The plaintiff claimed that the defendants made inappropriate payments in the form of travel expenses, consulting fees, and other miscellaneous expenses to bank officials to obtain procurement contracts.

Status. On April 17, 2007, the court ordered that all claims and cross-claims be dismissed with prejudice pursuant to the parties' settlement agreement, the terms of which were not disclosed. The case is closed.

Background. On December 26, 2002, Metro Communication Corp., BVI filed a complaint against Fidelity Ventures Brazil, LLC (“Fidelity Brazil”) and certain of its former members and managers alleging breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, and fraud. Metro, an investor in Fidelity Brazil, alleges that Fidelity Brazil concealed and failed to disclose a bribery scandal that involved Fidelity Brazil’s employees paying local Brazilian officials, via a New York bank account, to obtain permits authorizing work in Brazil. As a result of the bribery scandal, the expected value of Metro’s investments in Fidelity Brazil was reduced to a fraction of its original $31.5 million value.

Status. On April 30, 2004, the court granted defendants’ motion to dismiss in part: most of the common law fraud claims, the equitable fraud claims, and the fraudulent transfer claims were dismissed. The court allowed the plaintiff to proceed with, inter alia, the claims for breach of contract and certain statutory derivative claims under the Limited Liability Company Act. Status. On February 28, 2006, the court issued an order granting the defendants' motion to dismiss on statute of limitations grounds. On March 28, 2006, the plaintiff appealed. 10. Fabri, et al. v. United Technologies Int'l, Inc., et al. (D. Conn. 2002)⁴¹⁵

Background. Juan Fabri Sr. and Juan Fabri Jr. sued United Technologies International, Inc., a manufacturer and distributor of helicopters, alleging breach of contract, tortious interference, and a violation of Connecticut's unfair trade statute after United Technologies unilaterally terminated its contract with the Fabris and failed to pay the Fabris a commission for the sale of certain helicopters to the Argentine government. United Technologies argued that an outside investigator uncovered certain FCPA "red flags" during an investigation of the Fabris' sale of helicopters to the Argentine government and, therefore, it was allowed to terminate the contract under a provision in the contract wherein the Fabris warranted that they would not violate the FCPA.

A jury found for the defendants on the contract and tortious interference claims but in the plaintiffs' favor on the state unfair trade claim. The defendants moved for judgment as a matter of law, which the district court denied. On appeal to the Second Circuit, United Technologies argued that the jury verdict was inconsistent. With respect to the FCPA issue, the defendants argued that, since the contract claim and the state unfair trade claim both turned on whether the defendants violated a duty of good faith and fair dealing, the jury must have applied a heightened requirement of good faith and fair dealing to the state unfair trade claim. According to the defendants, applying such a heightened standard conflicted with the company's legal duty not to violate the FCPA and, consequently, the FCPA preempted the state unfair trade statute. The Second Circuit disagreed with defendants, holding that the proof offered in support of the state unfair trade claim was sufficient to support the jury's verdict without applying a heightened standard of fairness. The court therefore concluded that the defendant's preemption argument was meritless.

Status. The case settled on remand to the district court.

9. Rotec Industries, Inc. v. Mitsubishi Corp., et al. (D. Or. 2001)⁴¹⁶

Background. Plaintiff alleged various state law and common law claims in addition to RICO.

Status. The District court granted defendant's motion for summary judgment, holding that the allegations were insufficient to establish a violation of the FCPA, one of the two alleged predicate acts for the RICO claim, given that plaintiff had no knowledge of any specific payments that were alleged to have been made to Chinese officials, and that there was no evidence to suggest that mails or other instrumentality of interstate commerce were used to make such payments.

8. Scientific Drilling, et al. v. Gyrodata (C.A. Fed. Tex. 1999)⁴¹⁷

Background. Plaintiff Scientific Drilling International, Inc. filed suit against Gyrodata Corp., claiming that Gyrodata had infringed six of its patents relating to high-resolution well-boring surveying. Gyrodata responded by denying the charge of infringement and filing a number of counterclaims, including a charge that Scientific had violated the FCPA, on the basis that plaintiffs interfered with Gyrodata's customer contracts. The District Court dismissed all of Gyrodata's counterclaims and Gyrodata appealed.

Status. The Texas Court of Appeals upheld the dismissal of Gyrodata's FCPA counterclaim, concluding that there is no implied private right of action under the FCPA. The court cited the Sixth Circuit's decision in Lamb v. Phillip Morris, Inc., 915 F.2d 1024 (6th Cir. 1990), for the proposition that "the introduction of private plaintiffs interested solely in post-violation enforcement, rather than pre-violation compliance, most assuredly would hinder congressional efforts to protect companies and their employees concerned about FCPA liability." Id. at 1029-30.

Background. Plaintiffs, J.S. Service Center Corp. and Sercenco, S.A., sued General Electric Technical Services Company, Inc. and General Electric Company (together “GE”), U.S. corporations, in New York state court for damages under, inter alia, the FCPA and RICO, relating to GE’s non-renewal of Sercenco’s Service Sales Representative Agreement with GE, pursuant to which Sercenco was designated GE’s authorized sales representative for Peru. Defendants removed the action to federal court on June 1, 1995.

Sercenco alleged that officials of ElectroPeru, Peru’s state-owned electric utility, were attempting to extort bribes from it on an unrelated project and that when it refused to pay the officials, they fabricated complaints to GE about Sercenco’s work. Sercenco alleged that GE told Sercenco to “resolve” the problem without involving GE so that GE could obtain additional contracts with ElectroPeru. Sercenco further alleged that although GE purported to comply with, and to insist that its agents comply with the FCPA, GE in fact had a policy of using agents who it knew would pay bribes, and that GE had in fact replaced Sercenco with another agent because Sercenco would not pay bribes and the new agent had and would.

Status. The District Court dismissed the plaintiffs’ claim under the FCPA, holding that there is no private right of action under the FCPA. Plaintiffs’ RICO claims were also dismissed. The plaintiffs appealed to the Second Circuit, but withdrew their appeal in December 1996. The case is closed.

6. Abrahams v. Young & Rubicam Inc., et al. (D. Conn. 1994)⁴¹⁹

Background. Plaintiff Eric Abrahams was the former Minister of Tourism and Information for the Government of Jamaica. On October 7, 1991, Abrahams filed suit against Young & Rubicam, an advertising firm, alleging that Young & Rubicam had embarked on a scheme to bribe him to secure an advertising account with the Jamaican government. Abrahams had no knowledge of the scheme until he, Young & Rubicam, and others were indicted by the DOJ under the FCPA. Young & Rubicam pleaded guilty and conceded that there was no evidence that Abrahams was involved. Abrahams's suit alleged injuries to his reputation and to his emotional, financial, political, and social status resulting from widespread false publicity about his role in the bribery scheme.

Status. On June 26, 1992, the United States District Court for the District of Connecticut granted the defendants' motion to dismiss the complaint, based in part on deficiencies in the complaint concerning causality. The court held that plaintiff had not sufficiently alleged that defendants' conspiracy had proximately caused injury to him and that the indirect injuries flowing from his indictment were too tenuous to state a claim.

On appeal, the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit affirmed the lower court's decision in part, with the dismissal of the negligence and defamation claims reversed and remanded. The district court, however, entered judgment for defendants on October 3, 1997 on the grounds that the requisite proximate cause for the negligence claim was lacking and that the defamation claim was time-barred.

The complaint alleged that United Technologies, along with two British entities and Saudi Arabian co-conspirators, engaged in a scheme to bribe Saudi officials to facilitate the sale of Black Hawk helicopters in violation of the FCPA, constituting predicate offenses under RICO.

Status. In October 1992, defendants' motion to dismiss was denied on the grounds that the court had personal jurisdiction over all defendants and the FCPA extended to foreign individuals acting as agents for a domestic concern or issuer. 4. Citicorp International Trading Co., Inc. v. Western Oil & Refining Co., Inc., et al. (S.D.N.Y. 1991)⁴²¹

Background. Two officers of Western Oil and Refining Co., Inc., Robert and Karin Zander, entered into an agreement with a Nigerian petroleum company to permit Western to export oil from Nigeria. Western then entered into an agreement with Citicorp International Trading Co., Inc. (“CITC”), under which CITC would provide letters of credit in connection with the proposed oil transaction. In the spring of 1987, CITC failed to provide the letters of credit and the Nigerian petroleum company also failed to supply the oil. Shortly thereafter, the Zanders executed a promissory note on their behalf and on behalf of Western. After they defaulted on the note, CITC filed a suit against Western and the Zanders on August 2, 1988. The Zanders filed counterclaims against CITC, including an FCPA claim that CITC personnel unsuccessfully attempted to bribe the Nigerian petroleum company to secure time to fulfill CITC’s obligations under the agreement.

Status. The court dismissed the FCPA claim, holding that no private right of action exists under the FCPA. The court did, however, mention the possibility that the allegations could comprise a valid tortious interference with contractual relations or prospective business relationship claim. Ultimately, the court concluded that the counterclaim had not been pled with sufficient facts to sustain either of those claims.

3. Environmental Tectonics Corp., Int'l v. W.S. Kirkpatrick & Co., Inc., et al. (1990)⁴²²

Background. After defendants settled an FCPA action with the DOJ, Environmental Tectonics Corporation, International (“ETC”) filed a complaint in the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey, later amended on July 14, 1986, alleging that ETC was outbid on a contract it would otherwise have won if not for defendants’ bribery, through an intermediary, of Nigerian officials.

Status. The United States District Court for the District of New Jersey dismissed the action, holding that the act of state doctrine, barring inquiry into the acts of a foreign sovereign, precluded it. The Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit reversed and, in 1990, the Supreme Court affirmed the Court of Appeals’ decision that the act of state doctrine did not preclude the action. The Supreme Court held that the fact that a judgment might require the court to impute to foreign officials an improper motive is insufficient to invoke the act of state doctrine. The act of state doctrine, it held, is not a rule of abstention applied whenever international comity, respect for the sovereignty of foreign nations, or the avoidance of embarrassment to the Executive Branch in its conduct of foreign relations are implicated.

The case was remanded and subsequently settled that same year.

2. Lamb v. Phillip Morris, Inc., et al. (6th Cir. 1990)⁴²³

Background. On August 21, 1985, plaintiffs Billy Lamb and Carmon Willis filed a complaint against Phillip Morris, Inc. and B.A.T. Industries, PLC, alleging violations of federal antitrust laws, and later amended their complaint to add a claim under the FCPA. Plaintiffs Lamb and Willis were Kentucky tobacco growers who routinely sold tobacco to defendants, who also bought tobacco from other countries, such as Venezuela. According to the complaint, defendants' subsidiaries entered into contracts with a charity headed by the wife of the then-President of Venezuela under which the subsidiaries would make periodic donations to the charity in exchange for price controls on Venezuelan tobacco and assurances that taxes on tobacco companies would not be increased. As a result of this unlawful arrangement, plaintiffs alleged that defendants artificially depressed prices in the U.S. tobacco market.

Status. The district court dismissed plaintiffs' claim as barred by the act of state doctrine and dismissed their FCPA claim. The Sixth Circuit reversed the lower court's dismissal of plaintiffs' antitrust claims but affirmed the dismissal of the FCPA claim on the grounds that there is no implied private right of action under the FCPA.

1. Instituto Nacional de Comercializacion Agricola \(Indeca\) v. Continental Illinois Nat. Bank & Trust Co., et al. \(N.D. Ill. 1983\)⁴²⁴

Background. Instituto Nacional de Comercializacion Agricola (“Indeca”), a Guatemalan quasi-governmental entity that purchased foodstuffs on the global market, sued various defendants for breach of contract, negligence, and fraud. Indeca entered into an agreement to purchase foodstuffs from Rumux International, Inc., and retained Banco de Guatemala to issue a letter of credit. Banco subsequently engaged the services of defendant Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. to arrange for the delivery of documents from Rumux in conformity with the letter of credit. After Rumux failed to perform in accordance with its contract, Indeca brought suit to recover damages arising from Continental’s allegedly negligent and fraudulent conduct in assisting with the letter of credit.

Continental raised an affirmative defense alleging that the Indeca/Rumux contract violated the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (“FCPA”). Indeca moved to strike Continental’s FCPA affirmative defense arguing that the FCPA prohibits only U.S. companies from corrupt foreign acts and provides no private right of action. The district court denied the motion to strike, finding that it was premature at the pleading stage.

Status. The FCPA issue was not discussed in later opinions. The case terminated after appeal in 1987.

12. Meng-Lin Liu v. Siemens A.G. (S.D.N.Y. 2013)⁴²⁵

Background. On January 15, 2013, Meng-Lin Liu, a former employee of Siemens China Ltd. (“SLC”), a wholly-owned Chinese subsidiary of Siemens A.G. (“Siemens”), filed a complaint against Siemens alleging violations of the whistleblower provisions of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act. The complaint alleged that Siemens retaliated against Liu when he raised compliance issues at SLC. In particular, Liu alleged that he identified a number of instances where SLC circumvented internal FCPA controls, where it failed to conduct adequate due diligence on third parties, and where it inflated bids in order to pass funds through intermediaries to government officials. Liu alleged that when he raised the issues to senior business and compliance officials at SLC, he received a negative performance review, his job responsibilities were repeatedly scaled back, and he was ultimately told that he should not return to work for the remainder of his employment contract, which was then terminated.

Status. On October 21, 2013, the court granted Siemens’ motion to dismiss and dismissed Liu’s claims with prejudice. The court found that the Anti-Retaliation Provision protections afforded to whistleblowers by Dodd-Frank do not apply extraterritorially and, therefore, do not cover Liu. Further, the court found that an FCPA violation is not within the scope of Section 806 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, which provides that a violation must be “required or protected” by Section 806. The court discussed but did not ultimately decide whether Liu was a whistleblower under Dodd-Frank, having not disclosed the potential FCPA violations to the SEC until after his employment was terminated.

11. Khaled Asadi v. G.E. Energy \(USA\), LLC \(S.D. Tex. 2012\)⁴²⁶

Background. Plaintiff Khaled Asadi (a dual citizen of the United States and Iraq) was employed by G.E. Energy as its Country Executive for Iraq. In a complaint filed February 3, 2012, Asadi alleged that he objected to the hiring of a woman closely associated with the Senior Deputy Minister of Electricity (Iraq) to curry favor with the Ministry of Electricity while in negotiation for a Sole Source Joint Venture Contract with the Ministry. Asadi was allegedly concerned that the hire could be damaging to GE's reputation and potentially violate the FCPA, and so he raised the issue with his supervisor, and later, to GE's ombudsperson. Asadi alleged that, in direct response to his actions, Asadi's supervisor began to pressure him to step down from his position at GE. Asadi alleged that he was wrongfully terminated about one year after he first raised his concerns.

In his complaint, Asadi pleaded a cause of action against GE for Whistleblower Retaliation under the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act.

Status. GE filed a motion to dismiss, and on June 28, 2012, U.S. District Court Judge Nancy Atlas granted GE's motion. Judge Atlas noted that the definition of "whistleblower" under Dodd-Frank is an individual who provides information "to the SEC" and that because Asadi did not claim to report GE's alleged FCPA violations to the SEC but rather to his supervisor and GE's ombudsperson, Asadi "does not fit within Dodd-Frank's definition of a whistleblower." Judge Atlas also held that Dodd-Frank's Anti-Retaliation Provision does not extend to or protect Asadi's extraterritorial whistleblowing activity.

Background. In 2004, plaintiff D. Michael Jewett filed a complaint against IDT Corporation, Mount Salem Management, Ltd., and their respective directors and officers. The third amended complaint, filed on January 25, 2006, alleged employment discrimination on the basis of religion, retaliation in the form of attempting to terminate unemployment benefits, damage to plaintiff's name and intentional infliction of emotional distress. Jewett alleged that the defendants were involved in a "deal" with the President of Haiti to provide telecom services, wherein IDT would put money into an offshore account managed by Mount Salem for the President of Haiti. Jewett repeatedly expressed reservations regarding the legality of the "deal." Jewett also refused to contribute to solicitations for donations to Jewish charities that were encouraged by IDT. Plaintiff alleged that he was discharged for these reasons.

Status. On September 11, 2007, the court dismissed plaintiff's claim for abuse of process and for defamation, and dismissed retaliation claims against most individual defendants. On February 19, 2008, the court dismissed plaintiff's claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. The parties then were required to participate in mediation on October 29, 2008, which ultimately proved unsuccessful. On February 1, 2011, all claims made by the plaintiff against the remaining defendants, and all counterclaims by the defendants against the plaintiff were dismissed with prejudice.

9. Lebron v. AIG, Inc., et al. (S.D.N.Y. 2009)⁴²⁸

Background. A former employee of AIG brought an action against the company for unlawful and retaliatory termination in violation of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act (“SOX”). Kimberly Lebron had been employed by AIG as a Compliance Manager within the Legal and Compliance Department of AIG Investments when she learned about an arrangement in which a South Korean government entity, Korea Post, would invest approximately $50 million into an AIG Global Real Estate Managed Fund. In exchange for the investment, AIG would sponsor a “six week paid vacation” for an employee of Korea Post to New York and London. Lebron believed the arrangement to be a potential violation of the FCPA and reported the activity to AIG’s Global Anti-Corruption Officer. A couple weeks later, she was terminated from her position at AIG, prompting the lawsuit.

Status. On August 3, 2009, defendants filed a motion to dismiss arguing that Lebron’s suit is barred by res judicata because she already filed an administrative complaint with the Department of Labor, received an unfavorable determination on the complaint, and then failed to file an objection or request a hearing with the Department’s Chief Administrative Law Judge. In addition, the motion states Lebron failed to fulfill the jurisdictional prerequisite under SOX of informing the Administrative Law Judge prior to bringing the claim. On October 19, 2009, the court granted defendants’ motion to dismiss on the basis that the court lacked subject matter jurisdiction over Lebron’s claims because Lebron failed to exhaust her administrative remedies.

Background. An employee of General Electric Consumer and Industrial (“C & I”), a subsidiary of General Electric (“GE”), alleged that she was terminated in retaliation for reporting questionable business practices by GE in Brazil. Andrea Koeck alleged a claim for violation of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act’s whistleblower protection provision and filed a complaint with the U.S. Department of Labor. While employed at C & I, Koeck reported to the General Counsel and covered legal matters for C & I in Brazil, Chile, and Argentina. It was during this time that Koeck discovered a value added tax fraud scheme in Brazil that would expose GE to financial liability and possible criminal prosecution. In addition, in March 2006, Koeck was informed that GE and GEVISA (a GE Brazilian joint venture) were in a group of major corporations participating in a “bribery club,” involving corporations paying bribes to Brazilian politicians in exchange for the award of orders from the public sector throughout Brazil. According to Brazilian news reports, more than $20 million in bribes were paid out to more than 150 Brazilian politicians. Koeck raised the topic of the company’s potential for exposure under the FCPA, but was ultimately ignored by her superiors who assured her that the matter was being taken care of. She was later terminated from GE after filing an internal complaint that alleged retaliation by the company against her including threats of salary reduction because she had reported illegal activity.

Status. The U.S. Department of Labor dismissed Koeck’s complaint for failure to file within 90 days of the occurrence of the alleged violation. The Administrative Review Board determined that the violation occurred no later than January 18, 2007 (the date Koeck had been informed GE would be taking an adverse employment action against her) and Koeck had filed her complaint on April 23, 2007. On June 6, 2008, GE filed a civil action against Koeck, alleging that Koeck had disclosed privileged and confidential information in her administrative complaint and to the press. Koeck counterclaimed, alleging retaliation for protected “whistleblowing” activity and wrongful termination. GE filed a motion to dismiss the counterclaims on the grounds that the matter was subject to compulsory arbitration and that Koeck’s counterclaims were time-barred. The parties filed a joint stipulation, of dismissal of the entire action on January 28, 2009.

Plaintiff alleged that he suggested the payments cease and refused to cooperate in the scheme. Plaintiff alleged that as a result of his refusal to cooperate, he was demoted and given a poor performance review. On April 9, 2003, Plaintiff filed a Sarbanes-Oxley whistleblower claim. Plaintiff's complaint states multiple claims in connection with defendant's treatment of the plaintiff once plaintiff refused to cooperate.

6. Bazzetta v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. (E.D. Mich. 2005)⁴³¹

Background. David Bazzetta was a financial analyst working in the Corporate Audit department of DaimlerChrysler Corp., a Delaware corporation. On September 28, 2004, he filed a whistleblower suit against DaimlerChrysler, claiming retaliation under the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, the Americans with Disabilities Act, and state law. He alleged that DaimlerChrysler maintained secret bank accounts to bribe foreign government officials and that he was fired on a pretext in retaliation for complaining about auditing and financial improprieties related to those accounts.

Status. After the court dismissed the Sarbanes-Oxley count and the count for retaliation against public policy, the parties stipulated to a dismissal of the remaining counts with prejudice and the case was dismissed in July 2005. The terms of the settlement were not disclosed.

5. Duha v. Agrium, Inc., et al. (E.D. Mich. 2003)⁴³²

Background. On January 28, 2003, Wayne Duha filed a complaint against his former employer, Agrium Inc., alleging that Agrium unlawfully terminated his employment after he reported Agrium's Argentine subsidiary to U.S. authorities and company officials for violating the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act ("FCPA"). Agrium, a U.S. company involved in crop production services, claimed that it terminated Duha for making inappropriate jokes in an e-mail to a co-worker.

Defendants moved to dismiss on forum non conveniens grounds and Duha argued that the FCPA tilted the "public interest" factor of the forum non conveniens in favor of resolving the dispute in the United States. The district court rejected this argument, noting that the FCPA provides no private right of action, but dismissed the action on other forum non conveniens grounds.

The Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals reversed and found that the district court erred in not giving sufficient deference to the plaintiff's choice of forum and did not appropriately consider the inconvenience imposed on witnesses and parties if the suit proceeded in Argentina.

Status. The case settled on remand to the district court.

4. Depuydt v. FMC Corp. (N.D. Cal. 1995)⁴³³

Background. Gregory Depuydt accused FMC Corp., a Delaware corporation, of firing him for refusing to violate the FCPA by preparing an intra-office “rack-up” containing a bribe-inflated commission, alleging that the firing on those grounds violates public policy.

Status. The District Court granted partial summary judgment and the Court of Appeals affirmed, holding that Depuydt could have prepared the “rack-up” without violating the FCPA, since no instrumentality of interstate commerce was involved (the process was wholly internal) and he would have lacked the requisite “corrupt” intent. On remand, the case was settled in April 1995 and the case officially closed three months later.

Background. Richard D'Agostino, an employee of a Swiss subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson, Inc., a U.S. corporation, alleged that he was fired at Johnson & Johnson's behest for refusing to participate in the payment of consulting fees, which he believed were intended to bribe Swiss licensing authorities.

Status. The New Jersey Supreme Court held in 1993 that New Jersey's interest in resolving the dispute under its law was greater than Switzerland's interest, even though D'Agostino was employed in Switzerland by a Swiss company, since the claim involved an alleged FCPA violation in New Jersey, and that the claim could therefore proceed. 2. Williams v. Hall, et al.; McKay v. Ashland Oil, Inc., et al. (E.D. Ky. 1988)⁴³⁵

Background. Harry Williams and Bill McKay, former officers of Ashland Oil, Inc., a U.S. corporation, brought actions alleging wrongful discharge and RICO violations against Ashland Oil. Plaintiffs alleged that Ashland Oil paid bribes to officials in Oman and Abu Dhabi to secure crude oil procurement contracts in violation of the FCPA. Plaintiffs further alleged that when they refused to participate in these illegal activities and to cooperate in the cover-up, they were discharged from their employment. The court held plaintiffs had standing to bring a civil RICO suit if they could show their terminations were overt acts done in furtherance of a conspiracy to violate RICO.

Status. On June 10, 1988, a jury awarded Williams and McKay $7.7 million and $14.4 million, respectively. These amounts were tripled to a total of $69.5 million because of a finding that Ashland Oil had violated RICO. In addition, Ashland Oil and its chairman, John Hall, were assessed $3 million in punitive damages for their handling of the matter. Ashland Oil intended to appeal the decision but announced a settlement of $25 million with plaintiffs in August 1988.

Status. The court dismissed Pratt's complaint, holding that no contravention of clearly mandated public policy, an essential element of a claim of retaliatory discharge, had occurred since the FCPA is a federal, rather than state, law. On November 10, 1986, the Appellate Court of Illinois affirmed the lower court's dismissal, and the Supreme Court of Illinois refused to grant Pratt's petition for leave to appeal.

Background. On December 18, 2009, Aluminium Bahrain B.S.C. (“Alba”), a company majority-owned by the government of Bahrain, filed a complaint alleging that Sojitz Corporation and its U.S. subsidiary Sojitz Corporation of America (collectively “Sojitz”) perpetrated fraud on Alba by illegally bribing Alba officials and employees to obtain substantial illegitimate discounts on purchases of aluminum. The plaintiff makes RICO, fraud, and conspiracy claims. The plaintiff alleges Sojitz paid more than $14.8 million to two Alba employees from 1993 to 2006 to ensure discounts on aluminum purchases.

Status. The case was stayed on June 9, 2010 following a motion to intervene by the United States for the purpose of staying discovery pending an investigation into the defendants and possible criminal prosecution for violation of the FCPA.

On September 28, 2012, the defendants notified the court that the parties had agreed to settle their disputes out of court and requested for an extension of the stay to draft the settlement agreement. Background. On June 27, 2008, a complaint was filed by the Republic of Iraq against companies it alleges participated in a conspiracy to corrupt the U.N. Oil-for-Food Program. The plaintiff claims the defendants' actions violate RICO, the FCPA, the Money Laundering Control Act, and the Robinson Patman Act among other laws.

Status. On March 3, 2011, the court denied a motion to compel arbitration filed by the plaintiff, which the plaintiff appealed. On July 29, 2011, plaintiff and defendant Avio S.P.A. stipulated and agreed that Avio S.P.A. be dismissed from the action with prejudice.

4. Aluminum Bahrain B.S.C. v. Alcoa, Inc., Alcoa World Alumina LLC, William Rice, and Victor Dahdaleh (W.D. Pa. 2008)⁴³⁹

Background. On February 27, 2008, Aluminum Bahrain B.S.C. (“Alba”), a company majority-owned by the government of Bahrain, filed a complaint alleging that Alcoa, Inc. (“Alcoa”), a corporate officer of Alcoa, and an agent of Alcoa perpetrated fraud on Alba, through a conspiracy of illegally bribing Alba officials, to induce Alba to cede a controlling interest in the company that principally owns it (Bahrain Mumtalakat Holding Co., B.S.C.) to Alcoa and to overpay for aluminum. The plaintiff alleged that it paid $2 billion in overcharges over a two year period, that this money was funneled through shell companies controlled by Victor Dahdaleh, as an agent of Alcoa, and that a portion of this money was then used to bribe Alba officials in return for additional supply contracts. On February 28, 2008, the case was designated for placement into the District Courts’ Alternative Dispute Resolution program. On February 29, 2008, the plaintiff was instructed to file a RICO case statement. On March 20, 2008, there was an unopposed motion for the United States to intervene. In the interim, federal authorities in the United States launched their own investigation into whether Alcoa and its executives and agents violated the FCPA and mail and wire fraud statutes and this litigation was stayed on March 27, 2008 in light of that criminal investigation.

Status. On November 8, 2011, the case was re-opened, and on November 28, 2011, a first amended complaint was filed against the same defendants. The amended complaint alleges violations of federal civil RICO, conspiracy to violate federal civil RICO, fraud, and conspiracy to defraud.

On October 11, 2012, the claims against defendants Alcoa Inc., Alcoa World Alumina LLC, and William Rice were dismissed with prejudice. On November 20, 2012, the court ordered that the case be administratively closed while discovery was stayed and defendant Victor Dahdaleh petitioned for an interlocutory appeal. On January 25, 2013, Dahdaleh’s petition for an interlocutory appeal was denied by the Third Circuit. On July 9, 2013, the District Court continued the discovery stay until Dahdaleh’s November 4, 2013 criminal trial in the United Kingdom is complete.

2. World Duty Free Co. v. The Republic of Kenya⁴⁴¹

Background. The contract was signed between Kenya and a company called “the House of Perfume” in April 1989 and amended in May 1990 to substitute World Duty Free Company Limited, a U.K. corporation that operates duty free shops in international airports.

Status. In the arbitral decision, the tribunal found that a bribe had been paid to the former Kenyan President Daniel arap Moi (¶ 136) and that a contract secured by bribery is not enforceable as it violates international public policy (¶ 157). The tribunal found that Nasir Ibrahim Ali, former Chief Executive Officer of the House of Perfume had wired $2 million in cash as a “personal donation” for President arap Moi to obtain a contract to build duty free shops in Kenya. Of the $2 million, $500,000 cash was brought in a suitcase to the President’s residence and left in a corner of the meeting room. During meetings, the money was removed and replaced with fresh corn. In 1992, World Duty Free was implicated in the Goldenberg International scandal in Kenya, in which money was illegally channeled into arap Moi’s re-election campaign. World Duty Free claimed it was unwittingly used in the fraud and that the government then undertook a process of expropriating World Duty Free’s assets to stop it from cooperating in the prosecution of the case. World Duty Free raised the issue of the bribe and Kenya conceded this fact as a complete defense to enforcing the contract. The tribunal found that even though corruption may be widespread in a country and business may be impossible without paying bribes, a tribunal will not condone such behavior (¶ 156). The tribunal found that a bribe is not a transaction severable from the contract (¶ 174). According to the tribunal, the fact that Kenya had not prosecuted its former President was discouraging but irrelevant (¶¶ 180–181).

1. Adler, et al. v. Federal Republic of Nigeria, et al. (9th Cir. 2000)⁴⁴²

Background. In May 1994, James E. Adler and El Surtidor Del Hogar, S.A. de C.V., a Mexican corporation controlled by Adler, filed a complaint against the Federal Republic of Nigeria, the Central Bank of Nigeria (“CBN”), the Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation, and seventeen Nigerian government officials. The complaint alleged fraud, conspiracy to commit fraud, and negligence, and sought the recovery of money paid by plaintiffs to bribe Nigerian officials.

In August 1992, Adler was solicited by Nigerian government officials to engage in a scheme to have stolen government funds secretly paid to the officials. The Nigerian counterparty requested that Adler, among other things, send signed and stamped copies of El Surtidor letterhead and pro forma invoices and the number to a foreign bank account where $130 million could be deposited. Adler was informed that in exchange for these services, he would earn a 40% commission. When defendants failed to pay Adler, he paid a total of $5,180,000 in bribes to Nigerian government officials to induce performance of the agreement.

The defendants argued that their activities were protected by the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (“FSIA”), but the district court ruled that these activities were within the commercial activity exception to the FSIA. After a bench trial, the district court found, among other things, that Adler paid bribes to Nigerian officials in violation of California bribery law and the FCPA and that the unclean hands doctrine barred Adler from recovering under the agreement.

Status. In 2000, the Ninth Circuit upheld the lower court’s determination.

26. Williams v. Nuti et al. (N.D. Ga. 2013)⁴⁴³

Background. On April 26, 2013, plaintiff Sharon Williams filed a shareholder derivative suit on behalf of nominal defendant NCR Corporation against defendant William Nuti and other members of the NCR Board of Directors and executive officers asserting breach of fiduciary duty. Among other allegations, Williams claimed that the defendants knowingly violated the FCPA in China, condoning gift arrangements to officials at state-controlled Chinese banks to obtain and retain business in China. In addition, NCR allegedly hired the sister of a key Omani governmental decision-maker in 2004 to acquire a $17.3 million contract with the state-controlled telecommunications company, Omantel. Further, NCR allegedly paid for trips for government officials of various Middle East countries and provided gifts to Omantel officials. The allegations are based on statements and documents presented by a whistleblower to the Wall Street Journal, following which NCR engaged in an internal investigation and cooperated with the DOJ and SEC's requests and subpoenas regarding the whistleblower's FCPA allegations. Pointing to NCR's disclosure that it has spent $4 million in connection with the FCPA and other internal investigations, Williams demanded that the court award NCR the amount of damages sustained by NCR as a result of the defendants' breaches of fiduciary duties, as well as reimbursement of costs involved in the derivative suit.

Status. On October 24, 2013, the court granted defendants' motion to stay for a period not exceeding 90 days, at the end of which Williams can file an amended complaint within seven days.

25. The George Leon Family Trust v. Coleman, et al. (D.N.J. 2012)⁴⁴⁴

Background. On July 13, 2012, plaintiff the George Leon Family Trust (“the Trust”) filed a shareholder derivative suit against nominal defendant Johnson & Johnson, Inc., its Board of Directors, and several of its senior executives for breach of fiduciary duty, corporate waste, unjust enrichment, and violations of federal securities laws.

Plaintiffs alleged, inter alia, that the Board had knowledge of actual or potential violations of the FCPA, including that J&J paid kickbacks to the government of Iraq; and that J&J employees and agents routinely paid bribes to public doctors in Greece who selected J&J surgical implants for their patients.

Plaintiffs’ allegations were partially based on J&J’s settlements with the DOJ and SEC relating to FCPA allegations. In April of 2011, J&J settled with the SEC to resolve charges that the company violated the FCPA when its subsidiaries bribed public doctors in several European countries (including Greece) and paid kickbacks to Iraq to illegally obtain business. Johnson & Johnson consented to the entry of a court order permanently enjoining it from future violations of Sections 30A, 13(b)(2)(A), and 13(b)(2)(B) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, ordering it to pay $38,227,826 in disgorgement and $10,438,490 in prejudgment interest, and ordering it to comply with certain FCPA compliance program. That same month, a parallel criminal case was brought by the Department of Justice in which the company acknowledged wrongdoing and agreed to pay a $21,400,000 criminal penalty as part of a deferred prosecution agreement.

Status. The case had been stayed pending resolution of an internal investigation pursuant to a shareholder demand plaintiff made on the Board of Directors. On August 15, 2013, the Court ordered that J&J had thirty days to respond to the complaint. J&J filed a motion to dismiss or, in the alternative, a motion for summary judgment on August 16, 2013 which was joined by the individual defendants. Plaintiffs filed an amended complaint on October 7, 2013 that reflected a report made by independent counsel retained by the J&J Board of Directors and the Board’s refusal of the Plaintiffs’ demand to pursue the claims. J&J filed a motion to dismiss or, in the alternative, a motion for summary judgment, joined by the individual defendants, on November 15, 2013. Plaintiffs are due to file their opposition on or before December 30, 2013 and defendants will file their reply on or before January 27, 2014.

24. Catherine Rubery v. Kleinfeld, et al. (W.D. Pa. 2012)⁴⁴⁵

Background. On June 20, 2012, plaintiff Catherine Rubery filed a shareholder derivative suit against nominal defendant Alcoa Inc. against certain of its officers and directors, seeking to remedy defendants' alleged breach of fiduciary duty and waste of corporate assets.

In February 2008, Aluminium Bahrain, B.S.C. ("Alba," owned by the Government of Bahrain) sued Alcoa for violations of RICO, conspiracy to violate RICO, civil conspiracy, and fraud. The complaint in that case alleged that Alcoa and its employees and agents illegally bribed officers of Alba and government officials in Bahrain to force Alba to obtain various business advantages. Soon after Alba filed its complaint, the DOJ began its own criminal investigation into whether Alcoa violated the FCPA.

Plaintiff alleges that in March 2008, she demanded that the company conduct an investigation into Alba's allegations to determine which employees, officers, or directors were responsible for the illegal bribery scheme. However, the Board allegedly told Plaintiff that it would only consider her demand after the DOJ and Alcoa finished their own investigations.

Background. Wal-Mart is currently subject to an FCPA investigation after an exposé was published in the New York Times on April 21, 2012 regarding alleged foreign bribery by senior Wal-Mart managers in Mexico. Several lawsuits have been filed in the following jurisdictions: Western District of Arkansas (filed 2012), Eastern District of Arkansas (filed 2012), and Delaware Court of Chancery (filed 2012). The lawsuits allege that the officers and directors of Wal-Mart were intentionally derelict and/or consciously disregarded their fiduciary duties of loyalty, good faith, candor and good trust to the company by (1) permitting the operation of a widespread scheme to bribe Mexican officials, and (2) by failing to adequately and properly investigate such bribery following its disclosure. The lawsuits also allege that the directors and officers violated Sections 14(a) and 29(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. The plaintiffs seek to recover for Wal-Mart and its shareholders hundreds of millions of dollars of financial and reputational damages caused by the defendants' breach of their fiduciary duties and violations of the Securities Exchange Act.

Status. In Richman v. Alvarez, the court issued an order to stay the proceedings pending resolution of the state court cases in Delaware. The plaintiffs are appealing that order. *Emory v. Background. On August 29, 2011, plaintiffs M.J. Copeland and Leslie Katz filed separate shareholder derivative suits against nominal defendant Johnson & Johnson, Inc., its Executive Committee, and several of its senior executives for breach of fiduciary duties and violations of federal laws and regulations. The two cases were consolidated under the Copeland heading on November 21, 2011. Plaintiffs' claims arise from alleged systemic failures of corporate governance and illegal conduct on the part of current and former senior officers and directors that stems from violations of the FCPA, violations of the federal False Claims Act, and violations of federal regulations, as well as the filing of false and misleading information with the SEC. Plaintiffs cited damage to the company's reputation and large financial losses caused by the Company's investigations of its violations, defense of lawsuits, and payment of large fines. In April of 2011, Johnson & Johnson settled with the SEC to resolve charges that the company violated the FCPA when its subsidiaries bribed public doctors in several European countries and paid kickbacks to Iraq to illegally obtain business. Background. On August 10, 2011, Iron Workers' Mid-South Pension Fund ("the Pension Fund") filed a shareholder derivative complaint on behalf of News Corporation ("News Corp."), against Rupert Murdoch and other current and former officers and directors of News Corp., alleging violations of federal securities law and state law, including breach of fiduciary duty, waste of corporate assets, and unjust enrichment. The lawsuit grew from allegations of the use of illegal information-gathering methods and bribes to British police officers by employees of News of the World, a newspaper published by News International Limited, News Corp.'s U.K. publishing division. The Pension Fund alleges that the defendants breached their fiduciary duties by causing or allowing News Corp. to engage in this unlawful conduct and that News Corp. has suffered, and will continue to suffer, damages due to the legal proceedings and investigations begun as a result of it.

Status. Defendants filed a motion to stay this action (as well as two related actions) pending resolution of a related action in Delaware Chancery Court. On September 18, 2012, the Court denied defendants' motion to stay. 19. Freuler v. Parker, et al. (S.D. Tex. 2010)⁴⁵⁷

Background. On June 30, 2011, the United States District Court for the Southern District of Texas dismissed plaintiff Douglas Freuler's first amended complaint derivatively filed on behalf of nominal defendant Parker Drilling Company, against certain current directors and officers of Parker Drilling. Plaintiff alleged that defendants breached their fiduciary duties through, inter alia, authorizing the company to engage in business practices that may have violated the FCPA and failing to establish and maintain a system of adequate internal controls to prevent the alleged FCPA violations. Plaintiff filed the action after Parker Drilling disclosed that SEC and DOJ investigations had identified potential non-compliance with the FCPA in connection with Parker Drilling's operations in Kazakhstan and Nigeria.

Status. With leave of the Court, plaintiff filed a second amended complaint asserting similar allegations and seeking damages and an injunction to require Parker Drilling to appoint a corporate monitor to implement and oversee a system of internal controls. On August 31, 2011, defendants moved to dismiss plaintiff's second amended complaint. On March 14, 2012, the motion was granted and the action was dismissed. On April 12, 2012, plaintiff filed a notice of appeal to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. Background. On April 27, 2011, plaintiff Roger Walbrun filed a shareholder's derivative action on behalf of nominal defendant Hercules Offshore, Inc., against directors and officers of the company for breach of fiduciary duty, abuse of control, waste of corporate assets, and unjust enrichment. Hercules Offshore is a global provider of offshore contract drilling, liftboat, and inland barge services. Walbrun alleges that Hercules Offshore conducted business in foreign countries, including countries perceived as having less-developed legal and regulatory frameworks, without implementing the internal controls and accounting systems necessary to comply with the FCPA. Hercules Offshore disclosed in its SEC filings that it had received a subpoena from the SEC relating to the SEC's investigation into possible violations of the securities laws, including violations of the FCPA, and that certain of Hercules Offshore's activities were under review by the DOJ. According to the plaintiff, Hercules Offshore's stock price dropped as a result of the defendants' actions, and it will incur further costs related to ongoing investigations into the alleged FCPA violations.

Status. Defendant's motion to dismiss was granted on February 10, 2012.

Background. On March 9, 2011, and April 18, 2011, plaintiffs Benjamin Kohanim, Ira J. Gaines, Sunshine Wire and Cable Defined Benefit Pension Plan Trust and Peachtree Mortgage Ltd. filed two complaints on behalf of nominal defendant Las Vegas Sands (“LVS”) against its current board of directors (“Board”), alleging breach of fiduciary duty, abuse of control, gross mismanagement, and aiding abetting breaches of fiduciary duty. The allegations were in connection with LVS’s operations in the Chinese administrative region of Macau. Specifically, plaintiffs alleged that Chairman and CEO, Sheldon Adelson, directed LVS employees to engage in practices that violated the FCPA, including the employment of a foreign government official. LVS disclosed in its 2011 SEC filings that it had been subpoenaed to produce documents relating to its compliance with the FCPA and that the DOJ had notified LVS that it was conducting a similar investigation. Plaintiffs alleged its claims derived from conduct forming the basis of a breach of contract claim filed against LVS on October 10, 2010, by its former head of Macau operations, Steven Jacobs. Plaintiffs alleged the Board failed to take steps to ensure that Macao operations were conducted in accordance with all relevant regulations, causing the SEC, DOJ, and FBI to conduct investigations into LVS. Plaintiffs further alleged that the Hong Kong Securities and Futures Commission was conducting an investigation into LVS’s Chinese subsidiary, Sands China Ltd.

On June 8, 2011, the Court consolidated the actions, and on July 25, 2011, plaintiffs filed their amended consolidated complaint. On September 8, 2011, nominal defendant LVS and individual defendants Schwartz, Leven, Ader, Siegel, and Koo, moved to stay all proceedings for 120 days pending completion of an investigation by a special litigation committee (“SLC”) of independent and disinterested directors.

Status. On October 10, 2011, the Court held a hearing on the motion to stay the action pending investigation by the SLC. The Court noted that counsel had contacted chambers and that stated parties would be filing a stipulation. Judge Denton ordered the motion off-calendar. On October 31, 2012 the defendants filed a motion to dismiss. On November 29, 2012 the plaintiffs filed their response and on December 13, 2012 the defendants filed their reply. Background. On February 16, 2011, plaintiff Jonathan Strong filed a shareholder derivative action on behalf of nominal defendant Tidewater Inc. against its officers and directors. The complaint alleged that the defendants knew or recklessly disregarded the fact that its employees, representatives, agents, and contractors were paying, had paid, or had offered to pay bribes to Azerbaijani and Nigerian government officials, in exchange for obtaining favorable treatment for Tidewater. Specifically, Strong alleged that the defendants authorized improper payments to Tidewater employees, representatives, agents, and contractors or allowed them to proceed with the transactions on Tidewater's behalf.

Status. On August 31, 2011, the defendants filed a motion to dismiss in the United States District Court, Eastern District of Louisiana. On October 11, 2011, the plaintiff filed a memorandum in opposition to defendants' motion to dismiss. Subsequently, on October 13, 2011, the defendants submitted a reply memorandum of law in support of their motion to dismiss.

The motion to dismiss was granted on July 2, 2012. The court dismissed the case without prejudice to the plaintiff's ability to move for leave to amend the complaint within 20 days. Plaintiff has moved to stay the proceedings pending the resolution of his litigation demand on the Tidewater Board.

Background. On August 31, 2010, Douglas Freuler brought a derivative shareholder action against officers and members of the Board of Directors of Parker Drilling Company for breach of fiduciary duty, abuse of control, gross mismanagement, waste of corporate assets, and unjust enrichment. Parker, a provider of on-land and offshore drilling services, has disclosed in its SEC filings that the DOJ and SEC identified issues relating to potential non-compliance with laws and regulations, including the FCPA, with respect to Parker's operations in Kazakhstan and Nigeria. Freuler alleges that the defendants allowed Parker to operate in Nigeria and Kazakhstan without an adequate system of internal controls and caused or allowed Parker to pay bribes and kickbacks in violation of the FCPA. According to Freuler, Parker has incurred over $20 million in investigation-related expenses and that amount is expected to increase substantially.

Status. On June 30, 2011, the court granted the defendants' motions to dismiss without prejudice, and the plaintiff was granted leave to file an amended complaint. On July 20, 2011, the plaintiff filed a second amended complaint against all defendants. On August 31, 2011, defendants moved to dismiss plaintiff's second amended complaint. Background. Plaintiffs allege the defendants failed to implement and oversee Avon's compliance with the FCPA and caused substantial losses beginning no later than February 2006 and continuing to the present. Background. On October 14, 2009, Kyle Arnold brought a derivative shareholder action against eight former and current directors and officers of Pride International, Inc. for breach of fiduciary duty. Pride, a Houston-based offshore drilling operator, had disclosed in its SEC filings that possible violations of the FCPA were found in its operations in several countries in Latin America and Africa, as well as in Saudi Arabia and Kazakhstan. Arnold alleged that defendants breached their fiduciary duties by knowingly causing or allowing Pride to violate the FCPA and for failing to make a good faith effort to correct or prevent the misconduct when they first became aware of such misconduct. Arnold further alleged that the breaches resulted in significant damages in excess of millions of dollars. This action followed a demand Arnold made on Pride's Board of Directors on June 15, 2009. According to Arnold, there is no indication that Pride intended to take any action to review the issues raised in the demand.

10. Policemen and Firemen Retirement System of the City of Detroit v. Halliburton Company and KBR, Inc. (S.D. Tex. 2009)⁴⁶⁸

Background. In May 2009, the Policemen and Firemen Retirement System of the City of Detroit filed a shareholder derivative suit in Texas state court against Halliburton and KBR, Inc. and directors of those companies. The case was removed to federal court in the Southern District of Texas. The plaintiff alleges that Halliburton and its former subsidiary KBR have “operated as a criminal enterprise for the better part of decade,” and that the failure to establish proper internal controls at KBR enabled KBR and its employees to engage in grave illegal conduct including “bribery, gang rape, human trafficking, illegal operations in Iran, mishandling of toxic materials, and systematic overbilling.” With respect to bribery, the complaint references KBR’s February 2009 guilty plea to FCPA charges stemming from the bribery of Nigerian officials, as well as a series of other incidents in which KBR employees were either confirmed or alleged to have been involved in kickback schemes. KBR has admitted to bribing Nigerian officials to obtain contracts worth $6 billion to build liquefied natural gas facilities at Bonny Island, Nigeria. As part of its FCPA plea agreement, KBR agreed to pay $402 million in fines and to implement a compliance program. The complaint alleges that the FCPA violations are evidence of lack of proper corporate oversight subjecting defendants to derivative liability.

Status. The action was removed by defendants from the District Court of Harris County, Texas to the United State District Court for the Southern District of Texas. The defendants then filed a motion to dismiss while the plaintiff filed a motion to remand back to state court. Plaintiff’s motion to remand was granted on September 8, 2009 and the action was remanded to the District Court of Harris County, Texas.

Background. Plaintiffs filed a derivative shareholder action on behalf of nominal defendant Baker Hughes Incorporated alleging breaches of fiduciary duties against certain of its directors and officers, including several members of the Company's Audit & Ethics Committee, Governance Committee, and Finance Committee. The plaintiffs alleged that the Baker Hughes failed to implement policies and controls to ensure the Baker Hughes' compliance with the FCPA following a 2001 Cease and Desist Order agreed to between the SEC and the Company, which ultimately resulted in $44 million being paid by Baker Hughes to settle charges with the SEC.

Status. Final judgment was issued on May 26, 2009, dismissing the action based on the plaintiffs' failure to make demand on the Baker Hughes' board of directors prior to filing an action court. Background. On May 6, 2008, plaintiffs filed a shareholder derivative action, along with a motion for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction, alleging a breach of fiduciary duty, abuse of control, corporate waste, unjust enrichment, and gross mismanagement. The case was filed against the entire Alcoa Board of Directors as well as certain senior executives and agents, alleging that the defendants breached their fiduciary duties by participating in or failing to prevent the misconduct alleged in the main Alba case (Aluminum Bahrain B.S.C. v. Alcoa, Inc., Alcoa World Alumina LLC, William Rice, and Victor Dahdaleh). Plaintiffs did not make a demand on Alcoa's Board of Directors prior to commencing the action. After it had filed suit, plaintiffs notified Alcoa and in turn Alcoa sent a letter to plaintiffs indicating that an independent investigation was already being conducted by Baker & McKenzie, in coordination with a DOJ investigation.

Status. On May 27, 2008, the court denied the plaintiffs' motion for a temporary restraining order on the grounds plaintiffs had failed to establish irreparable harm. The complaint alleges that defendants failed to ensure that FARO maintained adequate internal controls to prevent FARO from materially overstating its financial results by improperly valuing its inventory, recording S&A expenses related to sales commissions, and booking revenue derived from improper payments under the FCPA. In addition, plaintiff alleges that defendants were aware of FARO's unlawful payments regarding foreign sales activities in China, which plaintiff claims caused FARO to inflate its financial results in 2004 and 2005, and that they failed to make a good faith effort to correct the company's "improper business practices," including FCPA violations, or to prevent their recurrence. Plaintiff claims that the defendants sold substantial portions of their common stock when they knew that FARO's financial statements were materially inflated.

Plaintiffs alleged that, inter alia, defendants violated the books and records provisions of the FCPA.

Status. The court dismissed the FCPA claim on the basis that no private right of action could be implied under the books and records provisions and that those provisions were intended to provide recordkeeping obligations for regulated corporations. The court held that the language, legislative history, and purposes of the FCPA, as well as the availability of traditional state court remedies, combined to demonstrate that Congress did not intend for such a private right of action.

1. In re Mark Allen Kalisch (Bkrcty. S.D.N.Y. 2006)⁴⁷⁸
In re Mayra Diaz Kalisch (Bkrcty. S.D.N.Y. 2006)⁴⁷⁹

Background. On September 6, 2006, a complaint was filed in bankruptcy court by Mark Allen Kalisch, the debtor, against Maple Trade Finance Corporation, the creditor. The complaint states that the debtor received a loan from the creditor to finance diamond mining in Brazil, and that the venture involved the payment of bribes in violation of the FCPA. The scheme to secure government cooperation was ultimately unsuccessful, the diamond mining venture failed, and debtor defaulted on the loan. Debtor sought a declaration that would bar the creditor from enforcing a security interest in apartments owned by the debtor because the creditor was complicit in the illegal diamond mining venture. On February 15, 2007, Mayra Diaz Kalisch, the wife of Mark Allen Kalisch, filed a complaint seeking a declaration that she owned the apartments with her husband and requesting that the court impose a constructive trust. Additionally, Mayra Diaz Kalisch claimed that Maple Trade's security interest, encumbrance, or lien on the apartments should be voided because, inter alia, the loan agreement between Mark Allen Kalisch and Maple Trade had an illegal or unlawful purpose and thus Maple Trade had unclean hands. The two proceedings were consolidated.

Status. The creditor filed a motion to dismiss on October 10, 2006 based on the theory that if debtor's contentions were all true, his own misconduct would bar relief. On May 30, 2007, the court denied the creditor's motion to dismiss. A trial was held from July 28, 2008 to August 6, 2008 in front of a Bankruptcy Judge in the Southern District of New York. The Judge ordered post-trial briefing on issues including the corporate structure of the debtor and creditor, the existence of additional creditors, and whether the creditor became part of an illegal enterprise. On December 31, 2008, the court granted judgment in favor of Maple Trade. On January 26, 2009, Mayra Kalisch appealed the Bankruptcy Court's December 31, 2008 decision to the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York. On September 9, 2009, that court entered an order affirming the Bankruptcy Court's judgment.

H. Forfeiture Cases

1. United States v. All Assets Held in the Name of Zasz Trading and Consulting PTE Ltd. (D.D.C. 2009)⁴⁸⁰

Background. On January 8, 2009, the U.S. government filed a civil forfeiture action seeking the forfeiture of approximately $2,988,249 in assets, which represent illicit proceeds derived or traceable to corruption offenses involving the bribery of Bangladeshi government officials and their family members. The assets include bank accounts in Singapore controlled by two business consultants who were hired by Siemens AG to facilitate bribes in Bangladesh. Siemens has admitted participating in a bribery scheme in Bangladesh to secure a government contract to provide digital cellular phone service. According to the complaint, Siemens would transfer money to the business consultants' accounts via intermediaries, and the consultants would then use the accounts to make payments to Bangladeshi officials at the direction of Siemens personnel. An amended complaint was filed in July 2009 to reflect updated information regarding the relevant bank accounts and account numbers.

Status. On April 7, 2010, the court granted default judgment against the defendants and ordered forfeiture of the assets to the United States.

I. Other Cases

1. Watts Water Technologies, Inc. v. Sidley Austin, LLP⁴⁸¹

Background. In October 2011, Watts Water Technologies, Inc. agreed to disgorgement, prejudgment interest, and fines of nearly $3.8 million to settle a civil enforcement action brought by the SEC, regarding allegedly corrupt conduct by its Chinese subsidiary, Watts Valve Changsha Co. Ltd.

Sidley Austin, LLP, a New York law firm, vetted Watts Water's acquisition of its Chinese subsidiary in 2005. However, according to the malpractice action filed by Watts Water on June 6, 2012, Sidley Austin failed to inform the company about potential corruption issues even though their review had uncovered a suspicious document detailing the company's written policy of paying kickbacks to Chinese government officials in order to secure government contracts. In its complaint, Watts Waters alleged professional negligence, breach of contract, and negligent misrepresentation.

Status. Sidley Austin filed a motion for summary judgment, which was denied in August 2012. Sidley then filed a motion to dismiss later that month, saying that dismissal was warranted because Watts Water's claims "depend on a defective legal theory and because multiple bars appear on the face of the Complaint and in the documents on which the Watts' claims depend."

On November 5, 2012, the parties filed a joint stipulation for dismissal with prejudice, giving no explanation as to why the suit was dismissed. It is unclear if the parties reached any resolution not disclosed in court.

See SEC Digest Number D-101.
